ARGENTINA SEEKS FURTHER AMENDS FROM GERMANY

Expulsion of Luxburg Has Not Closed the Incident, Says Foreign Minister.

EXPECTS ENERGETIC ACTION

STOPS BUENOS AIRES RADIO

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 16.—Foreign Minister Pueyrredon informed The Associated Press today that he was satisfied that the expulsion of Count von Luxburg, the German Minister to Argentina, had not closed the incident growing out of the telegrams the Minister sent to Berlin through the Swedish legation here.

The Minister said he would not grant the request of the Senate to explain the situation at a secret session tomorrow, as the Government thought it would be imprudent to discuss the matter as it now stood. He explained also that he discussed the recent German negotiations at a supposedly secret session of the Senate, and that Count von Luxburg cabled his remarks to Berlin a few days later.

Minister Pueyrredon declared that the Argentine Government intended to act energetically, but not precipitately, in upholding the honor of the republic and to close the present incident favorably.

The Argentine Government has sent cablegrams to Dr. Luis B. Molina, the Minister at Berlin, concerning the negotiations, but no official response has been received. The Foreign Minister believes the delay is due to difficulties of transmission and the censorship. The Argentine Government has not received a request from the German Government for a safe conduct for Count von Luxburg.

The Foreign Minister said he believed that Germany would make concessions to retain the friendship of Argentina, but explained that friendship between the two countries would end unless the republic obtained the assurances and concessions desired.

The German wireless service, consisting largely of messages from the semi-official Overseas News Agency, which was sent to the United States through the Sayville, L. I., station before the entrance of the United States into the war, is distributed from Nauen. It has been reported on several occasions since the United States and Germany severed relations that information was being sent to Germany by wireless from South America.

ARGENTINA'S NOTE IN BERLIN.

Minister Presents Message on Ousting of German Envoy.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—The Argentine Minister handed a note to the German Foreign Office yesterday in the name of his Government, announcing that Count von Luxburg had ceased to be persona grata as the German Minister at Buenos Aires, and consequently had received his passports, according to a Reuter dispatch from Amsterdam, quoting a Berlin telegram.

The Minister made it plain, however, that this measure was directed exclusively against Count von Luxburg personally.

A semi-official cable message received at Amsterdam says a dispatch to Reuter's, Limited, reads:

"An alleged report by the German Minister to Mexico concerning the Swedish Chargé d'Affaires published by the American State Department is unknown in Berlin official quarters."

BERLIN, Saturday, Sept. 15, (via London, Sept. 16.)—The German Foreign Office is still without direct news from Count von Luxburg at Buenos Aires, and is endeavoring to reach the Minister through the Argentine Legation here.

PAPERS CRITICISED LUXBURG.

Suppression of Three in Berlin Was Probably for Disobeying Orders.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 16.—The reasons for the suppression of the Deutsche Tageszeitung, the Freisinnige Zeitung, and the Boersen Zeitung most likely is that they failed to support the Government in the Luxburg affair.

The Government obviously instructed papers to condemn the Count and explain his words away. This the three journals omitted to do, the Deutsche Tageszeitung rather approving of the Count and making its offense probably worse by suggesting that the naval authorities allowed themselves to be influenced in the conduct of U-boat warfare by political conditions.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 16. — The Pan German newspapers, which have taken a longer time than the rest of the German press to digest Count Luxburg's famous dispatches to the German Foreign Office through the Swedish Legation in Argentina, complain of the Count's lack of discretion and caution, and, indeed appear to be very cross with every one concerned.

The Tägliche Rundschau of Berlin says it was not absolutely necessary for

'FOOD WILL WIN WAR,' IS CAMPAIGN SLOGAN

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—A nation-wide advertising campaign is being carried on by the Food Administration, without cost, in co-operation with advertising companies, the Treasury Department, municipal authorities and electric light companies. The slogan adopted is, "Food Will Win the War—Don't Waste It," and this message soon will appear on posters and electric light signs in all of the larger cities.

The Federal and municipal authorities throughout the country have consented to the use of public buildings on which to set up the display signs, and in most instances the post offices and city hall buildings will be selected. The electric light companies are installing the signs and furnishing the power with which to light them without compensation.

Trenton, N. J., was the first city to erect signs on Post Office and city hall, and bulletin boards and electric signs are being installed now on the public buildings in Philadelphia. Plans have been perfected also for installations in New York.

SABOTAGE PERIL MENACES ITALY

Dock Laborers Refuse to Unload Grain and Political Crisis Is Forecast.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MILAN, Sept. 16.—The Corriere della Sera learns from Rome that, in consequence of grave developments in the internal situation, an extraordinary meeting of the cabinet was urgently summoned for last night when five ministers, foreseeing nothing abnormal, had already quit the capitol for week-end holidays.

Among other deplorable incidents, says the newspaper, dock laborers at Civita Vecchia are apparently initiating a new form of anti-war sabotage. They bluntly refused to unload urgently required cargoes of grain, which had arrived in that port on vessels which had experienced an exciting chase through the zone infested with submarines.

Promulgation of a decree of exceptional and far-reaching importance was expected later in the day.

SAN FRANCISCO FACES BIG IRON STRIKE TODAY

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 16.—Twenty-four thousand members of the San Francisco Iron Trades Council, employed mainly on Government shipbuilding contracts, it is announced tonight, will go on strike tomorrow for an increase in wages.

The strike call resulted from the failure of a series of conferences today between the leaders of the workmen and the representatives of the employers to arrive at a satisfactory settlement at issue.

A final attempt to prevent the strike was made at a meeting proposed by James L. Ackerson, representing the Federal Shipping Board. R. W. Burton, president of the Iron Trades council, said a postponement of the walkout was impossible. The strike order calls upon all men to report for work as usual and at 9 o'clock to walk out, if no agreement has been reached.

PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 16.—Eleven wooden shipbuilding plants here and at other ports nearby, tied up Saturday by a strike of their employes, will try to resume operations Monday, according to announcement made today by owners, who declared that there would be no recognition of the closed shop, for which the unions are contending.

WAGE SCALE REVISED FOR THE NAVY YARDS

Committee's Changes Give Increase to All Grades of Labor —For Arsenals Also.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—The Navy Yards and Arsenals Wage Committee, made up of representatives of the Departments of War, Navy, and Labor, has completed its revision of the scale of wages paid in arsenals and navy yards, and the new scale will go into effect as soon as the new pay rolls can be prepared. The revision is said to make an average increase in maximum rates of nearly 10 per cent., and much greater advances in the scale for the lowest grades of skilled labor.

The committee, after careful examination of local rates, has been guided to a great extent by the desirability, in the present national crisis, of making the rates to be paid as nearly uniform in all parts of the country as circumstances will allow.

As to the new navy yard scale, the most important change is the reduction of the number of rates in any one trade to three. Heretofore most of the skilled trades have been graded into five rates, the men in the lowest rates often receiving little more than unskilled labor. Hereafter there will be but three rates, the lowest to be paid not more than $1.04 per diem less than the first-class men. For instance, if the top rate for machinists is $4.64 a day, the third rate must be at least $3.60. At present the rate in some cases is as low as $3.04. The increases given in the maximum rates will be found to average nearly 10 per cent.

The committee has approved the recommendations of the commanding officers of the arsenals. At certain of the arsenals in certain trades there remain appeals on which no decision has been reached. It is the intention of the committee to visit the arsenals in person or to send representatives to adjust all outstanding questions.

GERMAN URGES ALLIES TO FORCE PEACE BY VICTORY

Dr. Roesemeier Says Germany Must Be Beaten if Settlement Is to Endure.

HOPE OF A REVOLUTION VAIN

BUT LABOR IS SUBSERVIENT

BERNE, Aug. 29.—Nothing amazes me more than that there should still be people in England who imagine that a lasting peace can be based upon a peaceful understanding with an unconquered Germany. That these people really do believe this is beyond question, but does not alter the fact that they are no less harmful to the world in general than, for instance, the Russian Bolsheviki, among whom, side by side with German agents, there are undeniably a certain proportion of genuine idealists.

If only the British advocates of a so-called "peace based on understanding," remembering the good old saying that "facts are stubborn things," would always bear in mind the following undeniable facts:

First.—The most powerful class in Germany are still the Prussian Junkers. They it is who have kept the upper hand, both under absolute monarchical government and under a constitutional monarchy. The pick of the officers are chosen from the Junkers, who are closely connected not only with all the higher civil servants, but with the leading merchants and manufacturers, and even the wealthy farmers, sometimes by ties of blood relationship, sometimes by community of interests, and sometimes by both together. Even the Hohenzollern dynasty is most intimately bound up with them, as witness its history, extending back now over five centuries. Upon the Junkers the country pastors and village schoolmasters depend, both for their livelihood and also for their ideas. Moreover, owing to the military spirit and national aspirations, most of the intellectual classes, from university professors to students, are likewise tied up with the Junkers. The humbler classes of civil servants are absolutely imbued with the spirit of military subjection, being mostly composed of non-commissioned officers, corporals, sergeants, &c. The military associations (Kriegervereine) in which ex-soldiers unite and meet together, and the smaller newspapers (completely under the thumb of the local magnates, who are most of them Junkers) take care that the middle classes are all militarists and jingoes. Finally, with the help of the Workingmen's Christian Associations, presided over by orthodox pastors, the Junkers have even contrived to get a section of the working classes into their clutches.

Ruthless Aims of "a German Peace."

Second.—All these classes, the cream of whom it is who fill the ranks of the Junkers, are in favor of the so-called "German peace"; in other words, of that peace which the then Chancellor, von Bethmann Hollweg, outlined as follows in a conversation with the American Ambassador, Mr. Gerard, at the end of January, 1917: Begium, already bound hand and foot, to be absolutely in Germany's power, both from the commercial and military standpoints; annexations at the expense of France and Russia; Serbia and Rumania to be ruthlessly mutilated; all Germany's ships and colonies to be restored to her; war indemnities to be paid by the Allies. Such is the peace for which official Germany is striving, and by way of adding insult to injury, she declares that such conditions are no reflection on the honor of the Allies!

Third.—The so-called "more moderate" parties in Germany, that is to say, the Centre Party, the Progressives, and the majority Socialists, might perhaps be ready to accept a peace based on the status quot ante; but even they will not hear of Germany making any sort of restitution and utterly decline to discuss the Alsace-Lorraine question. The great majority of these "middle parties," as they are styled, would not object at all if at the peace negotiations Germany succeeded either in annexing territory or imposing war indemnities, or both.

Fourth.—For practical purposes the power of these middle parties, in other words, of the majority of the Reichstag, is nil. They have not been able either to exert any influence on the appointment of Bethmann Hollweg's successor, or to bring about the introduction of parliamentary government, or to force the new Chancellor to express in unambiguous language his agreement with peace conditions, in themselves, after all, ambiguous.

Fifth—The Poles and the Independent Social Democrats, the only parties in Germany really opposed to annexations, have not sufficient influence either on politics or in Parliament to be able to make their opinions prevail.

Sixth—The well drilled German working classes, the most skilled of whom, it must be remembered, are earning ex-

Kuehlmann Hands Teutons' Peace Reply in Person to Papal Nuncio in Munich

LONDON, Monday, Sept. 17.—Dr. Richard von Kühlmann, the German Foregn Secretary, who is now visiting King Ludwig at Munich, called on the Papal Nuncio and handed him Germany's reply to Pope Benedict's peace proposal Saturday evening, according to the Berlin Lokal-Anzeiger. The latter is quoted in an Amsterdam dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Monday, Sept. 17.—A dispatch to The Times from Amsterdam reports that the Vienna correspondent of the Berliner Tageblatt says that the German and Austro-Hungarian reply to the Pope's note was to be handed Saturday to the representatives of the Holy See.

The answer, which each of the two Governments had drawn up for itself, acknowledges the Pope's proposal and falls in with the general views of the Pope for bringing about and insuring lasting peace, but, having regard to the attitude of the Entente and America, it does not go into a detailed discussion of peace conditions.

ROME, Saturday, Sept. 15.—The reply of the Central Powers to the peace proposal of Pope Benedict is expected within five or six days, according to information obtained today at the Vatican.

WIRELESS WARNED OF GIANT U-BOAT

Liner Reaching American Port Got Message Raider Was 300 Feet Long and Had 2 Guns.

REPORTS PREVIOUS ATTACK

Torpedo Missed Her by 50 Feet Soon After Leaving England—Had Destroyer as Convoy.

An American steamship arriving at an Atlantic port yesterday, from England, brought further confirmation of the wireless warning of a German submarine reported seen on this side of the ocean and also news of a futile attack on the steamer by a U-boat soon after the vessel left the other side, a torpedo passing fifty feet behind the stern of the ship.

The wireless warning was received at 3 o'clock last Friday afternoon, from the Cape Ray wireless station, at the southwest extremity of Newfoundland. The message read:

"Submarine seen near Nantucket Lightship early today. She is described as being 300 feet long, carrying one gun forward and one aft, and having two periscopes."

The operator at Cape Ray added that he had tried to get the name of the vessel sending the warning, but could get no reply. The message was very faint, he said.

Altered Liner's Course.

The Captain of the liner, for the sake of safety, altered his course sixty miles to the southward. Officers of the ship after landing seemed to be of the opinion that the wireless warnings, including the S O S call and the report that a steamship was being shelled by a submarine sixty-five miles southeast of Nantucket, brought by steamers arriving earlier, were sent out as a hoax by amateurs or else by some vessel under a flag supposedly neutral to arouse alarm in America. It was recalled that at the time the Greek steamship Thessaloniki was drifting helplessly in the storm in January, 1916, with 300 passengers on board, the steamships speeding to her aid were sent out of their course by messages sent out by amateur wireless operators along the New Jersey coast, purporting to be from the Thessaloniki.

Some of the United States naval officials believe that the present messages are being sent out from some secret wireless plant on the coast of Maine or a little way back in the interior, a plant for which the Intelligence Department has been searching for the last two months.

Disregarding the wireless warnings of Friday, a big liner left an Atlantic port yesterday for France with 800 passengers, among them a number of American army officers, besides foreign diplomats and other prominent persons.

Torpedo Attack on Steamer.

The attack on the American liner arriving yesterday was made in the Irish Channel on Sunday, Sept. 9, fourteen hours after the vessel left port. Eight bells had struck at noon when the lookout on the mainmast shouted to the officer on the bridge: "Torpedo coming from port quarter!"

The liner was swinging on a zigzag course and steaming at nineteen knots an hour. The passengers on deck saw the wake of the torpedo as it flashed in the bright sunshine through the waves. As the torpedo neared the ship something apparently went wrong with the works, because the torpedo leaped out of the water like a nimble young porpoise and then disappeared into the sea fifty feet astern.

Nothing was seen of the submarine, but the naval crew swung the stern gun around and fired in the direction whence the torpedo came. The shell exploded as it struck the water, scattering shrapnel.

Officers of the vessel said that the latest theory in Europe was that the Germans were silver-plating the periscopes of their undersea craft. This, it was pointed out, would make the periscope reflect the color of the surrounding water on its polished surface, thus decreasing the visibility. To substantiate this theory it was recalled that in the case of a number of vessels lately sunk no telltale periscope had been seen.

Passengers said that a submarine fired a torpedo at the liner just before daybreak on the following morning, Sept. 10, and that a submarine was sighted at 3 o'clock on the afternoon of Sept. 11, when the liner was about 1,150 miles from port, but did not get near enough to attack. The firing of the second torpedo could not be confirmed by inquiries among the crew. It was admitted that something was sighted away off to starboard on the afternoon of Sept. 11, but it disappeared below the surface before the officers on the bridge could identify it as a submarine.

The liner was convoyed for 940 miles on her voyage out, and had a destroyer steaming ahead of her when the torpedo was fired at her Sept. 9.

SPY SCANDAL STIRS FRENCH DEPUTIES

HINTS OF GERMAN BRIBE

Deputy Turmel, Who Claims the Money, Recently Barred at the Swiss Border.

PARIS, Sept. 16. — Semi-official announcement was made today that Paul Deschanel, President of the Chamber of Deputies, and the quaestors of the Chamber would meet on Monday to decide what action should be taken regarding the Turmel affair, which for more than a week has been the principal topic of discussion in the press.

Premier Painlevé, Jules Steeg, Minister of the Interior, and Raoul Peret, Minister of Justice, have decided, after discussing the matter, that it is thus far under the jurisdiction of the Chamber, inasmuch as M. Turmel is a Deputy, and as such enjoys immunity from legal prosecution while Parliament is in session, except in the case of flagrant dereliction of duty.

The affair arose from the discovery on July 9, in the Deputies' cloakroom at the Chamber of an envelope containing twenty-seven Swiss 1,000-franc banknotes. The finder, an usher of the Chamber, handed the envelope to the quaestors. Nothing was said of the incident for weeks, and it was only a fortnight ago that it became an affair of common gossip. The name of the Deputy owning the notes was not made known.

The discovery of the banknotes was recalled, however, as soon as Dr. Michaelis, the German Chancellor, made the statement that he was fully informed by eye and ear witnesses of everything that was said at the secret sittings of the Chamber. It was intimated that the banknotes had been given in payment for treasonable acts on the part of some Deputies.

Eventually the name of M. Turmel was made public in connection with the incident. He explained that he was the legal adviser for Franco-Swiss firms and received money in fees. It was his custom, he said, to leave large amounts in his locker at the Chamber. He added that his last trip to Switzerland was on May 10, and hence it was out of the question that he could have betrayed the proceedings in the secret sittings, which were held in June. He wrote to the quaestors that as persons in Switzerland who were in a position to give details of his transaction were making difficulties, he intended to go to Switzerland and bring back documentary evidence. M. Turmel left for Switzerland on Thursday, but was stopped at the frontier by the Swiss authorities, although he had a diplomatic passport.

To interviewers M. Turmel explained that as notary of the town of Roudeac he cleared 20,000 francs yearly after paying all expenses, and so was quite wealthy. This story of riches is received with hesitation by the press, which states that investigation made in his constituency in Brittany has shown that he did not pay his expenses in the 1914 election until long afterward, and that he owed a year's rent on his apartment in Paris when the war began. Deputies who are acquainted with him question whether he could have drawn up a report of the secret session, saying that he was seldom in the Chamber. The Deputy has notified President Deschanel that he intends to interpellate the Government on what he himself calls the Turmel affair, and in regard to the refusal to permit him to enter Switzerland.

To a representative of the Journal M. Turmel said that he had made 90,000 francs by operations in Switzerland. In transactions involving Switzerland, Italy, and France, connected with the delivery of cattle on contracts in which 14,000,000 francs was at stake, he said, he obtained 30,000 francs. Furthermore, he said, he was consulted in the formation of seven Franco-Swiss companies for utilizing water power. He explained that he kept 27,000 francs Swiss money because the exchange rate made it worth 36,000 francs. He says that he left the 27,000 francs in an envelope which disappeared.

"The truth is that I am a victim of machination against the whole Parliament," he added. "I was chosen because I am unattached in the Chamber and come from the working class. At 20 I was a maker of wooden shoes, like my father."

One of the mysteries of the Deputy's conduct is that he was regularly at the Chamber until July 16, a week after the envelope was found, and missed the envelope from his locker the day he left, but merely asked an usher to search for it. He explains that he was in a hurry to go to a wedding. He did not make further inquiries until asked for explanations six weeks later.

WITH THE SUPREME COMMAND OF THE ITALIAN ARMIES, Saturday, Sept. 15.—From Monte Santo (the Holy Mountain) one gets the greatest war spectacle in all the world—the fight for Monte San Gabriele. It is a stage box. The actors in the drama are so close that one can see the make-up and even watch the entrances and exits through the wings.

Monte Santo is an ideal looking mountain, for it rises 2,000 feet above the Gorizio plain and is so steep that the ascent seems like climbing a perpendicular wall. It is almost a sheer cliff on each side, and its summit rises like a church spire above everything surrounding except Sabotino, which is a mountain of its own level across the Isonzo half a mile away.

San Gabriele, which squats directly in front of Santo, is an ugly fat mountain of bare rock, the top of which is only 300 feet below the Holy Mountain's peak. That peak is the stage box so near the tragedy that one could almost attract the performers' attention with tennis racket and balls.

Santo fell into Italian hands in much the same manner as many mountains fall—by being entirely surrounded and so compelled to surrender. Thus it became an observatory not only for the battle for San Gabriele, but for a near view of the operations clear across the Gorizia plain over the Carso to the sea. From there one understands more particularly the strategy that will eventually mean the fall of Trieste.

Although the long drawn battle for San Gabriele is limited in action, the mountain being a salient in the Austrian line, there has never been anything except at Verdun so bloody and so terrible.

To ascend to the Holy peak in safety one sneaks down the Isonzo gorge in the gloomy protection of Sabotino and climbs up the "dead ground," that is, ground out of reach of the Austrian shells.

"Dead Ground" Obstacle on Gabriele.

"Dead ground" is a great problem on the Italian front in Austria, for it is that territory so sheltered behind sheer mountain cliffs that shells can never reach it. It thus becomes an ideal machine gun nest where the infantry can make a long stand after all the adjoining positions are captured and even it is completely surrounded.

It is the dreaded "dead ground" on San Gabriele that has permitted the Austrians to hang on so long although the fall of San Gabriele has been written a long time since in the book of things that are to be.

The climb up Santo is long and hard, but not dangerous in the daytime. At night it is another matter on account of the precipice. However, the Italians, according to their custom, are now hacking a fine wide road in its granite side and in a few more weeks expect to use the road for automobiles and guns. At the very top there is a great pile of broken white marble.

Up to a few months ago when the Italians concentrated their fire upon it from Sabotino across the way these pieces were formed together into a sacred shrine where old Francis Joseph came to pray at the beginning of the war for the success of Austrian arms. The shrine faced west toward the old frontier. When the domineering emperor was hauled up in a sedan chair to inaugurate thus the end of his tragic reign in a cataclism of blood he prayed with arms spread out toward the smiling plains of Italy.

When the first shell burst through the stone portico of the shrine there stood revealed to the Italian observers a figure of the Virgin. Through the clear mountain air the observers on Sabotino could distinguish the colors of the frescoes about the Virgin's head. Another shell and both Virgin and frescoes crashed in fragments down the precipice facing Italy. To the Italian gunners it seemed an omen that the ill luck of the house of Hapsburg would continue to the end and that by Italy would their ramshackle empire be split into pieces, only to be remolded in a better way.

And now that rubble pile of what was an emperor's shrine is a box seat from which to watch the Italian lines go forward on Austrian soil.

When first I looked down on the battle for San Gabriele I seemed to hang indirectly over the crater of a volcano. A matter of merely 40,000 Italian shells on a daily average are bursting over San Gabriele's crest. In addition are the Austrian shells, for the lines on San Gabriele are now so close that the topmost positions have been taken and retaken half a dozen times. Often the volcano is in such terrific eruption that it is almost impossible to give the pro-

REBUKE TO WILSON WINS KAISER'S PRAISE

Cannot "Seduce the German People," He Tells the Painters of Berlin.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 16.—In reply to a protest against the note of President Wilson to the Pope from the painters of Greater Berlin the Emperor has sent the following telegram:

"My hearty thanks for the loyal pledge from the painters of Greater Berlin regarding the attempt to seduce the German people into a breach of faith against their Kaiser and the empire. The victorious success of our heroic sons on the battlefield can only lead to a peace which will be beneficial, too, for German handicrafts, if all unshakeably and with one mind stand by one another."

The Lokal-Anzeiger of Berlin says that no protest against President Wilson's reply has yet been made by the city authorities of Berlin, in contrast with the action of those of other cities.

BERLIN, Sept. 16.—Delegates to the convention of the League of German Municipalities have issued a call to German citizens to rebuke President Wilson for his attempted interference in German domestic affairs by participating actively in the forthcoming war loan.

"If money talks," says the manifesto, "The President may learn by Oct. 18, when the subscription lists close, that the echo of the new war fund given by the German people will have drowned out completely the clamor of unending protests to which his reply to the Pope has given stimulus."

STOCKHOLM STILL PLANS CONFERENCE

Peace Congress Not Abandoned by Socialists, Organizing Committee Announces.

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 16.—Following conferences with the Russian delegates who have returned from their mission to London, Paris, and Rome, the Organizing Committee of the Stockholm Conference, in a report on the present situation, declares that the conference has not been abandoned, but, on the contrary, that a date will be fixed as soon as passport difficulties are overcome.

The Russian delegation is still convinced that the working classes of Great Britain, France, and Italy are unanimously in favor of the conference, because they believe that a stable peace, under which the interests of small nations will not be sacrificed to great nations, can only be reached by a common, concerted effort on the part of the proletariat of the entire world.

"The brutal refusal of passports," says the report, "appears in the eyes of all of us as an exhibition of crushing reaction. But it will be overcome. We appeal to the workers in Great Britain, France, Italy, and America not to be deprived of the elementary liberty to exchange views.

"The enemies of Socialism have resorted to the traditional manoeuvre against us. They have employed methods of insinuation and have invoked non-existent documents to impress the masses. Above all, they have abused the monopoly of postal and telegraphic services to misconstrue and falsify our declarations."

The conference will be postponed probably until next year, according to the Aftonbladet. Members of the Dutch and Scandinavian committees, the newspaper adds, are about to depart for their homes.

LAY WHEAT SHORTAGE TO PROPAGANDA

I. W. W. and Pro-German Activities Thought in Chicago to Be Checking Movement of Grain.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—I. W. W. and German propaganda among American farmers under the protection of a fixed price for wheat set by the Food Administration is believed here to have had much to do with curtailment of the usual Fall movement of wheat.

A shortage of wheat and flour at the end of a short crop is not unusual, but the present situation, coming after the Winter wheat movement has been on two months and the Spring wheat movement three weeks, is unprecedented. It results chiefly from two causes—depletion of the world's supplies due to last year's small crops and the war demands, and the slow movement of this year's crops.

In parts of Iowa and Wisconsin German propaganda, it is said, has influenced the farmers to hold their grain that it may not be used to support a war. Some of these farmers also have an idea that the Government price at Chicago for best grades may be increased.

In the Northwest I. W. W. activities are largely held responsible for the shortage. The Dakotas and Minnesota have 80,000,000 bushels more than last year, and 24,000,000 more than their standard milling capacity.

MORE ITALIAN GAINS; 417 AUSTRIANS TAKEN

ROME, Sept. 16.—Italian troops gained ground yesterday along the southeastern edge of the Bainsizza Plateau, it is announced officially. More than 400 men were captured. The statemtent follows:

On the Bainsizza Plateau yesterday the gallant Sassari Brigade, with splendid élan, gained ground at the southeastern margin, capturing seventeen officers, more than 400 men, and some machine guns.

Troops massed in the Ravnica area, east of Monte San Gabriele, were bombarded with about two and a half tons of bombs by two of our aerial squadrons.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—A semi-official wireless telegraph from Rome says that six enemy airplanes were brought down or compelled to land in engagements from Sept. 6 to 14. Captain Baracca won his nineteenth victory, bringing down an airplane behind Monte San Gabriele. Other Italian aviators won their eleventh, tenth, and fourth victories.

COSSACKS FOR KALEDINES

PETROGRAD, Saturday, Sept. 15.—Russia has been proclaimed a republic. The Provisional Government tonight issued the following proclamation, dated Friday:

General Korniloff's rebellion has been quelled. But great is the confusion caused thereby, and again great is the danger threatening the fate of the Fatherland and its freedom.

Holding it necessary to put an end to the external indefiniteness of the State's organization, remembering the unanimous and rapturous approval of the Republican idea expressed at the Moscow State Conference, the Provisional Government declares that the constitutional organization, according to which the Russian State is ruled, is a Republican organization, and it hereby proclaims the Russian Republic.

(Signed)
Minister and President, KERENSKY.
Minister of Justice, YAROUDNI.

Despite the continuation of the revolt of General Kaledines and the Don Cossacks, whose designs are still in doubt, the position of the Government was improved today.

The first indication of the improvement was the fact that the rank and file of the army is wholly loyal to the Provisional Government. Judicial inquiries into the Korniloff rebellion at Mohilev and Petrograd bring out that the soldiers, and also many officers, when they marched against Petrograd, had no knowledge of their objective and no suspicion of the conspiracy of General Korniloff. It appears various pretexts were given to them, some connected with the war and some connected with the internal condition of the country.

Premier Kerensky yesterday issued an order to the army and navy declaring that this condition was true of the army of General Krymoff, which in its march against Petrograd had no intention whatever of overthrowing the Government, to which it is entirely loyal.

Pretexts Given to Troops.

The inquiry being made in Petrograd shows that the Caurisky division, which advanced to the River Narva, believed that it was to defend the Baltic coast, which was threatened by a German invasion. Such junior officers as were in the plot, it is said, were influenced by talk about poor pay. The Mohilev inquiry discloses that the soldiers were told there was anarchy in Petrograd, which was getting no food supplies. They were assured that General Korniloff did not intend to upset the existing order, but aimed to take measures against the disorganization which was helping the enemy.

Upon the other hand, evidence against the higher officers is accumulating. Twenty more officers, including General Kisliakoff, have been arrested at Mohilev. Government agents also have arrested Colonel Lebedieff, in whose automobile were discovered plans of the operations against Petrograd.

The political department of the War Office has received hundreds of telegrams from army committees, Councils of Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates, and prominent individuals condemning the revolt and expressing readiness to support the Government.

The troops which rebelled with General Korniloff have nearly all returned to their former positions. The "Savage" Division, now under command of General Polovtseff, formerly commander of the Petrograd district, is on its way back to the front.

As regards the Don Cossacks, their Grand Council, sitting at Novo Tocherkask, was ordered by the Government to arrest General Kaledines. The council replied that it was impossible to obey the order because General Kaledines had to attend the military conferences of the Cossacks in his official capacity as Hetman. At the same time the council passed a resolution protesting against the charge that the Cossacks sympathized with the counter-revolution. The resolution declared the loyalty of the Cossacks to the Government, and exhorted all soldiers and citizens in the Don region to disregard the appeals of irresponsible bodies.

The commander of the Moscow military district has issued an appeal to the Cossacks, declaring that as they are the natural champions of freedom and order they should arrest General Kaledines and disband and send home the new Cossack forces which have been raise without the consent of the Government. Otherwise, the appeal says, the Cossack will be treated as traitors and foes to the nation's liberties.

Crew Kills Officers on Battleship.

It is reported from Helsingfors that the action of the General Assembly of Democratic Bodies in calling upon officers of the army and navy in Finland to sign a pledge of fidelity to the Provisional Government has resulted in a misunderstanding on board the Russian battleship Petropavlovsk. Four officers, who refused to sign the pledge, were shot by members of the crew.

The Helsingfors Revolutionary Committee subsequently published an appeal to the ships' crews, condemning the action of the men on the Petropavlovsk.

Admiral Verdervski, Minister of Marine, has telegraphed to the Central Committee of the Baltic Fleet, calling on it to prevent all excesses which disorganize the navy and diminish its capacity to meet the expected German offensive.

The Ministry of the Interior announces that on and after Sept. 23 no person will be permitted to enter Petrograd without special authorization. The measure is said to be designed to prevent further overcrowding of the city.

A plenary session of the Petrograd Council of Soldiers' and Workmen's Delegates yesterday evening, which was attended by soldiers who were absent from the previous meeting, repassed the Maximalist resolutions adopted Friday, putting forward an extremely radical program demanding exclusion of all representatives of the propertied classes from power, abolition of private property, the immediate declaration of a democratic republic, &c.

The delegates also adopted a resolution setting forth that the tragic situation of the country rendered necessary the constitution of a strong revolutionary power free from all compromise with the counter-revolutionary bourgeoise elements, and announcing they had decided to convoke immediately a general conference of representatives of the whole organized democracy for the settlement of the question of constituting a power capable of leading the country until the time the Constituent Assembly assembles.

The resolution adds that until this conference is summoned the present Government will remain in power, working in close union with the revolutionary democracy, which is invited to give energetic support. If necessary, the resolution says, the Government will act in close co-operation with a committee for the safety of the revolution.

The people are called on to await patiently the summoning of the conference and to abstain from arbitrary or illegal acts. At the close of the sitting it was announced the conference would be held in Petrograd not later than Sept. 25.

The Central Committee of the Executive Committee of the Council of Soldiers' and Workmen's Delegates and the Executive Committee of the Peasants' Delegates at a joint meeting the same night voted approval, by an overwhelming majority, of Premier Kerensky's latest move, which has distinctly improved the prospects for the survival of the new Cabinet of five. These two organizations represent the workmen, soldiers, and peasants all over the empire, unlike the Petrograd Council of Soldiers' and Workmen's Delegates, the Bolsheviki majority of which on Friday made impossible demands. They are the nearest thing to a Parliament which Russia possesses.

M. Avskentieff, former Minister of the Interior, appealed to the meeting to help keep the Government afloat. He said great dangers were impending, of which one was that Cossacks were marching on Tsaritsyn, on the Volga, with the aim of dividing South Russia from the north and depriving the north of bread. He added: "The Provisional Government has precise information that the Germans are organizing an expedition in Finland."

For these reasons, the former Minister said, it was absolutely necessary to rally around the Government.

M. Skobeleff, former Minister of Labor, also warned the meeting, saying: "General Kaledines (the Cossack leader) is coming here, and if we assail the Provisional Government from the opposite direction all is lost."

Bolsheviki in Ugly Mood.

Notwithstanding an attack on Premier Kerensky by delegates who denounced him as an irresponsible dictator, the sentiment of the meeting was emphatically in favor of the Government. The only immediate menace to the Government is the Bolsheviki of Petrograd who, owing to the suppression of their newspapers and their defeat in the Central Committee of the Council of Soldiers' and Workmen's Delegates, are in an angry mood.

The Cabinet of five, however, needs to hold together only until Sept. 25, when a new responsible ministry will be appointed. Meanwhile, the Cabinet is preparing to make concessions to the left. It has drafted, but not yet signed, a decree abolishing the Duma.

Meanwhile, the election of the Constituent Assembly has been postponed again because the work of organization throughout the country has not been completed. Elections to the Assembly now are fixed for Nov. 12 and the members are to convene Nov. 28 (Russian calendar).

The Socialist newspapers generally are favorable in their comment on the new Government. The Isvestia, the organ of the Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates, says that the ministerial crisis has been settled in a manner satisfactory to the demands of the democracy, and adds: "This fact is a good omen, for it guarantees not only the complete suppression of the Kornilloff adventure, but also a fight to the finish against all counter-revolutionary attempts."

The Diele Naroma, the organ of the social revolutionists, approves, but warns the Cabinet of Five against the temptation of degenerating into a dictatorship.

The middle class and independent press is more reserved, expressing the opinion that the new Cabinet is merely a stage in the progress of the ministerial crisis. They declare that there is no chance of matters being settled definitely unless the Government is supported by all classes.

FAIR TRIAL FOR KORNILOFF

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 15, via London, Sept. 16, (Dispatch to The London Daily Mail.)—It is authoritatively stated that the Provisional Government will not take revengeful measures against Kornilloff, who will be tried and will receive every facility to defend himself.

ROOSEVELT ADVISES RUSSIA.

Victory Over Germany Will Alone Assure Future Freedom.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 16.—A letter from Theodore Roosevelt to Michael I. Terestchenko, the Foreign Minister, expressing the highest hopes for the Russian democracy, is published by the Russkaia Volia.

The letter declares that America's experience proves that freedom can be maintained only where self-control exists and where the nation itself is master of its passions. It concludes:

"All who aim at a compromise peace are the enemies of freedom and justice. The only guarantee of future freedom is a complete victory over Germany and the Hohenzollerns."

A MOVE TO GAIN AUTHORITY.

So Washington Interprets the Proclamation of Kerensky.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Premier Kerensky's Provisional Government, by declaring Russia a republic and the Government a Constitutional organization, may, according to the view here, clothe itself with authority which it has lacked heretofore and which it regards as necessary to preserve sufficient political harmony to continue the war.

That Russia would eventually adopt a republican form of government has been generally assumed, and was predicted confidentially by the American Mission to Russia. Kerensky's proclamation caused surprise, coming at this time, however. Close observers of Russian revolutionary politics think it was prompted by a desire to reassure the radical socialistic element of the Workmen's and Soldiers' Councils that the formal organization of a constitutional government would not be postponed indefinitely. To this extent it was interpreted as a capitulation to the Social Revolutionary Party, of which Kerensky is a leader.

The Provisional Government, dominated by the new Cabinet of five Ministers with centralized powers, is likely to proceed to exercise arbitrarily functions which it would not have dared before. Although there is no specific authority for its action, the Government apparently believes that it will meet less opposition than by continuing the policy of interminable readjustments of Cabinet and Ministers which have marked the short revolutionary history of the nation.

It is believed here that the new move will strengthen the Government and assist the recuperation from the national shock of General Kornilloff's unsuccessful revolt. Since the new Cabinet of five contains three non-partisan members, and two Socialists, and is not a coalition as advocated by the Constitutional Democrats, opposition by conservatives of the latter group may be expected.

PROGRESS OF RUSSIA IN ATTAINING LIBERTY

The first step in the limitation of the absolute powers which the Emperors of Russia had enjoyed since the subjection of the minor princes by Basil III. and Ivan the Terrible in the sixteenth century, and the crushing of the boyar class, which was completed by Peter the Great, took place when the revolutionary movement of 1905 forced Nicholas II. to issue on Oct. 30 of that year his manifesto promising to Russia a Constitution based on the principles of national representation, freedom of conscience and opinion, and guarantees for individual liberty. On the 27th of April, 1906, the first Duma elected in response to this promise assembled in Petrograd.

Alexander I. had promised the Russians a Constitution in 1818, but in his reign the only movement toward it was the establishment of the Council of the Empire, a purely appointive body filled with reactionaries. The liberal movement had had its best chance to develop in the institutions of Zemstvos—Provincial Councils—and Dumas—Municipal Councils—established by Alexander II. in 1864 and 1870, respectively, but with powers limited to debate and supervision of a few charities and similar activities. It was the first gathering of the Congress of Zemstvos that paved the way for the elective Duma, and it was the work of the Congress of Zemstvos in the supplying of Russia's armies in the war that opened much of the way for the recent successful revolution.

The first Duma, composed of members infected with extreme theories and without experience in parliamentary government, was dissolved July 8, 1906, because it had wanted everything at once; the second, in which the radicals (the Constitutional Democrats, lately ejected from positions of honor because they are now regarded as too conservative,) still held a majority, fell in June, 1907, for the same reason.

The Government had now got control of the revolution, and in November, 1907, much of the manifesto of October, 1905, was in effect revoked. The Dumas since then have been chosen by a very indirect suffrage, which gave a great preponderance of power to the propertied classes; and it was this Duma, dominated by moderate but patriotic bourgeois, which headed the popular resentment against corruption and treachery that finally brought about the successful revolution of last March.

The first announcement of the revolution of 1917 revealed a Cabinet composed chiefly of Constitutional Democrats, headed by the moderate George Lvoff, with Milukoff its most prominent personality and Kerensky as Minister of Justice, the only Socialist representative. This Cabinet was based on the Duma and the Petrograd Council of Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates, but the latter, with its hold on the victorious garrison of Petrograd, very soon proved that it possessed the real power.

The announcement of March 15, 1917, stated that the Czar had abdicated in favor of his brother, the Grand Duke Michael. In other words, Russia was still to be a monarchy, but a constitutional monarchy. It took only a few days to show that the radicals had the whip hand, and the constitutional monarchy proposal was soon allowed to slip into the background.

In April it was announced that a constituent assembly would be called for September, and that it would determine the form of government. Meanwhile the Petrograd Council of Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates had issued its famous demand for peace without annexations and indemnities.

It was Milukoff's letter of May 1 to the Allies in reply to this, assuring them that Russia would keep her engagements, that led to definite transfer of control from the Cadets to the Socialists. Milukoff and Guchkoff, with other minor personalities, were compelled to resign a fortnight later, and although Lvoff was still Premier, it was evident by this time that the Socialist Kerensky, who succeeded Guchkoff as Minister of War, was the dominant power in the Government, the only man who had the ideals of the patriotic party and the confidence of the Socialist proletariat.

Kerensky's prestige was raised tremendously by his swing round the circle, making patriotic speeches, early in July, and the successful offensive in Galicia which followed, and which he personally led. But on the heels of this came three great disasters to Russia—the collapse of the army in Galicia, the Bolsheviki riots of July 16 in Petrograd, and the split in the Cabinet due to the promise of independence to the Ukraine made on their own authority by Tseretelli and Tereshchenko, two of the Socialist Ministers. Kerensky supported them; on July 19 Lvoff resigned, and Kerensky became the Premier in title as well as in fact.

Meanwhile the disorder, made most evident by the continuing retreat on the southwestern front, drove all but the ultra-radical to realize that strong measures were necessary. On July 23 the All-Russian Council of Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates, more patriotic than its Petrograd branch, and the Peasants' Council, both voted him dictatorial powers, and he declared that he would put down movements against the revolution "by blood and irony."

Every one then was talking of Kerensky as the savior of Russia and the first President of the republic, which was foreseen though not yet definitely announced. But Kerensky could not or at least did not carry out his promises to any great degree, so in August the state of the country led to the summoning of the Moscow conference dominated by various moderate groups.

The Constituent Assembly was passing more and more into the background, and the tremendous ovation with which the Moscow assembly received General Kornilloff, the newly chosen commander in chief and hero of the successes in Galicia just before the collapse, seemed to indicate a revulsion toward more moderate sentiments under the stress of military disaster.

For the moment, Kerensky and Kornilloff appeared to be in harmony, but apparently the enthusiasm of the Moscow conference led the General to overestimate its importance and to think that the time was ripe for the strong hand of a military leader. His revolt of last week, which collapsed so promptly, was the result.

In the meantime, however, plots for the restoration of the monarchy, still nascent, had been discovered; General Gurko and a Grand Duke or two had been arrested, and there began to be a demand among the body of the radicals and even of the moderates for a definite statement that any return to a monarchy was out of the question. With Kerensky's victory over Kornilloff giving the Provisional Government supremacy for the moment, the time seems to have ben found suitable for proclaiming a republic.

KERENSKY WEDS RUSSIAN ACTRESS

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 16, (Dispatch to The London Daily News).—Refugees from Petrograd arriving here yesterday bring the story that in the midst of the crisis—a few days after the fall of Riga to be exact—Premier Kerensky found time to remarry.

The wedding took place at the Winter Palace, the bride being Mlle. Timmet, a prominent and clever young actress of the Alexandra Theatre.

It is amusing to hear that this item of fashionable intelligence created an unfavorable impression in Petrograd.

SOLDIERS ENTER COURT, WANT SOUKHOMLINOFF

Judge Refuses to Deliver Ex-War Minister to Be Dealt With by Regiment.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 16.—The trial of General Soukhomlinoff, the former War Minister, for treason, was interrupted today by the breaking of windows in the courtroom, followed by the appearance of delegations from three companies of a regiment which was waiting outside.

The delegation declared that the Soukhomlinoff case was the simplest of issues and that it was plain the court was deliberately prolonging the trial. It demanded that the defendants (who included Soukhomlinoff's wife) should be handed over to the regiment, which would settle the case forthwith.

The demand was refused, whereupon the delegates demanded that the defendants be placed on a strict prison regimen and deprived of all comforts.

The court decided to transfer Soukhomlinoff from the hotel where he has been confined to the fortress of St. Peter and St. Paul.

The session today was devoted to further testimony regarding Soukhomlinoff's relations with Miasscyedoff, a German spy, who was executed, and the defense's efforts to show that Soukhomlinoff was hampered in his work by the restriction of credits by the Finance Minister.

RUSSIANS REPEL FOE ON NORTHERN FRONT

PETROGRAD, Sept 16. — Stubborn fighting is in progress on the northern end of the front in Russia. Today's official statement says the Russian troops are fighting with determination, repelling German assaults. Attacks on the Rumanian front were beaten back. The communication follows:

Western Front.—In the direction of Riga and on the Pskov road, in the region of the Zegevold Farm, a stubborn battle is proceeding. Our troops are showing great firmness and stability, repelling attacks. In the region north of Lake Petchur our scouts found the burned remains of a German airplane which our fire had brought down. On the remainder of the front there were fusillades.

Rumanian Front.—In the direction of Fokshani, in the region of Fitioneschi and Merechesci, enemy scouting parties attempted at several place, under cover of artillery fire, to approach Rumanian trenches, but were repelled everywhere. An enemy attack northwest of Merechesci was repelled.

Aviation.—One of our airplanes dropped several bombs on Tveretch, (south of Dvinsk.) Succesful hits were observed.

General Valuveff, Commander in Chief of the Western (Russian) front, in an order of the day issued to his army, says:

"The enemy does not sleep. On the contrary, he is intoxicated by his Riga success and is, according to reliable information, preparing attempts to break through the Russian front at Dvinsk and Minsk. Should he succeed the liberty secured by the revolution will be lost.

"I exhort you to leave to the Government the solution of internal questions and to devote yourselves only to the maintenance of discipline and fighting efficiency."

U-BOAT VICTIMS REACH HOME

News of the destruction of the British steamship Mary Baird in May off Scotland was brought to an Atlantic port yesterday by members of the crew. She was a vessel of 1,830 tonnage, built in 1908, and owned by the Page Company of Liverpool. After the crew had taken to the lifeboat the Mary Baird was blown up by bombs placed in her hold.

William Snell, second cook of the steamship Belgian Prince, who was one of three survivors of a crew of forty-one when she was torpedoed on July 31, was another arrival. He confirmed the reports of how, after the vessel had been torpedoed, the crew were marshaled on the deck of the U-boat, which later submerged, drowning thirty-eight.

Captain Charles Davis and four members of the crew of the American four-masted schooner Laura C. Anderson, which was sunk by a German submarine Aug. 29 in the English Channel, also arrived. The Captain said that before sinking his vessel with bombs the Germans stripped her of all the stores and gear they could carry away in their boat.

ALLIED AIRMEN CONFER.

Special to The New York Times.

NORFOLK, Va., Sept. 16.—British, French, Italian, and American officers of flying corps, naval officers and private persons, who are interested in aeronautics, are in session at Old Point. It is understood that some of the principal questions they will consider is that of the adoption of standard machines for the Allies on their various fronts.

Lieutenant Silvio Resnati, who recently eclipsed all endurance tests for the Caproni triplane by staying in the air over six hours, plans to make a flight to New York Thursday or Friday. Ten passengers will be carried, including Alan R. Hawley, President of the Aero Club of America, three newspaper representatives, three mechanicians, and three army officers.

SEES AMERICA NOW IN DEADLY EARNEST

London Times Says That This Grows from "Reasoned Conviction" of Perils.

LONDON, Monday, Sept. 17. — The Times, in a leader this morning, under the caption "America in Earnest," says America's determined spirit is no mere outcome of sympathy with the Entente, but has a firmer basis.

"The existence of a reasoned conviction of the perils which a German victory or a drawn war would bring," the Times adds, "enables the Executive of the freest republic in the world unhesitatingly to carry out the boldest and most vigorous note which the situation demands. It is perhaps the strongest of all the Governments because it has behind it the united strength of a democracy born and bred in the traditions of ordered liberty."

The Daily Mail, in a leader this morning under the caption, "No Beating About the Bush—the American Spirit," pays a tribute to American participation in the war achievements of the last five months, and says:

"If they [the American people] seem at times slower to rise to an emergency, they are much more thorough than we when they have made up their minds to grapple it. They deliberate long and hold themselves in to make it appear as if nothing would move them, and then suddenly they launch a smashing blow. Everything is changed; discussion ceases, the cobwebs of debate are swept aside.

"The Americans are just as devoted as we to the liberty of the individual, but no nation is so energetic in putting individual liberty in its proper place when it threatens to hinder the public good."

Force Belgians to Work on Defenses.

the Count to announce by cable, the most rapid channel, that he regarded the Argentinian Foreign Minister as a notorious ass. It thinks that might have been said later.

The Zeitung am Mittag asks if it would not have been sufficient to call the Foreign Minister pro-English, and wishes to know what political conclusion the Berlin Government could have drawn under any circumstances from such a blunt characterization of the Minister's intelligence.

The Kreuz Zeitung, like several other newspapers, protests indignantly against the interpretation placed in enemy countries on Count Luxburg's famous expression, for which it has discovered a new meaning, namely, that persons in lifeboats were to be taken on board submarines instead of being left off enemy coasts.

TALK OF THREATS BY ALLIES.

Swedish Conservatives Unaffected by Election Losses.

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 16.—The losses of the Conservatives in the election apparently are not affecting the Conservative press. The Aftenbladet asks if it is impossible to unite the Swedish people so as to give a resolute "no" to the Entente, which, it says, seeks to interfere in Swedish affairs. The newspaper opposes a change in the Ministry, saying that in such an event "Sweden would soon suffer the fate of Greece by becoming a mere messenger boy for foreign powers.

"If we are willing to accept that," it continues, "then, having brought down the Ministry, we must weep on our knees before British and American threats."

As for the Washington disclosures regarding the employment by the German Minister to Mexico of the former Swedish Chargé d'Affaires at Mexico City, Folke Cronholm, to convey information to the Berlin Foreign Office, the newspaper says: "This is merely a part of the threats against us, with no foundation for insinuations against our present leader of foreign affairs."

A diminution is noticeable in the amount of space devoted by the Swedish press to the Argentinian and Mexican affairs, indicating a desire to avoid stirring public opinion unnecessarily. News of the message of the German Minister to Mexico regarding Folke Cronholm attracts unfavorable comment in several opposition papers.

The suspicion is entertained here that Count Luxburg may have carried his audacity to the point of using Swedish offices against Swedish interests.

CHEERS GREET VON ECKHARDT

Mexicans Applaud German Envoy in a Patriotic Parade.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 16.—Herr von Eckhardt, the German Minister, who marched in an independence celebration parade with the other foreign diplomats today, was cheered.

Paul Couget, the French Minister, and Cunard Cummings, British Chargé d'Affaires, denied formally last night that they had received any instructions from their Governments to make any representations to Mexico in connection with the von Eckhardt-Cronholm matter.

The President was cheered also as he drove through the streets today at the head of the parade.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 16.—Swedish Minister Anderberg late tonight stated that he had not received instructions from the Swedish Foreign Minister regarding the sending of German messages from here. Mr. Anderberg said instructions were not necessary, as he would not transmit any messages except Swedish Government business.

REMEDY IN SWEDES' HANDS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Monday, (Sept. 17.)—Dr. MacNamara, Financial Secretary to the Admiralty, speaking at Camberwell yesterday, said that in these days each morning's news was so restless that yesterday's events, generally speaking, were jostled out of the picture by today's. Some matters, however, because of their gravity, remained in the forefront of every mind, and this was true of the Swedish business which was brought to notice a week ago. Of that he would say no more than this:

"Under the general authority conferred by Swedish citizens there has been done that which must bring shame and humiliation to every plaindealing man and woman among them. The word is now with them and there I leave it."

SWEDES VOICE LOYALTY.

Chicago Meeting Pledges 'Our All for Defense Against Enemy Foe.'

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—Representatives of Swedish clubs, societies, and churches, at a joint meeting today, adopted resolutions pledging loyalty to President Wilson and the United States Government and made plans for a big patriotic meeting within two weeks.

The resolutions pledged the loyalty of 150,000 citizens of Swedish birth and extraction in Chicago and promised to the country "for defense against enemy foe our moral and material support, our lives, our fortunes, and our all."

GABRIELE A VOLCANO OF BURSTING SHELLS

er signals telling what lines are held and where or where not to fire.

A Rolling Sea of Smoke.

At the moment of my arrival it seemed as if the artillery was outdoing itself for the final hours before dark. So for a few minutes I could see nothing but a rolling sea of smoke so near that I could almost smell it, while on an exact level with my eyes the puff balls of shrapnel sparked and exploded so rapidly that their detonations, rolling up mountain gorges, seemed to put the whole world atremble.

It all made me wonder whether we were still hanging on to our world. There was never fevered nightmare more appalling. No Hippodrome producer in his wildest imaginings ever pictured such a scene. Even Dante's Inferno was outclassed. It was veritably a hell on earth of which no pen can give the details.

Occasionally through the smoke waves we could see the bald, tortured surface of the crest. A shell would strike and we could see the sparks as a granite ledge was shivered and splintered in every direction. Caverns yawned up at us where the melinite bombs rebounded and spent their rage. Black lines zigzagged over the surface—crazy and grotesque. They were the trenches.

Sometimes we could see figures leaping upon the stone parapets. They were like damned souls. Another shell would blot out the sight, and when it cleared the figures would all be huddled and still—only black patches against the dirty gray of the rock.

I shifted my glasses to the breaking spray of shrapnel directly in front of me. There were the usual kinds of shrapnel, the white puff balls and the ugly black clods. There was also a new kind, Austrian, that was yellow. The effect of all three together was marvelously beautiful. In that clear air, with the slanting sun rays and deep blue sky, when those three clouds of shrapnel would break simultaneously in about the same spot the colors spread out like a gigantic bouquet of flowers.

I turned my glasses over Gorizia and the Carso to where the ugly turtle-backed Hermada Mountain has been blocking the road to Trieste. I had gone through Gorizia that morning and had been duly and properly shelled. The Austrians fire constantly upon the town from Monte San Marco, a flat mud hill in front of the city, an ideal machine gun nest that cannot be taken until it is flanked after the fall of San Gabriele. But Gorizia is only like every other captured city and held no particular interest for me except just to say that I had been there.

I had also prowled over the Carso, that tableland of flint like our "bad lands," which has caused more blindness among Italian soldiers than in any other army. The reason is that shells, hitting the Carso, so splinter the rock that quite as much damage is caused by splinters as by shells. Every trench is hewn from the solid rock. I often crouched in them to avoid pieces of rock that whistled through the air so far from the shell that I could not find the smoke of the explosion.

As I now looked at the Carso from my box seat, I got out the maps and studied the strategy of Hermada and Trieste, while the tragedy of San Gabriele continued on the stage at my feet. Military strategy becomes clear when every objective is in plain sight. San Gabriele must fall first, I argued, and with it goes its little companion over there beyond—Monte San Daniele. When both those crests are occupied, one can see without the map that San Marco there in front of Gorizia must fall because it will be flanked.

Then attention will be concentrated on the final and highest ridge, the Carso, which, like these other hills with several crests, has too many points for machine guns, so that it cannot be taken by a front attack. Hermada with its seven crests is like that too, but even Hermada cannot long remain a serious barrier. The lines pass in front of it now, soon it will be flanked and must surrender.

It all seemed simple and easy—and then I glanced back to the inferno of San Gabriele.

"But why spend so much time over this mountain?" I asked the officer, "especially as you may say you have it."

He smiled.

"You would be surprised to know how few men we have lost down there," he said, "and we are not occupied alone with San Gabriele. Meanwhile it has used up about fifteen Austrian divisions."

I repeated the number of divisions and added.

My officer shrugged his shoulders and remarked quietly:

"Oh, most of those fifteen divisions are dead."

In the dying daylight I again fixed my glasses on the rocky slopes below. The artillery fire had lulled a little, so that we could see more clearly. All about the surface of the bald crest was dotted with black grotesque shadows—shadows that did not move. There were the pieces of the fifteen Austrian divisions that were dead.

Fireworks Display Grandiose.

Day fled quickly behind the higher mountains, and the evening fireworks began. Flares began to go up on all the surrounding hills, and were answered from mountain peaks miles away—rockets breaking in showers of stars that seemed to glimmer as far from the earth as the millions of real stars in the clear heavens.

We sat and watched, silent before the magnificent spectacle. The artillery was turned again upon San Gabriele. Shells crashed and exploded, striking lines of fire from the bare cliffs. The shrapnel hissed and screamed and screamed and broke in clouds of sparks.

For miles on very side the whole world seemed gone crazy. A thousand Japanese lanterns seemed to wave in a giddy whirl on the mountain peaks, then to break each into a dozen pieces and go out.

Sometimes sheds or motor caissons, struck by shells on far distant roads, would soar up in flames that lasted several minutes. In the valleys a million fireflies seemed to bob up and down in rhythmic air dance. Through every cleft and gorge the sound of cannon echoed and re-echoed as if a thousand valkyries were galloping madly from peak to peak, while through all the infernal din there came the ceaseless barking of machine guns and sometimes the yells of men.

On San Gabriele itself we could see more plainly than by day. The explosions would sometimes light up spaces of rock for a distance of many yards. We could often catch glimpses of trenches and the shimmer of helmets and bayonets. Sometimes for brief moments between shifts in the smoke we could see troops climbing up the slopes between the zigzag black trench line, clawing at the rocky ground. Once we saw men in the very act of falling backwards in the bright light of an exploding shell.

Suddenly, quite suddenly, something happened. I scrambled to my feet and rubbed an unsteady hand over my eyes. My officer also got up quickly.

I had a strange feeling that a great power had suddenly come to watch and bid mankind to cease his struggles and be still.

For from behind a distant snow peak there had floated the splendid and majestic moon. All the flares and rockets seemed to fade away. The flashes of shrapnel and melinite died out before that effulgent glow of beautiful mellow light that softly draped and enfolded the entire gigantic scene.

Even the racket of the guns seemed to die down and the carnage to shrink.

It was the same cold wonderful moon, but on that night it seemed like the eye of God from which there flowed too much light for armies to go on with their killing unashamed.

CLUNG TO BARE SURFACE.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Sept. 16.—"You Italians become more obstinate than any Germans," said a captured Austrian officer, who seemed unable to believe in the possibility of any troops in the world resisting the fury and pertinacity of the Austrian counterattacks on San Gabriele during the last few days.

The Italian infantry, unable, without time and mining materials, to prepare shelters for themselves on the solid, rocky slopes of the newly acquired territory which is swept by furious wind and rainstorms, hold on to the surface of the mountain like animals native to the soil, their worn, sunfaded uniforms blending with the color of the bare, stony mountain side.

Day and night they repel the attacks of the foe, who are ordered to retake the San Gabriele positions at any cost, have resorted to every crafty tactic the Teutonic mind is capable of devising, such as creeping upon the defenders in Italian uniforms and, when taken prisoners and disarmed, attacking with concealed bombs the few Italian soldiers who could be spared to convoy them to the rear and safety.

The Italian troops reached San Gabriele by spreading from the saddle of Dol and up by way of the Gagaro basin to Monte Santo, whence, like the tentacles of a gigantic octopus, their lines crept around Veliki and passed along the ridge joining Veliki to San Gabriele. The Austrians, who realized then that the most important point of their system of mountain fortifications was slipping from their grasp, concentrated on San Gabriele streams of fresh troops and a rain of artillery fire from Tarnova woods and the neighboring slopes of Santa Catarina Mountain. They fought with the ferocity and desperation of a wounded tiger to dislodge the Italians before these could have time to consolidate their conquest, knowing that San Gabriele was the stepping stone to the capture of Vipacco Mountain, which will obviate the necessity of the Italians making a frontal attack on the Hermada, barring the road to Trieste.

REPULSE GERMANS IN YPRES SECTOR

British Guns Smother Attempts to Attack Trenches Near Langemarck.

GERMANS FAIL AT VERDUN

Driven Back to Their Trenches After an Assault on Positions Near Caurieres Wood.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—German troops, after a heavy bombardment of British trenches north of Langemarck, this morning attempted an infantry attack, which was frustrated by a counterbarrage. Near Chérisy, in the Arras sector, the British last night raided the German trenches, completely wrecking dugouts and other defenses.

Although the weather yesterday was unfavorable for air fighting, British aviators brought down six German machines. Four British airplanes failed to return.

Following is the official statement issued tonight:

During the night the enemy raided our trenches in the neighborhood of the Ypres-Comines Canal and east of Messines. A few of our men are missing. In the morning the enemy heavily bombarded our trenches north of Langemarck. His infantry attempted to advance, our counterbarrage opened immediately, and no hostile attack developed.

There was considerable artillery activity on both sides in the Ypres sector.

On Saturday the weather did not improve. A strong west wind still rendered difficult the return of our machines from bombing raids and fighting behind the enemy's lines. Artillery and photographic work continued, and three tons of bombs were dropped on two hostile airdromes east of Courtral, an airdrome and ammunition dump northeast of Cambrai and hostile billets and hutments. Six German machines were brought down in the air fighting, and two were brought down out of control. Four of our machines are missing.

The afternoon report says:

Following their successful raid yesterday afternoon west of Chérisy, our troops raided enemy trenches in this neighborhood a second time last night and penetrated the German positions as far as the wes ern outskirts of Chérisy. We captured a few more prisoners and two machine guns. Our casualties were again slight. In addition to the prisoners taken by us and the enemy's casualties in wounded, over seventy Germans were killed in the course of these two raids. His dugouts and defenses were completely wrecked.

During the night a hostile party attacked one of our posts north of Lens, but was driven off.

Early this morning the enemy counterattacked north of Inverness Copse in an endeavor to retake the strong point captured by us yesterday in this area. This attack also was repulsed.

Germans' Verdun Attack Fails.

PARIS, Sept. 16.—French batteries north of Verdun today repulsed a German attack on positions north of the Caurières Wood, says tonight's War Office report, the text of which follows:

On the Aisne front the two artilleries were quite active in the region of Braye-en-Laonnois and Cerny. On the right bank of the Meuse the Germans delivered a new attack on our positions north of the Caurières Wood. Our fire, directed with precision, compelled the enemy to retire in the direction of the trenches which they had left. On the left bank of the Meuse there was lively artillery fighting in the region of Le Mort Homme.

The text of the afternoon report follows:

Northwest of Rheims a strong attack by the enemy against our posts in the region of Loivre was repulsed by our fire. The artillery fighting was rather severe in the sector between Maisons de Champagne and Massiges, with no infantry action. On the remainder of the front the night was calm.

Berlin Admits Loss Near Ypres.

BERLIN, Sept. 16, (via London.)—British troops attacked the German lines yesterday in the region of the Ypres-Menin Road and near Chérisy. Today's official statement says the attacking troops were thrown back except at one point north of the Ypres-Menin Road, where they forced their way into the German line on a small front.

Flanders Front: The artillery activity was varied in extent, being especially intense at the Ypres-Menin Road, where violent waves of fire were directed against our fighting zone. Several British battalions attacked there, but the assault collapsed almost everywhere with heavy losses. North of the road the enemy forced his way into our foremost trenches on a breadth of about a company.

Southeast of Arras the enemy's fire suddenly increased to the greatest intensity in the afternoon. After creating an artificial fog, the British broke forth on a front of 1,500 meters near Chérisy. Flamethrowers and armored cars were used to make a way for the storming troops. Our powerful defense with artillery and machine guns broke down the enemy's thrust. Where the enemy reached our trenches he was thrown back in hand-to-hand fighting. At the same point the enemy repeated the attack shortly before nightfall. Again the attack broke down with heavy losses.

The supplementary statement from General Headquarters this evening reads:

GAS STIRS LENS ARTILLERYMEN

CANADIAN HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Sept. 16.—Early this morning, after a heavy preliminary bombardment with trench mortars and artillery, the Germans attempted to capture one of the Canadian outposts in the St. Laurent sector of Lens, but were driven off. A considerable quantity of gas was projected a little before dawn into the enemy's cellars in Lens. The Germans came back like angry wasps. A large part of the Canadian front was subjected to intense shell fire, and a second attempt was made to drive in the outpost line, but without success.

The renewed activity of the enemy indicates a desire to regain the higher ground on the west front of the city so as to alleviate conditions that are nearly intolerable.

So numerous were the cases of extraordinary courage, resourcefulness, and self-sacrifice of the battle of Lens that it has been found necessary to recognize them by awarding an exceptional number of military medals to the men who so distinguished themselves. The corps orders yesterday contained the names of almost ninety men from Western Canada thus honored.

DECORATE AMERICANS FOR HOSPITAL WORK

PARIS, Sept. 16.—Justin Godart, Under Secretary for the Army Medical Service, yesterday visited the Château in the Department of Yonne, where the French Hospital of New York has conducted a military hospital of 250 beds since early in 1916. After a luncheon the administrator of the hospital, long a resident of Brooklyn, spoke of the origin of the work, which was supported at first by Mrs. William Fitzgerald of New York and now by Henry Walter of Baltimore.

After an eloquent tribute to America's service to the French wounded, M. Godart expressed regret that he was unable to bes ow the Legion of Honor on Major Culler, head physician, as the latter is a member of the American Army and the decoration must be reserved until it can be given with the consent of Major Culler's Government.

Medals of public instruction were given to Dr. John Irwin and Dr. Thomas Savage, who have served since the hospital was started. Other medals were given to Ruby Rodgers, Sister Leonore, Nurses O'Reilly and O'Connor, Isabel Adams, Flora Dixon, Anna Crowley, Teresa Gourley, and Mrs. Grace Wright.

The hospital probably is the only one in France supported by private funds to the last details of equipment and the last gallon of gasoline for transport.

AMBULANCE MEN WOUNDED

But Shell Injuries of Bently and Ricks, Americans, Are Slight.

PARIS, Sept. 16.—Paul Bently of Chicago and Carson Ricks of Eureka, Cal., both members of the American Field Service, were wounded on Friday. A shell struck the automobile in which they were riding. Both were taken to a hospital at the front. Their injuries are not serious.

The Use of Voluntary Trusts

THROUGH a voluntary trust you can arrange immediately for the support and protection of those dependent upon you.

A voluntary trust takes effect during the maker's lifetime. A testamentary trust, on the other hand, is one that is created by a will, and becomes effective only after the maker's death.

If you wish to be relieved from the care of your securities or other property, because of absence, or other reasons such as advancing years, you may create a trust for your own benefit.

If you are interested in deserving charities, by creating a trust while living you may have the satisfaction of seeing the results of your benevolence.

We shall be glad to discuss with you, either personally or by mail, the various forms of voluntary trusts.

GERMAN PRISONER ENRAGED AT AMERICANS

Special to The New York Times.

ORANGE, N. J., Sept. 16.—The rage of German prisoners because they believed the American soldiers were taking part in the recent French offensive is told by Samuel Harold Owen, an ambulance driver, in a letter to his parents in Maplewood.

"One of the German prisoners, on seeing 'A. R. C.' on the ambulances, thought American soldiers were in the attack, and said: 'D— the Americans!' to which I replied: 'D— the Kaiser!'" said Mr. Owen in his letter.

"The German soldier got red, and made a motion as if to strike me. A French guard asked me if I wanted him to kill the German, and he would if I had said yes, but, naturally, I didn't.

"The prisoners as a rule are a young, starved, quiet bunch. They tell me that the war will end as soon as America gets her aviation going. They say it will end in 1918, and I pray to God it will."

Mr. Owen left in May with the Hobart College unit of the American Ambulance Corps, and is in service on the western front. He told of narrow escapes when his machine was struck by shells and gas waves were projected against the part of the front where he was on duty.

GERMAN AVIATOR IS LOST.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 16.—A German military aviator, Verner Nissen, is reported to have perished in an attempt to go from Hamburg to the German town of Warnemunde, on the Baltic.

Permanence of the Partial Payment Plan

Seven years ago the Partial Payment Plan of purchasing New York Stock Exchange securities was first put before the American investment public. Year by year it grew in favor and increased in scope until a score of responsible firms and institutions were using it to interest an ever-growing army of investors.

The War Loan campaign of education has brought to the attention of a new army of investors the advantages of "investing while you save."

Our investment department has made up a diversified selection of Partial Payment purchases to suit any monthly savings capacity from $5 to $1,000.

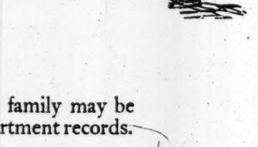
How one man is fulfilling his duty to home and country



FINE patriotism and thoughtful foresight for family may be read between the lines in one of our Trust Department records.

A young business man made up his mind to drive an ambulance in France, and before he left for the front he turned his whole fortune into Liberty Bonds. He then made a trust agreement with us, under which we have taken over the entire management of these investments.

Each month we are to send a certain sum to his mother and sisters, to maintain them in the comfort to which they have been used.

The rest of his income is to be placed in his bank account, on which he can draw drafts either while abroad or when in this country. When the young man comes home he may at once take charge of his affairs, if he wishes.

If the care of your family and your property stands between you and your services to your country, come in and talk to our Trust Department officers. We may be able to show you how we can relieve you and your dependents of all worry about the management of your financial affairs.

The Difference Between Dollars and Ideas

You have a dollar.
I have a dollar.
We swap.
Now you have my dollar.
And I have yours.
We are no better off.

• • •

You have an idea.
I have an idea.
We swap.
Now you have two ideas.
And I have two ideas.

• • •

That's the difference.

• • •

There is another difference. A dollar does only so much work. It buys so many potatoes and no more. But an idea that fits your business may keep you in potatoes all your life. It may, incidentally, build you a palace to eat them in!

• • •

It was some such philosophy as this that brought the magazine SYSTEM into being sixteen years ago. SYSTEM was (and is) a swapping-place for business ideas. In it, the man whose happy thought made his store a mint told his secret. Another revealed easy office economies; another knew how to get freight claims paid promptly; another handled salesmen with wisdom; a bank drummed up new accounts prettily; some chap in Oregon trained postcards to trot home with orders. Month by month these discoveries poured into the SYSTEM hopper and were printed. Subscribers used the ideas and prospered.

SYSTEM grew.

It became a great institution.

A second publication—FACTORY—was started, exclusively for new ideas in plant management.

Out of the mass of ideas there began to crystallize groups, classes, clusters of facts about certain topics. Finally, nothing smaller than a book would hold some of these crystallizations.

The company began publishing books on the knacks of salesmanship, on writing business letters that bring back the bacon, on keeping up with rising costs, ways to win the jobber and the retailer, how to heighten the efficiency of the man you see in the mirror every morning, how to settle strikes, and things like that.

The books grew.

Then there were other topics—such as office management, the operating cost of banks, time-studies in different handicrafts — that needed something more than a book and different in form.

Special reports appeared—voluminous, technical, with tabulations and charts, based on field investigations edited by experts; sold at rather stiff prices to a comparatively small clientele. These reports are in demand; more are coming.

Other idea-groups were of a kind best handled by correspondence teaching. One instance is the course in retail merchandising, to build which the experience of merchants and sales directors was collected for thirteen years.

This course, which 3472 well-to-do retailers are now studying, consists of records that keep track of goods in stock, and at the same time prevent overbuying; move those goods across the counter; head off too much giving of credit; make you a diligent and successful collector of money due; give you a wary eye on insurance, payroll and other "overheads;" enable you to deal with banks and jobbers and manufacturers in their own clean-cut way; afford you a bird's-eye view of your business at any moment—and in general substitute all-the-time-knowing for now-and-then-knowing-plus-guessing.

More such courses are being prepared.

While these various things evolve, SYSTEM and FACTORY keep on printing new and newer business practicalities every month. These are the daily food, the protoplasm, from which grew, and grow, books, reports, courses; and from which other good things will proceed in the fulness of time.

• • •

The "SYSTEM idea" ramifies.

Some ten years ago Englishmen, interested in the idea, began to demand to be let in on SYSTEM's plan of pooling business experience.

So British SYSTEM was started in 1907. It draws material from both English and American sources. It has its own offices, editors, research men, advertising staff, and administration in London. In the far-off peaceful days before August 1914 it published the same valuable class of matter its American sponsor did; when war broke out it began supplying just the facts Britons needed to meet new and unprecedented business jolts.

Or take farming.

A farm, to make money, must be run like any other business. Facts, figures and energy-saving knacks are wanted by the American crop-manufacturer. He said so. He began to be heard from, as the British business man had been.

So SYSTEM ON THE FARM, a magazine of the business side of agriculture, has just been started—a large, handsome publication, edited by practical hands that carry the plow's callous.

• • •

You have a dollar; I have a dollar; we trade; neither is richer. We exchange ideas—at once both are richer. What you gave you have. What you get I did not lose.

There is nothing new about pooling knowledge. It is old as speech. Yet, as applied to modern business, the pooling has been so strikingly the work of one set of publications that, fairly enough, it is called the "SYSTEM idea."

How does it work for its originators? Have the exponents of success been successful themselves?

The A. W. Shaw Company, publisher of SYSTEM and its allied prints, gives employment to 1042 people, and for the sake of ampler room is soon to house its main force at Chicago in a building of its own. There are branches in New York, St. Louis, Boston, Detroit, Philadelphia, Cleveland, New Orleans, San Francisco, and, as stated, a complete publishing organization in London, England.

It maintains four magazines; it has published 65 books on business topics, and of these 2,055,120 copies have been distributed so far. There are now in preparation 35 new books and special reports.

In its own field the A. W. Shaw Company is not only unapproached as a source of fresh, timely, clear, usable information, but is by far the largest publisher of business literature in the world.

SYSTEM and the other magazines are on sale at most newsstands. They, as well as the books, are also sold by Macy, Brentano's, Wanamaker, Henry Malkan, Frederick Loeser & Company (Brooklyn) and other leading stores; or a postcard to A. W. Shaw Company's New York book office, Park Row Building, will bring a representative with prices and full information.

ALL SEEK AN END TO SEDITION MIXUP

FRIENDS OF IRELAND JOIN IN

Secretary Moore Calls It "Politics" —Foreman Konta Says Cleveland Moffett Will Be Heard.

The tempest which has gathered over the failure of the Grand Jury to bring in indictments for sedition following its supposed investigation of soapbox oratory in this city threatens to break in the Criminal Courts Building today, when a number of interested persons go there with the declared intention to putting an end to the shifting of responsibility and forcing a showdown. The Grand Jury declared it could find no indictments because it had no evidence; the American Defense Society will send complete stenographic reports of meetings broken up by the police; District Attorney Swann and Judge McIntyre of General Sessions have decided that, after all, the City Magistrates had better treat with the problem, but Foreman Alexander Konta of the Grand Jury will insist on the Grand Jury's continuing the investigation.

On top of this mixup John D. Moore, national Secretary of the Friends of Irish Freedom, stated last night that he was going to appear before the Grand Jury and tell them all about how District Attorney Swann and Judge McIntyre were playing politics. It may come as a surprise to Mr. Moore to know that several days ago a request was made by a member of the Grand Jury that Moore be supoenaed after a letter he wrote the jury, but this was not done. The job of supoenaeing Mr. Moore would naturally fall upon the District Attorney's office.

Foreman Konta said last night at the Manhattan Club that Mr. Moore and Cleveland Moffett of the Vigilantes of the American Defense Society would most certainly be heard, as would any one else who wished to present evidence of seditious speaking on the streets of New York. Incidentally, it was learned that in the investigation conducted by the Grand Jury, as the result of which it would find no indictments, there was just one witness, Deputy Police Commissioner Godley. It doesn't make any difference to Mr. Konta that the District Attorney thinks that the Federal authorities or the City Magistrates should tackle the problem. He feels that he is still foreman of the Grand Jury.

The hearing of Mr. Moffett is awaited with interest. He went to the Criminal Courts Building last Thursday expecting to tell what he knew about seditious speaking, and he carried with him stenographic reports of the speeches at the meetings of the Friends of Irish Freedom, with the names of the speakers and the time and place. Moffett charges that Assistant District Attorney Minton told him that it was the desire of the District Attorney's office that he not appear before the Grand Jury. Mr. Moffett insists that he was requested to do so by the Grand Jury. Mr. Swann on Saturday, after deciding that the whole thing should be left to the Federal authorities or the Magistrates, sent a letter to Mr. Moffett asking him to be at the Criminal Courts Building at 10:30 o'clock this morning. He also sent such a letter to Commissioner Godley.

Saturday Mr. Swann issued statements asserting that Mr. Konta was born a subject of Austria, and declaring that he had attacked the presentment prepared by Mr. Konta as being against the best interests of the country. There has been much mysterious talk about this presentment. Mr. Swann advised against its being made public, and Judge McIntyre refused to receive it. It is supposed to point out that there is practically no means in this country for the punishment of sedition. It was the District Attorney's belief that such a statement by an American Grand Jury would be an encouragement to sedition. In fact, he characterized it as a "cablegram to Berlin."

The developments have not tended to induce to co-operation between the District Attorney and the Foreman of the Grand Jury. It was learned last night from a source that ought to be authoritative that the fact that Mr. Swann had set 10:30 this morning as the time for sedition witnesses to go to the Criminal Courts Building might result in their not being heard at that time. There will in all probability be "an immediately important case being considered that will postpone the hearing of the sedition witnesses. However, Mr. Konta made it very plain that they would be heard. Of course, if the Grand Jury finds any indictments they must be prosecuted by the District Attorney.

Chief Magistrate McAdoo said last night that he would probably prepare a public statement on the question of putting the matter of sedition up to the Magistrates today. He added that he had expected to go before the Grand Jury last week and had been prepared to give his opinions but had been told at the Criminal Courts Building that the Grand Jury had not asked for him. Mr. Moore issued a characteristic statement last night in which he saw the factor of politics entering into the question of sedition, in which, of course, the Friends of Irish Freedom are deeply interested.

"We want the question of free speech thrashed out fairly and squarely in the open," he said. "We want a jury trial for our speakers. On the other hand, the Fusion city administration and the Tammany county officers are trying to get the soapbox into politics. They have made a tango-tiger combination, which is working overtime to force us to be tried by one man of their section instead of by a jury of twelve.

"Judge McIntyre, elected on the Tammany ticket, demanded indictments against us in three separate, savage charges to the Grand Jury. Tammany's District Attorney, Swann, announced his eagerness to prosecute us and detailed a special assistant for this purpose. Fusion's Deputy Police Commissioner and other hostile witnesses spent days before the Grand Jury, and the result of it all was that, in a verbal battle with Judge McIntyre in open court, Foreman Konta had to confess that no evidence had been presented to himself and his twenty-two fellow jurors which would warrant the necessary twelve of them indicting us.

"Why did they all switch yesterday? Why does Tammany's District Attorney, Swann, after failing to dragoon the Grand Jury, say that 'If such cases were presented to a petit jury the result would be acquittals,' and then suggest that the Fusion Magistrates dispose of such offenses in a summary way? Why did Judge McIntyre, who but a day or two before had described to the Grand Jury his own success as Assistant District Attorney in prosecuting offending speakers, announce that 'The Magistrates are as good as any to handle these cases'? Why did sedition become 'disorderly conduct' overnight? Will Judge McIntyre, Tammany's District Attorney, Swann, and Foreman Konta explain why a Fusion Magistrate is now called on to convict us after they themselves have publicly confessed that no jury would find us guilty? If twelve men won't convict us, why should one, unless he had been hand-picked for the job?

"If Mr. Swann thinks Mr. Konta's Grand Jury failed to indict because the foreman may not happen to be a good American, I invite him to lay our case before the additional Grand Jury which is now in session. Tomorrow morning I am going to ask both of these Grand Juries to hear me and every other witness, both friendly and unfriendly, whose names are known to us. We have nothing to hide."

Assistant District Attorney Dooling, when asked to discuss the day's developments in the sedition situation, said, "I do not see where politics plays any figure in this matter."

ROOSEVELT INDORSES BIBLE DISTRIBUTION

Says People Should Support Plan to Send New Testaments to All Soldiers and Sailors.

The American Bible Society has received a letter from Colonel Theodore Roosevelt indorsing the plan to give to each of our soldiers and sailors a copy of the New Testament. Colonel Roosevelt's letter follows:

"I now know well the work of the American Bible Society, especially as regards its efforts to furnish Testaments to our soldiers and sailors in the present war. I am informed that you have just agreed to give the National War Work Council of the Young Men's Christian Association 1,000,000 New Testaments which they will distribute. I know that you have already, since the war began, printed and sent out for distribution to our soldiers and sailors nearly half a million Testaments and portions of the Scriptures. The work you have in view will necessitate an expenditure of $400,000. I very earnestly hope that the good people of the United States will furnish you the means to do this work.

"Every soldier and sailor of the United States should have a testament and the American Bible Society is the organization through which the work can be done in the best shape. The Government and the Red Cross are doing their utmost to meet the physical needs of our soldiers and sailors. The American Bible Society can supplement this work if given the funds to furnish our soldiers and sailors with portions of the Scriptures."

In addition to the Testaments now being printed, the American Bible Society is also preparing a special edition of the Bible for the soldiers with parallel columns in French and English in the hope that the Holy Bible will thus be a means for facilitating the study of French by our soldiers.

ROOSEVELT PRAISES FLIERS.

Colonel Will Make Four War Speeches In the West.

Special to The New York Times.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., Sept. 16.—"American, every one of them," commented Colonel Roosevelt today, as he spoke of the aviators whom he met at Mineola last week when he took a flight with Aviator Blakely. "They were fine specimens of manhood, and when they reach the other side and fly about with the new machines equipped with the Liberty motor, you may rest assured that we will be proud of them. Too much credit cannot be given the engineers who have given to the Government this new airplane motor. They have labored hard and long and the results of their efforts have achieved a motor of which this country can well be proud."

Colonel Roosevelt leaves here on Friday for a trip West. He will make four speeches—on the 24th at Kansas City, 27th at Racine, Wis., 28th at Minneapolis, and on the 30th at Johnstown. All will be on war matters.

LATE COMERS IN DRAFT.

Boards Announce Names of Missing Ones Who Appeared.

Local Exemption Board 12, with headquarters in the Morris High School, the Bronx, has notified the district board that the following men who were advertised as having failed to appear for examination, have since reported:

Kohlmorgan, Harry Frederick, 1,134 Union Av., in service.
Kopelin, Morris, 1,078 So. Blvd., accepted.
Formanek, F. J., 1,218 Simpson St., accepted.
Zuckerman, S., 1,112 Forest Av., in service.
Cawley, Francis J., 1,019 Trinity Av., in service.
Groenberg, J., 912 East 169th St., rejected.
Landau, Jacob, 1,310 Stebbins Av., in service.

Groeschel, Frederick, 99 Butler St.
Flesher, Charles, 595 Butler St.
Denhard, Louis H., 233A Wyckoff St.

Local Board 83, Howard and St. Mark's Avenues, Brooklyn, likewise reported that Joseph P. Connelly of 233 Utica Avenue, who was originally posted as having failed to appear, had appeared, passed the physical examination and made no claim for exemption. John Brady of 375 Pine Street, Brooklyn, wrote to THE TIMES saying that his son, John J., who was reported by Local Board 81 as having failed to appear, had been in the United States Ambulance Service, stationed at Allentown, Penn., since the beginning of last July.

THE TIMES also received a letter from Morris Walkin of 3,645 Broadway, who said that Board 146 had erroneously sent out his name among those who had failed to appear, that he had responded to the call of his board and had been discharged after examination.

PACIFISTS ARRESTED IN STORMY MEETING

RIOT PREVENTED BY POLICE

Woman Who Attacks Draft and Apologizes for Germany Is Held with the Chairman.

Special to The New York Times.

HARTFORD, Sept. 16.—Because of her seditious utterances and denunciatory remarks against President Wilson, Mrs. Annie Riley Hale of New York was arrested here this afternoon by local detectives and Federal agents, who permitted a mass meeting of the People's Council of America for Democracy and Peace to proceed rather violently for nearly an hour.

Professor Henry Wadsworth Longfellow Dana of Columbia University, who came from New York with Mrs. Hale and was to close the meeting, did not have the chance to speak or to get arrested. He was rather pale when the end came and asked if he too were under arrest. At Police Headquarters, to which the whole party, including the Chairman, Alfred E. Whitehead, was marched at the head of the big crowd, Professor Dana was informed he would not be booked, but Mrs. Hale and Whitehead were charged with breach of the peace, for which the maximum penalty is thirty day in jail and $7 fine.

When every theatre was closed to them, the pacifists held the meeting in Socialist Hall, which was crowded with men and women, about half of whom were pacifists and the others, including some soldiers and sailors, seekers for Sunday afternoon excitement. When the meeting was halted the Chairman asked everybody to leave quietly, and the detectives got their prisoners through the crowd outside with comparatively little trouble.

Stenographer Got Evidence.

Earlier there had been a conference between local and Federal agents, but it was explained later that at that time it was decided "for the sake of evidence" to permit the speaker to continue for a while longer. An official stenographer was present for the authorities. At Police Headquarters Mrs. Hale was subjected to close questioning.

The meeting had been announced as in commemoration of the 130th anniversary of the drawing up of the Constitution of the United States. In her address Mrs. Hale said she felt she had a right to "admonish" the President out of the Scriptures, because she had worked for his election. Now she did not know whether to apologize for having done so or to be proud of him. One of the best things he had ever said, in her opinion, was his remark about being "too proud to fight."

Mrs. Hale said she claimed her constitutional right to criticise the President and that because she was his personal friend, she could say what she pleased. She criticised the President for "turning away from the peace vote of the Reichstag," which she said represented the German people, adding that had this Government received this vote as it should the world would now be very near peace. The President, she said, had not answered any peace proposals until one had been made by "the greatest of all spiritual autocrats in Christendom—the Pope."

"War," the speaker declared, "is born of cowardice and based on craven imaginings. An individual is made to kill another individual with whom he has no quarrel in a conflict brought about by the trader behind the lines. It is stupid and shameful, and it is time for the world to make common cause to end this travesty. It is about time for the people to tell their rulers to stand aside, and that they themselves will make the world safe for democracy. Government must have a rebirth."

Condemns America's War.

Referring to Germany, Mrs. Hale said: "The Kaiser was frightened of being attacked when he went into Belgium, but that does not justify this country in going over to fight Germany because of a belief that fifty years hence Germany may make war on this country."

Mrs. Hale likened the Kaiser's invasion of Belgium to "what we did in Panama." Germany, she asserted, was not trying to Germanize the world. She sarcastically referred to the free speech section of the Constitution as being out of repair; declared that conscription came overnight and closed all ports of exit, whereas in Germany mothers had eighteen years' notice in which to get pacifist sons out of the country, and asserted that instructions from Washington had ordered exemption boards to turn down all claims to exemption.

Frequently cheers and some hisses had greeted the speaker. When she was ordered to stop, there was an excited rush by the audience for the platform, chairs being overturned and benches thrust aside in the dash toward the speaker, while cheering, yelling, and hissing added to the din. One man advanced down the hall shaking his fist at the speaker, declaring that she had insulted the President. For a few moments the situation looked serious, but the police and Federal agents, working together, kept the situation well in hand, and at once cleared the hall.

Acting Mayor Walter Schutz, Major John J. McMahon, commander of a battalion of the Connecticut Home Guard, which was armed and waiting, and other officials conferred with Police Chief Garrett J. Farrell, after which bonds of $500 each were accepted for the appearance in court tomorrow of Mrs. Hale and Whitehead. The prisoners left Police Headquarters to pose outside for flashlight pictures.

Before the meeting a member of the Hartford branch carried a huge red flag into the hall, which he placed on the wall beside the American flag already in place. It was allowed to remain.

WANTS POSTAL TRUCKS TO DISTRIBUTE FOOD

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Postmaster General Burleson is very anxious to obtain the enactment of legislation, as proposed in the bill introduced by Chairman Moon of the House Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, to authorize the Post Office Department to experiment in the operation of motor truck routes out of the big cities. The Postmaster General argues that the establishment of motor truck routes, for use in the delivery of parcel post packages, will add a hundred per cent. to the value of the parcel post in the vicinity of the cities where established.

"I would try out a plan," said Mr. Burleson tonight, "by which the benefits of millions of dollars spent on good roads and in development of motor vehicles may be co-ordinated with the parcel post system, so as to open up great stretches of country within easy motor distance from large cities and facilitate the delivery of food products. About many of the large cities, within a radius of fifty miles or more, there are productive districts occupied by farms and villages which are without direct postal facilities. These would be reached by the contemplated motor truck routes. By the use of motor truck routes it is believed a very large amount of food products which would otherwise be wasted or delivered only at high cost will reach large cities at reasonable cost to the consumer."

CONTINUES AID TO SAILORS.

Comforts Committee of Navy League Issues a Statement.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—The Comforts Committee of the Navy League announced today that it would continue its organization and work in supplying the sailors regardless of an effort by Secretary Daniels to "disrupt its organization." The articles will be sent to the sailors under the name of Mrs. George Dewey, the Admiral's widow, who has accepted the honorary chairmanship of the committee.

"Naval stations have received, as late as today, shipments of comfort articles sent in the name of individuals," says a statement issued by the Comfort Committee. "More than 23,000 sets of comfort garments have been distributed to men of the navy since Secretary Daniels first sought to cripple our work.

"Relying upon public opinion to sustain us in the justice and reasonableness of this course we will send the garments in Mrs. Dewey's name. We see no reason whatever to expect Mr. Daniels to take action which will interfere with this arrangement and are confident it will continue with entire satisfaction to the men of the navy and to the women enlisted with the Comforts Committee in this work.

"The fact that the delivery of articles under the name of an individual has been permitted since the issuance of Mr. Daniels's ban, strongly suggests that our opinion upon this point is not seriously disputed by the Secretary of the Navy."

McCORMICK ITALY-BOUND.

Will Visit Front There—Hopes Congress Will Send Delegation Abroad.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—Representative Medill McCormick of ChCicago left London for Paris today on his way to Rome to accept an invitation to visit the Italian front.

Mr. McCormick, it is known, greatly appreciates the courtesies extended to him by the British Government and the facilities placed at his disposal for the accomplishment of his visit to Europe. Already in the time he has been here, he says, he has seen and learned more than enough to justify his absence from America, and he hopes it will be found possible for Congress to accept invitations extended to send a delegation of this side. Such a visit, he thinks, would be useful from every point of view—to the Congressmen themselves and on their return to their constitutencies.

PRO-GERMANS BUSY AT SPARTANBURG

START RACE WAR RUMOR

Authorities Hope to Apply Military Law If Any of the Trouble Makers Are Caught.

CAMP WADSWORTH, Spartanburg, S. C., Sept. 16.—What is regarded at headquarters as a German-inspired attempt to delay the completion of the camp and indirectly the departure of troops to the front, by fomenting dissatisfaction and fear among the unskilled laborers employed in construction, was disclosed today when steps were taken to halt the activities of so-called "labor agents," presumably I. W. W.'s who have been very busy for the last three days.

A special detail of fifty men selected from companies in the Seventh and Twelfth regiments was ordered to mingle with the workers and get evidence of the attempt to persuade the workers to "lay down on the job." If sufficient evidence is obtained the offenders will be tried by the military authorities on the charge of aiding the enemy.

The methods pursued by the agents show that they are following closely the plan tried out early in June at the officers' training camp at Fort Sheridan, Illinois, when tales of the great mortality among officers oversee threatened seriously the morale of the officer candidates. Here, however, the emissiaries have concentrated their "deadly" imaginations upon the civilian workmen, particularly among the negroes.

It appears, according to men who have been approached by the agents, that the negro workmen have been informed that when the entire division is in camp here a great war on the blacks is planned as a retaliatory measure for the riots at Houston, Texas. The negroes have been told that very few of them will survive the great race riots, but that if any do escape they are to be rounded up and be used as targets for rifle practice.

Not content with the circulation of crude fabrications like the foregoing, agents, according to the testimony of several of the laborers, have made a deliberate attempt to revive "voodooism" and stir up in every way possible hostility between the whites and blacks. In some cases, where their stories have been laughed at, the agents have offered higher pay to the workmen to quit and go to work in the Middle West.

Despite the clumsiness of their work, the trouble makers, playing upon the dense ignorance and credulity of the negroes, have made a great impression.

The fact that sinister influences were at work in the camp was first revealed when numbers of the negroes began to appear at the paymaster's window and demand their pay. At the outset this was not regarded seriously because the negroes are constantly on the move from one cantonment to another. But when chance questioning brought out a few of the reasons for the wholesale exodus, an investigation established the need for immediate action.

Running true to schedule, the entire Twelfth Regiment, about 1,900 strong, commanded by Colonel Reginald L. Foster, arrived at camp before noon today. All of the men are in first-class trim. Better transportation arrangements enabled the Twelfth to reach its camp site alongside the Seventh and transfer all of its equipment within four hours, a much better record than was made by the Seventh.

The Seventh, on first leave since its arrival, swarmed into the city today and, reinforced by about 3,000 men from the sanitary troop, besieged every restaurant and hotel. Hard work, regular hours and the brisk air provided the soldiers with appetites that disposed of all the available eatables.

After the men had satisfied their hunger they sallied out in search of amusement—vaudeville, sacred concerts; anything that had a laugh in it. But they found that Spartanburg has not yet adjusted its Sunday to New York's point of view. Great disappointment was expressed by the guardsmen over the lack of "big-time" amusement.

'MARY'S ANKLE' IN CAMP.

Special to The New York Times.

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., Sept. 16.—The training students' camp officers and their relatives attended a performance of "Mary's Ankle," at the gymnasium, and gave Irene Fenwick and the company a rousing reception. The show was arranged through the courtesy of A. H. Wood, the camp furnishing the transportation, which consisted of a sleeper and baggage car, and Mr. Wood sending along sufficient scenery for the proper staging of the comedy.

Capt. J. P. Cole, of the Fifty-ninth Infantry, one of the new instructors, has been assigned to the Third Training Battery, while Capt. F. W. Boschen, Fifty-sixth Infantry, is detailed as inspector and instructor with the New England regiment.

Relatives and friends of both the New York and New England students in the Coast Artillery Company were here in large numbers today. This is the last Sunday that this company will be at Plattsburg. It goes to Fort Monroe, Va., on Saturday morning for further training.

BUILDERS IN SPURT TO FINISH BARRACKS

Special to The New York Times.

CAMP UPTON, Yaphank, L. I., Sept. 16.—With redoubled energy carpenters worked all day today in the effort to have enough barracks completed to house the 8,000 recruits reporting for duty the end of this week. While statistics have been published to show that Camp Upton is one-third complete, there are a large number of partly finished barracks that are not yet habitable, and one-third of the 40,000 men who will make up the Seventy-seventh Division could not be accommodated at the present time.

As far as the military authorities are concerned, they are merely waiting for the contractors to finish the camp. The military side of the camp has proceeded according to schedule. Many recruits have been assigned to regiments whose barracks have not yet been started. There is hardly a building ready for the artillery organizations.

To make room for the recruits arriving here the latter part of the week, several hundred workmen must be moved from the barracks they now occupy, with the result that forty buildings capable of housing 5,000 must be built within the next ten days to house the dispossessed workmen. That the construction work will keep ahead of buildings needed for the recruits, employes of the contractors at Camp Upton have no doubt.

In addition to the fact that the Yaphank camp site was approved a month later than those at other cantonments, more ground had to be cleared than at other camps. There is a further handicap in the difficulty of obtaining labor, and it was not until the middle of August that the number of workmen rose to 10,000.

There are now 11,500 workmen at camp, most of whom receive more pay than army officers. A carpenter receives $57.50 a week, or within $2.50 of the weekly pay of a Major, who has command of 1,000 soldiers. A day laborer gets almost as much as the pay of a Second Lieutenant, who has command of forty men. The cantonment is being built on the cost plus percentage basis.

One gang of men lays the floor, while four other groups build the walls on the ground and raise them into place when the floor is completed. But in almost any direction laborers are to be seen standing in their ditches, half of them idle.

"Do you see that man there?" said an officer to a reporter, "I've been watching him for an hour and he hasn't moved. Yet he gets almost as much pay as I do."

In front of Divisional Headquarters a reporter saw two laborers lay down their shovels and throw stones at a bottle placed on the top of a stump. When a company of recruits marches along a road where ditches are being dug, all work is suspended until the column passes by.

Further delays have been encountered, owing to the failure of lumber to arrive. One missing shipment of lumber which was to be delivered on freight cars at Long Island City was found to have been sent to Jersey City. There are now 450 teams of horses and 175 motor trucks in use by the contractors.

PRIEST PRAISES ARMY MEN.

Conduct of Van Cortlandt's Soldiers Excellent, He Says.

"The standard of morality of the men at this camp has won the unstinted praise of the people of Kingsbridge," said Reverend Father Thomas McGrath, at the morning mass, which was attenued by fully five hundred members of the First, Twenty-third, and Seventy-first Regiments and as many civilians at Van Cortlandt Park camp yesterday.

"In camp, in the streets, and on subway trains," Father McGrath continued, "I have met men of the three regiments on hundreds of occasions, and in not a single case have I observed any other than conduct becoming soldiers of this great nation and the thorough gentlemen you have shown yourselves to be. I wish, too, to testify to my appreciation for the officers of the regiments for the manner in which they have permitted me to serve the Catholic men of their respective commands spiritually. In this connection I might add that the chaplains of the three regiments located at this camp have been more solicitious for their Catholic comrades than for those of their own faith."

Chaplain W. T. Crocker of the Seventy-first Regiment officiated at the Protestant services, which were conducted fronting the Mansion House. He was assisted by Reverend Kenneth Buchannan, the regimental band supplying the hymnal music. Chaplain Crocker, after dwelling briefly upon the text of the day, said:

"It has always been a characteristic of the American soldier to possess an abiding confidence that the cause to which his country is committed is a just one. Certain of this, the man in the service of this nation need have no fear in the face of danger."

Colonel Bates of the Seventy-first Regiment, who acted as Brigade Commander yesterday, expressed himself as well pleased with the manner in which the two New York regiments and the First Regiment from up-State have progressed in the camp preparedness program. The Twenty-third Regiment has been granted permission to recruit without limit as to numbers, until Sept. 24. Captain Mundy, regimental adjutant, has appointed a special recruiting corps of forty-four men.

"SONG FEST" AT CAMP DIX.

Hundreds of Officers and Soldiers Take Part—Anna Held Sings.

CAMP DIX, WRIGHTSTOWN, N. J., Sept. 16.—The second quota of Jersey men for the national army will find everything in readiness for them when they begin to arrive here the middle of this week, especially the men from New Jersey, who will be the first to arrive at the camp. General Kennedy and his staff have been working hard to provide accommodations for the 5,000 or more men who are expected here in the middle of the week. As soon as they are comfortably taken care of the men from outside the State will begin to arrive, and they also will find that their wants have been well anticipated. The New Jersey men to arrive this week will be assigned to fill up the ranks of the two New Jersey infantry regiments and the one artillery regiment. The men who arrive later will mostly be assigned to the depot regiment.

The fact that it will be possible for the men of the national army to take examinations for commissions will not give the men already on the ground any preference over those who will follow with the additional quotas. General Kennedy announced this afternoon that there would be no examinations for promotions among the men until all the selected men have been at camp at least two or possibly three weeks.

The first "song fest" to be conducted at the camp was held this afternoon, with hundreds of the men and officers taking part. There was a concert and then Anna Held rendered several of her popular songs.

Between now and Thursday night the camp will become depleted, for the reason that every Jew who made the request received a furlough over the Jewish New Year holidays, beginning this evening. Many of these young men left the camp, and will spend the days at home. For those who remain here there will be special services at the camp, and none of the men will have to do any drilling or other work about the camp.

VISITORS AT CAMP MILLS.

60,000 Journey to Mineola to See Their Soldier Boys.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMP MILLS, MINEOLA, L. I., Sept. 16.—Conveyances of every description were pressed into service today to bring to the camp of the "Rainbow Division" a crowd estimated by the commander of the military police at approximately 60,000. The 165th Infantry was not the only regiment favored by the throng, and hundreds of motor cars bearing travelers arrived here from points in Pennsylvania, Virginia, Maryland, and Illinois. A trail of rice was found on the road leading to the camp of the 165th because Miss Mary Gertrude O'Brien of 523 West 151st Street, Manhattan, had been married to Michael Joseph Mulhern, a member of the regimental band, by the Rev. Francis T. Duffy, the chaplain. A store of rice had been laid in for the occasion by friends of the bridegroom and his bride, but away many pounds when he left with his bride for a two-day furlough—oneymoon.

According to the schedule ordered by Major Gen. William A. Mann, commander of the Forty-second Division, head of a committee which plans to lease dwellings in the neighborhood of the camps for the use of relatives of the soldiers.

URGES ALLIES TO PEACE BY VICTORY

ceedingly high wages in war industries, are in no sense revolutionary. All those acquainted with conditions in Germany are absolutely agreed that such events as have lately taken place in Russia are, so far as can humanly be foretold, out of the question in Germany, at any rate for the present. If anything could help the German Democrats to win a victory, it would be a German defeat.

Seventh—As for the German majority Socialists, they are not thinking about creating a revolution. It was not until the long duration of the war made it impossible for them to continue hoping for a speedy German victory that they resigned themselves to renouncing annexations. In the early days of the war the majority Socialist Dr. David was explaining his peace terms to the present writer, and they were virtually identical with those which Bethmann Hollweg announced in Januruy, 1917.

Bernhard's Fanatical Germanism.

Eighth—Now, it is just these German majority Socialists who are leaving no stone unturned to bring about the Stockholm conference, and another of its zealous advocates is the influential managing editor of the Vossische Zeitung, Georg Bernhard, a renegade imbued with the most fanatical hatred of England, a man whose chief aim it is to cut her off completely from all the Continental nations, and bring them, by fair means or foul, under the domination of Germany. On Aug. 8, 1914, this man actually assured me in so many words that it was Germany's lawful vocation to be the predominant power in Europe.

Ninth—It is clear, therefore, that Germany and the German majority Socialists intend that the Stockholm conference shall be utilized to split up the Allies and to diffuse doubts and discouragement among them. What they aim at doing is to divide in order to rule, to quote the old Roman proverb, or, in other words, to fish in troubled waters.

Tenth—The inference to be drawn from all these facts is that the Entente nations must not look to the impotent German democrats nor to the dubious Stockholm conference, but only to their own unity and determination to defend themselves against Germany's overpredominance. In this way, and in this only, can they escape forever the horrors of being forcibly domineered over by an abominable, blood-thirsty, military caste.

FIGHTING FOR THEIR FOES.

German Editor Tells Countrymen They Are Forging Their Own Chains

Dr. Hermann Rösemeier, formerly political editor of the Berliner Morgenpost, who resigned early in the war because he declined to support his Government's policies, succeeded in 1916 in leaving Germany and is now living in Switzerland with his family. He has written a pamphlet, entitled "A German to Germans," addressed particularly to the working classes, many copies of which, despite the vigilance of the German authorities, have been circulated in the Fatherland, and even among the soldiers at the front.

The authorship of the book, "J'Accuse," containing bitter denunciation of Germany, has been frequently attributed to Dr. Rösemeier, but it has never been established that he wrote it.

In a chapter entitled "What Are You Germans Fighting For?" Dr. Rösemeier presents his scathing arraignment of German militarism:

"Government and press still continue to cheat and deceive the German nation, persisting in telling it that Germany's 'enemies' want to 'destroy' her. Possibly there may be some crazy chauvinists in France, or crazy jingoes in England, or crazy Pan-Slavists in Russia who cherish such dreams. Germany has not the monopoly of madmen. But no reasonable person, whether in England, France, Russia, or Italy, thinks of wanting to destroy Germany. Quite recently the Italian Reformed Socialist Canepa, a zealous supporter of the war, declared that Germany's thirst for domineering over other nations and forcing them to do her bidding could not for a moment be tolerated, but that no one denied 'great Germany' (his very words) that place in the light and the sun which was her due. M. Briand in the French Chamber of Deputies, Mr. Asquith in the English House of Commons, and M. Sasonoff in the Russian Duma have repeatedly insisted that it is Prussian militarism which must be combated.

"It will be urged that that is the business of the German people, and has nothing to do with Messrs. Sazonoff, Asquith, and Briand. It is certainly not the business of Russian, French, or English Ministers to liberate the German people. Prussian militarism, in so far as it oppresses the Prussian and the German peoples, undoubtedly concerns Germany alone; but, her armies being in Flanders, Poland, Courland, Serbia, it concerns all Europe, and the Ministers of the Entente would be guilty of gross dereliction of duty were they not to exert themselves to the utmost to free not only their own countries but Europe from this nightmare.

Not "Fighting for Existence."

"The deluded German people is fighting not for its existence, and not for its proper place in the council of nations. It is fighting for the phantom of the foremost position in the world, of which a whole host of unfortunately only too influential persons think they have caught a glimpse—dreamers, fortune-hunters, speculators, and adventurers. It is likewise fighting for the very practical object of the setting up of a relentless and unscrupulous reign of brute force in its own country.

"The first object has well-nigh vanished. In reality the period of visions of world domination was already over when the battle of the Marne was fought, and the 'Go for them, boys' Crown Prince, who in his haste to attack had forgotten his ammunition, was woefully thrashed, when in September, 1914, his grotesquely grandiose plan of brutally falling upon France and crushing her to death fell to pieces, like a house of cards, and old Häseler had to spend the anniversary of Sedan not in the Café de la Paix in Paris, but in a little 'pub' in an out of the way Argonne village. The war party, however, is as yet unhappily a long way from abandoning the hopes and plans which it built upon the outbreak of the world war.

"The hard-won liberties of the German people, in short, are in danger of having to be won all over again after the war. Not only are many restrictive measures in force, such as press censorship and limitation of the right of free speech and free public meeting—measures which in wartime are doubtless necessary—but every effort is being made by the powerful reactionary elements in Germany to continue press censorship and other infringements of ordinary liberties even after the war. Absolutism, naked and unashamed, has established itself anew, leaving the mass of people merely the right to grant millions and millions of money for investment in such appliances of destruction as poisonous gases and submarines. The soldier lords it over the civilian. It must not be objected that this is altogether too black a picture, for in the various Diets and in the Reichstag not only members of the Social Democrat minority but out-and-out Government supporters have given just such a description of matters as they are now in the German Empire.

"Fighting for Factory Magnates."

"German people, when will you awake from your sleep? When will your eyes be opened and when will you cease to be patient as lambs? Do you still not realize that it is for your deadliest enemies that you are fighting? You are fighting for the factory magnates who would fain crush your organizations under foot. You are fighting for the lords of the soil, who send up the prices of every morsel you put into your mouths. You are fighting for the speculators fattening upon your poverty. You are fighting for an officers' corps whose ranks are sealed up so that your sons cannot enter them. You are fighting for a Government which is the tool of your oppressors.

"You are fighting for an Emperor who, as Bismarck foresaw and foretold, by his irresponsible, boundlessly ambitious foreign policy has brought about the fatal tension between Germany and England, and whose thoughtless, defiant speeches have created the atmosphere of suspicion and distrust which weighed heavily on Europe long before this war. You are fighting for a Crown Prince of Prussia for whom the war is a pleasant excitement; for a Crown Prince of Bavaria who is not ashamed to utter scarcely veiled hints that defenseless prisoners should be murdered, and for a whole pack of princely families who are a useless burden upon the country's purse. You are fighting for a General Staff and an Admiralty whose cruel and barbarous methods of warfare, in flagrant violation of international law, have made your once good name abhorred by all the world of today and will make it abhorred by that of tomorrow. You are fighting that the rule of the Prussian Junker may be strengthened anew and that the Prussian corporal's stick may thrash out of the men of Southern and Western Germany what little freedom and individuality they have with difficulty succeeded in preserving. In brief, you are fighting for the perpetuation of your own slavery."

BOUILLON PROMISES FREE CZECH STATE

Member of French Cabinet Says Slovak Army Is Now Being Formed.

ASKS FOR VOLUNTEERS HERE

Allies Intend to Erect Independent Nation from Residents in Hungary, He Tells Mass Meeting.

Henri Franklin Bouillon, newly-named member of the French Cabinet, told 3,000 Czecho-Slovaks at a mass meeting in Carnegie Hall yesterday afternoon that the Allies intended the formation after the war of a separate and independent Czech State in Europe. He did not say to what extent this plan involved the dismemberment of Austria, most of the Czecho-Slovaks being residents of Hungary. His declaration was greeted with wild applause.

To the end that the Central Powers might be crushed the sooner, he urged Czechs in this country who could not become members of the fighting forces of the United States to go to France and join the new Slovak army being formed there. This force is made up, in large part, from members of Austrian regiments captured by the French and English, who have signified their desire to join in crushing their former Imperial masters. There are in it also Czecho-Slovaks from all the Allied countries and room for those from America. He said that the autonomy of this division would be preserved throughout the war, and intimated he believed its formation would result in further large additions from the ranks of the Austrian Army.

M. Bouillon, who is about to leave the United States to take up his new duties in Paris, delivered a scathing indictment of those in this country who now talk for peace.

"To those in this country who talk for premature peace," he said, "let me answer that we of the nations who have fought for three years, we who have lost millions, we whose lists of dead are so long, we say there will be no peace before we have full victory."

The mass meeting was held under the auspices of the Bohemian National Alliance and the Slovak League of America. Mayor Mitchel presided.

To Guard Against Disunion.

In opening his address, M. Bouillon said that France could not forget that forty years ago when she was attacked by Germany the Government of the Slovaks was the Government that protested. In referring to the Czech army he said that it gave to the Slovaks of the world the one great chance to fight for the liberation of their peoples.

"We stand at the beginning of the fourth year of the war," he said, "and what is our motto now? It is simply, 'Watch and Fight!'

"We must watch among ourselves lest the spirit give way for a moment. I say to the Allies that we cannot come through victoriously unless the spirit of unity is maintained. We cannot, we must not, be disunited. Either we unite and we win, or we disunite and we are conquered.

"It seems incredible that after three years of war we should be facing such a stream of propaganda to disunite us as we are facing today. And this is why the Germans are pursuing their propaganda so hard in every one of our countries. It is because they know they cannot win, and they seek a peace now. They have sense enough to know that the possibility of their winning has gone if the Allies stand together.

"It, three years ago when they were at their full strength, when they outnumbered two to one those against them, they were crushed back, how can they win now? The world has come to understand what was the cause of the war. The Germans are no fools. They know that if we stay united they can't win. Therefore, the Germans have but one chance, and that is to sow discord among the Allies. They are doing what for them is right when they are spending all their money and all their efforts to poison public opinion among our peoples, in manufacturing a cry for a premature peace.

"I say to the pacifists, 'You stand against militarism, against this business of war. Then stand against Germany, whose only business for half a century has been war.' The victory of Germany means militarism for all time. I say to the pacifist, 'Peace without victory means militarism forever.'

Czech Regiment Remained Loyal.

"And the work of the German propagandists—look at the result. We no longer have to speculate on what they can do. Look at poor Russia. There the German agents asked 'Why fight?' and at the same time were preparing their attack. I say that if we do not crush Germany now, there will be no peace for Russia or for any one. And let me say in those dark days when the Russian regiments were deserting, there stood in the way of the advancing Germans one Czech regiment, and when the officers ordered them to retreat, they said, 'No, if the time has come to die, then we will die.' And they died to a man.

"Now in this very place you can hear the cries of your people back in Europe under the oppression of Austria. It is your duty to fight with and for the Allies. I say to you, it is the Slovak nation now or never. Fight for the Allies, and you fight for the Slavs in Russia, in Poland, and in Austria. You fight for your own people when you help the Allies to restore the smaller nationalities of Europe."

After his address, Mr. Bouillon was asked if his statement that "It is the Slovak nation now or never" meant that the Allies were determined upon the establishment of a Slovak nation in Europe. He said that was what was intended.

"Just what peoples would be included?" he was asked.

"As you know, practically all of them live in Hungary," he replied.

Mayor Mitchel paid a high tribute to the good citizenship of the Czech-Slovaks in this country. He said that from the 2,000,000 of them in this country had come a very large percentage of the volunteers in the fighting forces of the country.

"The only hope of the small nations lies in the victory of democracy, the victory of the Allies," Mayor Mitchel said. "You will not fail in your sympathy for the allied cause, because, as Americans, it is your cause, and because it means for your oppressed relatives in Europe a freedom that cannot come to them unless the Allies win."

The Mayor introduced Captain M. R. Stefanik of the French Aviation Service, who is Vice President of the Czecho-Slovak National Council, with headquarters in London. Captain Stefanik made a plea to his hearers to go to France and join the Czech army to fight for the freedom of the race.

At the close of the meetings a telegram was sent to President Wilson and a cable message to President Poincaré, pledging to them anew the firm support of the Czecho-Slovaks in America.

TO PUSH ALLIES' TEAM WORK.

New French Minister Defines Functions of His Department.

Henri Franklin Bouillon, the new Minister of Missions in the French Cabinet and President of the Radical party in France, explained last night that the purpose of the new post created in the French Cabinet was to shorten the duration of the war by bringing about closer co-operation among the Allies.

"This means saving time, and saving time is saving blood," was the way he phrased it.

As for the report that he was to be a "Minister of Propaganda," M. Bouillon said that was quite erroneous.

"I damn the word 'propaganda,'" he declared. He said that he was to be Minister of Inter-Allied Relations. "There should be better team-work," he said. "We shall win anyway; we shall win the more quickly if we pull together more strongly. It is the belief of the French Government that this can be accomplished with blows struck now in the right place. That is the burden placed upon my shoulders."

M. Bouillon did not share the fears expressed in some quarters that the Painlevé Cabinet would be short-lived. He said that it was a Cabinet with a purpose—a purpose of more strenuous war action. The fall of the Ribot Cabinet and the accession of that of Painlevé, he said, was analogous to the changes in England when Lloyd George gained the ascendency.

"Just as Lloyd George speeded up England," he said, "it is the purpose of the new French Cabinet to speed up France."

As for the non-participation of the Unified Socialists in the Cabinet, M. Bouillon believed that this was only temporary.

"Do not let it be believed for a moment," he said, "that this Cabinet is not of a true republican type. It is a true republican cabinet. It is to be regretted that the Unified Socialists are not represented. That is, I am sure, a temporary condition and is the result of difference of persons rather than principles, I am confident. There is no party in France which can afford not to work in accord with the new Cabinet. The fact that the Unified Socialists are not represented in the Cabinet at this time has absolutely no bearing on the conduct of the war, for every party in France, with representatives in the Cabinet or not, is pledged to fight until victory is ours.

"The reason for the change in government was that in this crisis the need of stronger men was felt. Much as France has done, it was believed she could do more."

COURSE ON MENTAL HEALTH

Six Lectures Arranged by Dr. Leipziger at Labor Temple.

Six lectures announced under the general title of "Can We Make This Country Sane for Democracy?" have been arranged for presentation by Dr. Henry M. Leipziger, Supervisor of Lectures for the Department of Education, for presentation on Thursday evenings in October and November, at the Labor Temple, Second Avenue and Fourteenth Street. All the lectures will deal with special features on the subject of mental health in war time by experts. The speakers and their topics are:

Oct. 11—George A. Hastings, Executive Secretary, Committee on Mental Hygiene of the State Charities Aid Association, "Can We Make This Country Sane for Democracy?"

Oct. 18—Dr. Charles G. Wagner, Superintendent of Binghamton State Hospital and ex-President of the American Medico-Psychological Association, "Milestones of Progress in the Case of the Insane."

Oct. 25—Dr. Walter E. Fernald, Superintendent, Massachusetts School for the Feeble-Minded, "The Social Significance of Mental Defect."

Nov. 1—Dr. Smith Ely Jelliffe, Professor of Diseases of the Mind and Nervous System, Post Graduate Hospital, N. Y. City, "Day Dreams and Thinking."

Nov. 8—Dr. Bernard Glueck, Director, Psychiatric Clinic, Sing Sing Prison, "Mental Anomalies and Crime."

Nov. 15—Dr. Ira S. Wile, member N. Y. City Board of Education, "Sex Education an Aid to Mental Health."

SAYS SWISS WILL BE NEUTRAL

Only Hope of Nation Lies in That Direction, Says Visitor.

Roger A. de Perrot, a Lieutenant of the Swiss Army Reserve, who arrived yesterday at an Atlantic port from England, said that Switzerland intended to preserve her neutrality at all hazards, because the people had learned to realize that that was the best attitude for their small country to maintain in the great war. "Our people understand," Mr. de Perrot continued, "that if they espoused the cause of the Allies the Germans would come in and eat them up before help could arrive, and if we joined forces with Germany the Allies would serve us in the same way, and there would be nothing left of our fertile lands. Up till the end of 1915 there was a general idea prevailing in Switzerland that we should enter the war on one side or the other, but that has died away in all the cantons. We want neutrality, and nothing else.

"There is not much meat in Switzerland now, and the majority of the people eat cheese almost entirely. When our trade was cut off from foreign countries there was no place where we could export the millions of tons of cheese which had been stored up, and the Government decided to feed the army on it. In the army we had half a pound of cheese served out to each man four times daily, and if a man felt hungry between meals he could always get a chunk of cheese to eat from the canteen sergeant. The soldiers soon got to like it as a steady diet. It is very healthy, too. The only trouble in living on cheese is that it takes away all desire for work, and the officers and men do nothing but sleep."

Another passenger on the same liner was a Scotchman, who described himself as the Tosh of McIntosh, and said he was on his way for a trip through Canada to visit some relatives. He went on to say there was considerable discontent among the Scottish regiments in the British Army over the order made by the War Office in London to change the Glengarry cap the officers and men have worn for nearly a century and replace it with the Tam o'Shanter.

Passengers on the ship said that the failure of the crops in Great Britain this season would mean a shortage of foodstuffs, and it was expected that bread cards would be issued, in addition to sugar cards, early in the new year.

Montague Glass Injured.

Montague Glass, playwright and author, was thrown from an automobile early yesterday morning and received lacerations of the head, hands, and face while going to his home at Beachmont, New Rochelle. Mr. Glass was in a car owned and operated by Louis W. Hitchcock, who lives in Premium, New Rochelle. According to the police, Mr. Hitchcock was blinded by the headlights of another machine as he was about to drive across the Madison Avenue Bridge. In an effort to avoid the lights he struck a telegraph pole. Mr. Glass was thrown from the car.

MORRISON PLEDGES LOYALTY OF LABOR

Secretary of American Federation Denounces All Who Are Seeking to Hinder the Government.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 16.—Labor loyalty to the Government in its war program was pledged anew this afternoon at a mass meeting in the Garrick Theatre, held under the auspices of the American Alliance for Labor and Democracy. The pledge was voiced by Frank L. Morrison, Secretary of the American Federation of Labor, after Charles Edward Russell, member of the American Commission to Russia, had advocated the continuation of the war until Germany was released from her commitment to autocracy, and urged organized labor solidly to back this country's efforts.

Mr. Morrison said the American workmen must enlist heart and soul in the support of the Government. He set at rest any possible doubt on this score when he said that in war as in peace times organized labor stood for the paramount principles of the Republic.

"The workers of this country offer themselves, individually and collectivey, in support of the Government," Mr. Morrison declared. He deprecated the activities of "small groups of labor men throughout the country who, under the guise of representing their fellow-workers, are attempting to hamper the Government."

The alliance was formed, Mr. Morrison said, to offset this movement and "to pledge organized labor against autocracy and pro-German and anti-war propaganda as evidenced in the Industrial Workers of the World, the People's Council, the radical Socialists, anti-draft, and other pacifist influences."

"The man," he said, "who after his country has declared war refuses to answer the call to the colors is no better than the man who after his union goes on strike refuses to leave his employment."

Clarence P. Darrow, who has been identified with labor interests for many years, also spoke. He attacked pacifists and said that, although he was a pacifist once and wrote a book on pacifism, he would never be a pacifist again "until the Kaiser is licked."

WOMEN'S WORK HELPED RED CROSS $36,400,000

Value of Dressings, Garments, and Knitted Articles for a Year, Says Davison.

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—The plans of the Red Cross to mobilize the generosity, enthusiasm, and patriotism of the American people during the war were described today by Henry P. Davison, Chairman of the War Council of the American National Red Cross, and George Creel, Chairman of the United States Bureau of Information.

The Red Cross is hurrying, Mr. Davison said, with food, clothes, doctors, and medicines to the stricken nations of Europe to help keep them alive until the military forces of the United States get into the firing line.

The actual work contributed by American women to the Red Cross in twelve months in making surgical dressings, hospital garments, and knitted articles, such as comfort kits and the like, has been of a commercial value of $36,400,000, Mr. Davison said. The figures were determined, he continued, by a scientific analysis. This did not include the clerical work in Europe or this country, nor the value of the time spent in other ways, Mr. Davison explained.

"The effectiveness already developed by the Red Cross in the greatest work of mercy ever undertaken by a single organization," said Mr. Davison, "is one of the finest expressions I know of the greatness and big-heartedness of the American people."

FOX HUNTERS AMBUSHED.

Two Killed and Two Wounded Is Result of Feud with Farmers.

Special to The New York Times.

FAIRMOUNT, W. Va., Sept. 16.—Three arrests were made this evening in the case of a shooting which occurred at an early hour this morning on the Henry B. Morgan farm, near Lowesville, about eight miles from here, when Harvey Hayhurst and Fernando Thorn were killed and two others slightly wounded.

William, Charles and John Keyser, young farmers, ranging in ages from 21 to 28 years, are held for further investigation. These boys have a small tract of land of their own and they also farm for William G. Morgan, whose farm adjoins the Henry Morgan farm.

About a month ago the Keyser brothers' wheat stacks were destroyed and animals were poisoned on the Morgan farms. The feud among the fox hunters and farmers had been brewing for some time, the farmers alleging that the foxes had injured the grains and that the trespassing was a menace. Last night while Heyhurst and Thorn were seated about a campfire they were fired upon and killed.

Charles Musgrove and Hayhurst's brother were wounded.

SCIENCE TO REBUILD OUR WAR CRIPPLES

GORGAS EXPLAINS SYSTEM

Every Wounded Man to be the Nation's Ward Until He Is Entirely Fit for Civil Life.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Major Gen. William C. Gorgas, Surgeon General of the Army, who is conceded to be one of the world's greatest authorities on military medicine and surgery, announced tonight an important reform in the nation's plans for dealing with wounded soldiers. From the time the soldier is wounded at the fighting front until his return to civil life the Government intends to stand by his side in an effort to prevent deformity from wounds, to refit the injured man for his place in civil life and to reconstruct him for service to himself and the State.

There will be expert orthopedic surgeons at the front not very far from the firing line to deal with his wounds soon after they are received in this effort to prevent deformity. One hundred miles behind the firing line there will be orthopedic hospitals and "curative workshops." Finally, after the man is brought back across the Atlantic to this country there will be great "reconstruction hospitals" in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, St. Louis and other large cities where the work of trying to "rebuild" the wounded men for a resumption of service in civil life will be continued.

"The whole conception of governmental and national responsibility in caring for the wounded," said Major Gen. Gorgas in an authorized statement of the Government's plans tonight, "has undergone a radical change during the months of study given the subject by experts serving with the Medical Officers' Reserve Corps and others consulting with them. Instead of the old idea that responsibility ended with the return of the soldier to private life with his wounds healed and such pension as he might be given, it is now considered that it is the duty of the Government to equip and re-educate the wounded man, after healing his wounds, and to return him to civil life ready to be as useful to himself and his country as possible.

Hospital Sites Selected.

"To carry out this idea plans are well under way for building 'reconstruction hospitals' in large centres of population. Sites have been chosen, though not all finally approved, in the following cities: Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Buffalo, Cincinnati, Chicago, St. Paul, Seattle, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Denver, Kansas City, St. Louis, Memphis, Richmond, Atlanta, and New Orleans. Those in Boston, New York, Washington, and Chicago will probably be constructed first. Each will be built as a 500-bed hospital, but with provision for enlargement to 1,000 beds if needed.

"These hospitals will not be the last step in the return of the wounded soldiers to civil life. When the soldiers are able to take up industrial training, further provision will be ready. The injured man may be retrained to his former occupation to conform with his handicapped condition or retrained for a new industry compatible with that condition. Additional education will be given to those fitted for it, and men may in some cases be returned to more valuable work than that from which they were called to war. Workshops will be provided at the hospitals, but arrangements will also be made with outside industries whereby more elaborate methods of training may be carried on. An employment bureau will be established to place men so trained in different parts of the United States.

"This whole matter comes under the Department of Military Orthopedic Surgery, recently organized in the Medical Department of the army. The following officers of the Medical Reserve Corps are in charge of the work: Major Elliott C. Brackett of Boston, Director of the Department of Military Orthopedics; Major Joel E. Goldthwait of Boston, Director of Military Orthopedics for the expeditionary forces; Major David Silver of Pittsburgh, Assistant Director of Military Orthopedics. The following, in conjunction with the above staff, compose the Orthopedic Council: Dr. Fred H. Albee of New York, Dr. G. Gwilym Davis of Philadelphia, Dr. Albert H. Freiberg of Cincinnati, Dr. Robert W. Lovett of Boston, and Dr. John L. Porter of Chicago.

"Arrangements have been made by the Department of Military Orthopedics to care for soldiers, so far as orthopedics (the prevention of deformity) is concerned, continuously until they are returned either to active service or civil life. Orthopedic surgeons will be attached to the medical force near the firing line, and to the different hospitals, back to the base orthopedic hospital, which will be established within 100 miles of the firing line. In this hospital, in addition to orthopedic surgical care, there will be equipment for surgical reconstruction and 'curative workshops,' in which men will acquire ability to use injured members while doing work interesting and useful in itself. This method has supplanted the old and tiresome one of prescribing a set of motions for a man to go through with no purpose other than to reacquire use of his injured part.

Surgeons Now Abroad.

"In addition to the American orthopedic surgeons now working abroad under Colonel Jones of England others will soon go overseas. Experienced surgeons, and a large number of younger surgeons who will work under competent directions, will go abroad for this work, all to be under the direction of Major Goldthwait. These orthopedic surgeons will work in England among the British forces, and when needed will be transferred to France to work among American soldiers.

"It is not the intention that men able to go back to the firing line shall be returned to this country unless their convalescence will extend over a period of a considerable number of months. Soldiers unable to return to duty will be sent to the reconstruction hospitals in the United States.

"Instructors and examiners for all the camps are also being furnished by the Department of Military Orthopedic Surgery. A number of older and more experienced surgeons will act as instructors and supervisors for each of the groups into which the camps will be divided; a number of orthopedic surgeons will be detailed as attending surgeons at each camp to act as examiners and as consultants to the camp's other surgeons; directions are being provided for instruction of medical officers in military orthopedic surgery, emphasis being made on foot, back and joint conditions as affecting the acceptance or rejection of recruits; and careful instruction is planned for line officers so that they will recognize the simpler orthopedic conditions and refer to the camp surgeon any men who develop them.

"Semi-monthly inspection will be made of all soldiers' feet, and camp surgeons and men detailed for the purpose will be given special instruction in care of the feet. Courses of intensive training in military orthopedic surgery are being arranged for in different universities, so that hte younger surgeons taking up the work may enter upon their duties with some special preparation. The course will occupy six weeks.

"A manual of military orthopedic surgery for use in the army has been prepared and will soon be ready for distribution."

FIVE HELD FOR MURDER.

Schaeffer's Death Followed a Quarrel Over a Woman.

Four women and a man were held by the Police of Stapleton, S. I., yesterday in connection with the killing of William Schaeffer, a chauffeur, of 300 West Tenth Street, at South Beach, S. I. Detectives are seeking for another man, who it is believed, fired the shots. Twenty-five persons who were in the dance hall at Seaside Boulevard, when Schaeffer was killed will be in the Magistrate's Court at Stapleton, this morning.

Peter Crane, proprietor of a café near Seaside Boulevard, South Beach, told the police that a party of thirty persons had been in his place for several hours before the shooting, but had left to go to a dance hall near by. He said he heard shots and then one of the men ran in to tell him that Schaeffer had been shot. Crane said he saw an automobile leave and he telephoned to the police, who caught the party by lowering the gates at the railroad crossing at Clifton, S. I. All those who were in the hall maintained for several hours that they knew nothing of the shooting, but finally admitted that Schaeffer had been shot in a quarrel over Hannah Thurston, also known as Maloney, of 539 Greenwich Street. She was held for further examination, with Evelyn Sullivan, of 555 Greenwich Street, Mr. and Mrs. John Lenehan of 10 Greenwich Street, and Mary Schaeffer of 70 King Street.

Perfect Plans for Library Drive.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—The American Library Association Committee on Camp Libraries announced tonight that plans had been perfected for the million-dollar drive for funds with which to build, equip, and maintain libraries in every army camp and cantonment, and libraries for sailors afloat and ashore, as well as for sick and wounded soldiers on the firing line. The Governor of nearly every State has agreed to issue a proclamation setting aside the week of Sept. 24 as "Library War Fund Week," which will be devoted to raising the fund of $1,000,000 necessary.

PRESIDENT ATTENDS SERVICES IN CITY

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Hear Sermon at Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church.

RETURNS TO WASHINGTON

The President and Mrs. Wilson, who arrived in New York on the yacht Mayflower on Saturday evening, left here for Washington yesterday afternoon, after attending the morning service at the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church. The Mayflower was anchored in the North River off Seventy-ninth Street, and about 100 people, gathered on the Seventy-ninth Street pier, cheered as the President and his wife came ashore in a cutter at 10:40.

Three automobiles were waiting at the pier, two of them filled with Secret Service men and city detectives. The party drove down to Seventy-second Street and then across to Fifth Avenue, being recognized by very few pedestrians. Before going to the church the President went to the St. Regis, where he and Mrs. Wilson called on Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, the White House physician, and Mrs. Grayson, who had been spending a week in New York.

Then the President and Mrs. Wilson went across the avenue to the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church. The services had already begun, and there was rather a small attendance when the President came in. The arrival of the automobiles before the door had attracted the attention of many persons passing along the avenue, and a considerable number of pedestrians turned aside to swell the number of worshippers within.

Meanwhile the officials of the church learned of the President's arrival, and hymns of a patriotic character were selected. The preacher for the day was the Rev. Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman, Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, who took as his subject "Facing Jesus," with the text from John, 19:13, "He brought Jesus forth."

Dr. Chapman presented the picture of Christ before Pilate, bleeding from the strokes of the whip and facing the imminent crucifixion. "Pilate had the greatest opportunity any man could have," he declared, "in that he was alone with Jesus, confronted with him, and with a chance to release him. But he lacked the moral courage to do it."

He drew the analogy between Pilate's lost opportunity and the opportunity that all men have when brought face to face with Jesus and with the necessity of a moral decision.

In referring to the war, Dr. Chapman urged that the country should set aside days of fasting and prayer for victory, declaring that this would go a long way toward settling the war. In the prayer before the sermon the preacher prayed for the President, "Whose life is precious in God's sight," and besought that he be used as a Divine instrument to end the war and bring about peace.

Just before the benediction Dr. Chapman announced: "The congregation will remain seated until the President of the United States has retired." The Secret Service men then formed in line on either side of the central aisle as the President, preceded by Mrs. Wilson, passed out and entered their automobile. On the sidewalk a considerable number of people had been waiting for their reappearance, and as the President came out they lifted their hats and cheered, a salute which he answered by raising his hat and smiling.

From the church the President drove direct back to the Mayflower, where at 1 o'clock he was joined by Mrs. Wilson's mother, Mrs. Bolling; her sister, Miss Bertha Bolling, and her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Rolfe Bolling of 106 Morningside Drive. The party took luncheon on board the yacht. Meanwhile two taxicabs had come to the pier and the Presidential baggage was loaded on board and taken to the Pennsylvania Station.

At 3 o'clock all came ashore and about 300 people gathered on the pier, cheering the President as he landed. Colonel House made his farewells here and drove to his home; the members of the Bolling family followed the President and Mrs. Wilson to the Pennsylvania Station. Here the cars were run down to the lower level and the party did not pass through the upper floor of the station, but went direct on board the private car Ideal, which was attached to the Congressional Limited. They left at 3:30 P. M., Mrs. and Miss Bolling accompanying them back to Washington.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—President and Mrs. Wilson returned safely to Washington shortly before 9 o'clock tonight.

APPEALS TO WOMEN TO TRAIN FOR WAR WORK

Dr. Franklin H. Martin Says They Can Guard the Nation's Moral Standards.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—An appeal for thousands of women to train themselves for public health work to guard the moral and social standards of the United States at war as well as to do much needed work of this kind in Europe was issued today by Dr. Franklin H. Martin of the Advisory Commission of the Council of National Defense.

"The function of the nurse in modern war," said Dr. Martin, "is by no means confined to surgical work at the front. It includes also the highly important duty—becoming increasingly vital with the growth of disturbances in social and industrial conditions wrought by the war—of aiding in the prevention of disease epidemics, industrial accidents, and the general preservation of public health both at home and in the territory back of the firing line. The country cannot afford, furthermore, to leave the civilian population without trained nurses, and most of the places left vacant by nurses who have entered special war work must be filled. The war experience of European nations has shown conclusively the necessity of tightening up social and medical barriers. A problem of equal or greater importance will come with the period of reconstruction."

"The Committee on Nursing, with the authorization of the General Medical Board, is now making a complete survey of all the nursing forces of the country. The work is being carried on through the organization of the American Nurses' Association, with the co-operation of all State associations, and when completed should prove an invaluable asset.

"The task before the nursing profession necessarily calls for intellectual ability of a high order, but for that very reason it is believed that it will appeal particularly to women with a feeling of social responsibility and a capacity for social service. The appeal, therefore, has been directed not alone to hospitals and nursing schools, but also to women's and coeducational colleges and high-grade private schools, in an attempt to interest educated women of all classes in the opportunity for service of a high order through training in nursing schools. When a new student enters a hospital she thereby lays the foundation for the release of a graduate nurse for war work by taking over that much of the care of the civilian population."

Further on in his report Dr. Martin said: "The committees of the council are laying deep foundation for a possible long war through urging the upbuilding of general standards of nursing and education and the gradual addition of new courses of study in nursing schools which will prepare these new candidates for public health and social service."

Dr. Martin said that there were in the country 80,000 registered nurses, of whom 6,000 are public health nurses.

Physical Training at N. Y. U.

New York University will establish a department of physical training at the opening of the Fall term, under the direction of Dr. C. Ward Crampton, Physical Director of the Public Schools. Training courses are to take place in the university building, Washington Square; in the Washington Irving High School, and in the Y. W. C. A. building, Brooklyn. This departure has been decided upon by the Faculty because of the extra demand for physical training teachers resulting from the Walsh law. Dr. Crampton will be assisted by Miss Louise Baylis, High School teacher of physical training; Dr. Frances Cohen, Assistant Director of Educational Hygiene in the public schools; Dr. I. H. Goldberger, Director of Educational Hygiene; H. A. Gordow, executive Manhattan Council Boy Scouts of America, and Dr. Edward Levy, instructor New York University and Bellevue Hospital Medical College.

30 U-BOAT SHELLS HIT SCARBOROUGH

KILLED ONLY 3 PERSONS

The first details of the attack on the town of Scarborough, England, by a German U-boat on the evening of Sept. 5, in which three persons were killed and five injured, were received here yesterday.

The bombardment began at 6:45 P. M. and lasted eight minutes, in which time the submarine fired thirty shells, half of which fell in the town. More lives would have been lost if five British mine-sweepers had not arrived off the harbor and caused the U-boat to submerge.

Two women and a girl were killed outright and a 17-year-old girl was so severely injured that she had to have her left leg amputated. The other four persons injured are still in the hospital. In addition, a number of the townspeople were treated by surgeons for minor hurts from shrapnel, glass, debris, &c.

There were hundreds of holiday makers in Scarborough at the time, but there was no panic of any kind. Observers who stood on the cliffs watching the firing said that the submarine was about three miles off the shore. The shells were much smaller than those fired at the town by the German warships on Dec. 16, 1914, and less damage was done to property. The shots were fired in a semi-circle, apparently first aimed at the Spa, famous for its mineral waters, and then over the town, down to the foreshore. The railway station, the Pavilion Hotel, one of the largest in Scarborough, and the stores in one of the principal streets suffered the most from the bombardment.

One shell exploded in a house in Hexton Road three minutes after the four members of the family had gone for a walk to the beach. Another shell smashed the refreshment room on the station platform a few minutes before a train crowded with excursionists was due. It missed the platform, on which fully 300 persons were standing waiting for a train only seventy-five feet away. Most of the houses struck were empty. One shell fell and exploded in a garden in which several young women were playing tennis.

When the mine sweepers got within range they opened fire on the U-boat, which returned the fire for a few minutes before submerging.

The bay was filled with rowboats, motor boats, and other small pleasure craft at the time of the attack, but fortunately none of them was hit.

DUTCH MINISTER ASSAILED.

Proposed Successor Also Is Called a Weak Brother.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 16.—Announcement of the change in Ministers from the Netherlands to Washington is made the occasion by the Telegraaf for a severe attack on Chevalier van Rappard, who is described as not having been equal to his duties and as having failed to promote Dutch interests. The newspaper asserts it is now realized he lacks the diplomatic tact and commercial insight needed for the extremely difficult discussions on the food supply.

Asserting that a diplomat of the first rank must be sent to Washington to regain the lost sympathy of America, the Telegraaf characterizes Mr. van Royen, proposed as Chevalier van Rappard's successor, as "one of the weakest brothers of the Dutch diplomatic corps," who would not be the most desirable man for the place.

Favors County Potato Warehouses.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Carl Vrooman, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, issued an appeal tonight for prompt action in the establishment, as a military measure, of warehouses in every county throughout the United States where large crops of potatoes have been raised. He urges the establishment of community warehouses for potatoes, and thinks that the initiative in this direction should be taken by associations of farmers and business men.

The Charm of Beauty at the Hampton Shops

TO BRING into the home of modern days that air of leisured ease and cultured dignity which gave allurement to the rooms of our Georgian forbears, calls for more than the mere haphazard selection of Furniture.

This is one unexampled advantage of that storehouse of beautiful things, the Hampton Shops. Here may be found, not only the Furniture, not only the countless finishing touches which harmonize therewith, but also the decorative skill and knowledge which will give a charm of association to make of the room, as a whole, a joy forever.

HARRIMAN NATIONAL BANK OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK

A Personality

Washington, Lincoln, Wilson!

Patriots all, each led by love of country, and alike imbued with the same spirit of freedom and justice and the same love for humanity, but Wilson the ripened product of a maturer national history and of the times, and therefore a greater.

The times have produced the man, as they always will, a figure towering protectingly head and shoulders over the people, a man scrupulously conscientious, of high morality and rare breadth of mind, strength of character and will power.

Wilson's messages are the man himself; they are distinguished by feeling, ideals and above all sincerity; you do not have to read between the lines. His war proclamation and his response to the Pope are in spirit re-statements of principles of the Declaration of Independence.

Here is a personality which, in the opinion of the Harriman National Bank, time, reconciling small-minded opinion, petty jealousies and political conditions, will stamp as "The great American."

We say to the business man, place in Wilson your confidence in America's emergence from the war victorious, with honor, and on a sound basis for continuation of the welfare and prosperity of our people.

MOBILIZED

For Immediate Action!

¶ The result of the Saks' Tailoring Organization's intensive training is clearly reflected in the new onslaught for Fall. With Blues to the left, Greys to the right, and Browns, Greens, and Mixtures in every other direction, New Yorkers will choose this season at Saks' from an aggregation of clothing upon which no counter attack of any other stock would make the least impression.

¶ Every weave with a spark of individuality; every coloring and pattern that is new; and every staple weave worthy of a place in America's foremost clothes shop is now mobilized at Saks.

¶ Better clothes are not to be had. We originate our models, we select the woolens, and every stitch in them is the work of our own highly specialized tailoring organization. And every Saks' suit and topcoat is the lowest priced garment of the same sterling character, for no middlemen's profits go to swell the size of a Saks' price ticket.

Saks' styles for men are so far ahead of most clothes that what is considered "style news" in other shops is "past history" at Saks.

SPEAKERS ENLISTED FOR 'LOYALTY WEEK'

Prominent Citizens Will Tour State to Spread Patriotism Through Education.

NINE TEAMS TO AID WORK

Campaign Will Close on Saturday Night with Rallies in the Principal Cities.

Thirty-six speakers of national prominence will, beginning this evening, enter upon a week's tour of New York State in a campaign of patriotism through education. In the course of this week, which is to be known as "Loyalty Week," they will address patriotic rallies in all the principal cities and towns of the State and thereby endeavor to develop a thorough understanding of the issues involved in the war, and the reasons that have made it essential for the United States to come to the support of the Allies.

"Loyalty Week" was suggested by Dr. Henry N. MacCracken, President of Vassar College and Chief of the Educational Division of the State Council of Defense, as a means of launching the National Security League's campaign of patriotism through education in this State.

The speakers, including such men as Alton B. Parker, George W. Wickersham, Charles Edward Russell, and Job E. Hedges, have been divided into nine teams of four each. The teams will travel over separate routes, speaking at different places each night this week. The schedules have been arranged so that the final meetings on Saturday night will take place in important centres such as Buffalo, Rochester, Syracuse, Albany, and New York. The New York meeting, which is being arranged by the Mayor's Committee on National Defense, will take place at Madison Square Garden. Mayor Mitchel will probably preside.

In two instances—at Poughkeepsie and at Penn Yan on Thursday afternoon—the meetings will be held at county fairs. At the Dutchess County fair at Poughkeepsie Governor Whitman will make his only speech of the week, joining there the speakers' team for this route, which will include Miss Mabel Boardman and George Haven Putnam. Other meetings will be held in the daytime in the open air, some at fair grounds and some in public squares, but the majority of the gatherings will take place in the evenings, in auditoriums, theatres, and large halls.

Team No. 1—Professor William Starr Myers of Princeton, Cleveland Moffett, Cass Gilbert, and Frederic C. Walcott, assistant to Food Administrator Hoover, and a member of the Executive Committee of the National Security League. Monday, Dunkirk and Jamestown; Tuesday, Olean; Wednesday, Corning; Thursday, Wellesville; Friday, Watkins; Saturday, Elmira. On Monday and Tuesday Job E. Hedges will take Mr. Gilbert's place, the latter appearing in his stead with Team No. 2.

Team No. 2—Job E. Hedges, Captain A. Radclyffe Dugmore of the British Army, Professor Herbert E. Mills, head of the Economics Department of Vassar and editor of The Economics Review; Dr. Harry E. Fosdick of Union Theological Seminary. Monday, Geneseo; Tuesday, Warsaw; Wednesday, Batavia and LeRoy; Thursday, Medina; Friday, Niagara Falls; Saturday, Buffalo. At the Buffalo meeting, which will be held in the Broadway Auditorium, Mayor Fuhrman presiding, Howard Coffin, Chairman of the Aircraft Production Board of the Council of National Defense, will also speak.

Team 3.—Charles Edward Russell, Miss Kathleen Burke, English hospital worker; Dr. McElroy, and the Rev. Dr. George Adam of Montreal, a personal friend of Lloyd George, who recently made a tour of the western fighting front. Monday, Ithaca; Tuesday, Seneca Falls; Wednesday, Canandaigua and Geneva; Thursday, Penn Yan; Friday, Lyons; Saturday, Rochester. At the Rochester meeting, Alton B. Parker, who is Honorary Vice President of the National Security League, will speak in place of Dr. Adam, who will join Team 4 at Syracuse.

Team 4.—Dr. Henry van Dyke, Henry D. Estabrook, Irvin S. Cobb, and Dr. Talcott Williams, Dean of the Columbia University School of Journalism. Monday, Binghamton; Tuesday, Owego; Wednesday, Cortland; Tuesday, Auburn; Friday, Oswego; Saturday, Syracuse.

Team 5.—Dr. Charles R. Brown, Dean of Yale University; Dr. Solomon H. Clark, head of the Public Speaking Department of Chicago University; Dr. Frank Crane, and the Countess de Turczowiez, Polish relief worker. Monday, Amsterdam; Wednesday, Oneida; Thursday, Norwich; Friday, Herkimer; Saturday, Rome.

Team 6.—Arthur E. Bestor, President of Chautauqua Institution; Arthur Rudd, Gaillard Hunt, Assistant Secretary of State, and Justice S. Harrison White of Colorado. Monday, Lowville; Tuesday, Watertown; Thursday, Malone; Friday, Plattsburg; Saturday, Port Henry and Elizabethtown.

Team No. 7.—Dr. Rush Rhees, President of the University of Rochester; Prof. James H. Moore of Colgate University; Ex-Senator Burton and Dr. John H. Finley. Monday, Johnson and Gloversville; Wednesday, Wells; Thursday, Saratoga Springs; Friday, Hudson Falls; Saturday, Troy.

Team No. 8.—John Wesley Hill, Dr Anna Howard Shaw, George W. Wickersham and ex-Senator Charles A. Towne. Monday, Kingston; Tuesday, Catskill; Wednesday, Walton; Thursday, Cobleskill; Friday, Schenectady; Saturday, Albany. At Kingston, Dr. William F. Slocum, President of the American Association of Colleges, who is a member of team No. 9, will also speak, his place at Monticello being taken by William H. Edwards. The latter will also speak at Goshen with Team No. 9 on Tuesday night, taking the place of George Haven Putnam, who will speak with Team No. 8 at Catskill. Carl Vrooman, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, will also speak with this team at Schenectady and Albany.

Team No. 9.—Miss Mabel Boardman, Mr. Putnam, James Sullivan, State Historian, and Dr. Slocum. Monday, Monticello; Tuesday, Goshen; Wednesday, Hudson; Thursday, Poughkeepsie; Friday, Nyack; Saturday, Mt. Vernon. At Poughkeepsie, where the meeting will be held at the Dutchess County Fair, Governor Whitman and Oscar S. Straus will also speak. Mrs. Straus will also speak at Mount Vernon.

AMERICANIZATION PLAN TO ENGAGE THE NATION

State Will Join City to Push Campaign to Wipe Out Illiteracy Among Foreign Born.

The State, acting through the University of the State of New York, has joined with the city to push the campaign which is about to begin for the Americanization of the foreign population of New York, the number of foreign persons in New York State at this time being, according to a statement issued by the Mayor's Committee on National Defense, more than 3,000,000, of whom about 600,000 cannot speak English. Illiteracy among native-born persons in the State is about 1 per cent., whereas it is about 13 per cent. in the foreign-born population. The Mayor's Committee also announced last night that the movement was becoming national in scope, and that a campaign similar to that in New York would be undertaken in the country at large by the Federal Bureau of Education in Washington.

Dr. John H. Finley, State Commissioner of Education, has assigned W. C. Smith, Supervisor of Immigrant Education, for a part of his time to the Committee on Aliens of the Mayor's Committee, which committee is directing the Americanization campaign in New York City.

Dr. Finley has sent the following letter to all school superintendents in New York State:

> Our department, through provision made by the unanimous action of the Legislature at its recent session, and upon the specific recommendation of Governor Whitman in his annual message, is undertaking to give special attention this year to the promotion of alien education and the lessening of adult illiteracy. By the appointment of a Supervisor of Immigrant Education in the educational extension division of this department, New York State is the first State to give official recognition to the importance of this activity, though some of the cities of this State and of other States have already done much both through public provision and through private initiative and aid to teach English and civics to adult aliens. Recent events have accentuated the need of giving all, whatever their varied origins, a common language. The Legislature has passed a joint resolution calling for a vote on a constitutional amendment, indicating that the State is seriously considering literacy as an essential to the franchise.
> It is possible by concerted action among the agencies now dealing with those who have not acquired the language in which our laws and history are written to reduce adult illiteracy by half within the year, and to teach complete adult literacy by the end of the decade, a goal which the Commissioner of Education set in the opening year of his administration. And the public school must be the chief agency of a democracy in this effort.
>
> This time is also particularly opportune, since the Federal Bureau of Education is projecting a continent-wide movement, and its co-operation will be helpful in making clear the national as well as the State importance of this work.
>
>
> 2.—Assisting in organizing classes.
> 3.—Conducting institutes for teachers in co-operation with other agencies.
> 4.—Furnishing syllabuses.
> 5.—Assisting in securing co-operation of other agencies and foreign leaders.
> 6.—Helping in giving local publicity to the need and to the provision for meeting it.
> 7.—Assisting in securing co-operation of industrial plants in the locality.

"New York City," Dr. Finley said yesterday, "is to be congratulated upon mobilizing the forces for Americanization of the foreign-born among us. Much may be accomplished by this action. We are expecting that our illiteracy may soon begin to melt."

DR. HILLIS TELLS OF GERMAN CRUELTY

Plymouth Pastor Describes What He Saw and Learned in the Area Abandoned by Kaiser's Army.

The Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, pastor of Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, quoting from official records and affidavits he had collected on his recent tour of regions in France evacuated by the Germans, asserted in the first of a series of six sermons on the war in his church yesterday that there could no longer be any doubt of the fact that the German armies had been guilty of the blackest crimes charged against them.

Dr. Hillis spent last July and August visiting the areas in France ruined by the German armies in their retreat. He brought back with him much evidence of German brutalities, and he placed affidavits and copies of official records on the pulpit from which he preached.

"For three years German-Americans have protested that the stories of German atrocities were to be disbelieved as English inventions, Belgian lies, and French hypocrisies, but that day has gone forever," he said. "When the representatives of the nations assemble for the final settlement there will be laid before the representatives of Germany affidavits, photographs, and other legal proofs that make German atrocities far better established than the scalpings of the Sioux Indians on the Western frontiers, the murders of the Black Hole of Calcutta, or the crimes of the Spanish Inquisition. On a battle line three hundred miles long, in every village the retreating Germans passed, the following morning accredited men hurried to the scene to make the record against the day of judgment.

"The photographs of dead and mutilated girls, children, and old men tell no lies. Two forms of testimony are esteemed by jurists—the testimony of mature men, who have seen and heard, and the testimony of children too innocent to invent their statesments but old enough to tell what they saw. For the first time in history the German has reduced savagery to a science, therefore this great war for peace must go on until the German cancer is cut clean out of the body."

Dr. Hillis asserted that more than 10,000 separate atrocities committed by the German armies had been documented and were on file in the chancelleries of the allied nations for use when the terms of peace are to be discussed.

"When the German army in Lorraine was defeated by one-half its number," he went on, "it fell northward, passing through French towns and villages where there were no Frenchmen, no guns, and where no shots were fired. During July and August we went slowly from one ruined town to another, talking with the women and the children, comparing the photographs and the full official records made at the time, with the statements of the poor, wretched survivors, who lived in cellars, where once there had been beautiful houses, orchards, and vineyards.

"In Gerbevillier, standing beside their graves, I studied the photograph of the bodies of fifteen old men whom the Germans had lined up and shot because there were no young soldiers to kill; heard the detailed story of a woman whose boy of 14, being nearest the age of a soldier, was first hanged to a pear tree in the garden, and when the officer and soldier had left him and were busy setting fire to the next house, she cut the rope, revived the strangled boy, only to find the soldiers had returned, and while the officer held her hands behind her back, his assistant poured petrol on the boy's head and clothes, set fire to him, and while he staggered about, a flaming torch, they shrieked with laughter.

"When they burned all the houses and retreated the next morning, the Prefect of Lorraine photographed the bodies of thirty aged men lying as they fell, the bodies of women stripped and at last slain, while in the next village stood the ruined square belfry into which the Germans had lifted machine guns, then forced every woman and child—275 in number—into the little church, and notified the French soldiers that if they fired upon the machine guns they would kill their own women and children.

"After several days' hunger and thirst, at midnight these brave women slipped a little boy through the church window and bade their husbands fire upon the Germans in the belfry, saying they preferred death to the indignities they were suffering. And so these Frenchmen turned their guns, and in blowing those machine guns out of the belfry killed twenty of their own wives and children."

"Out of the large number note these: Hundreds of photographs of the dead bodies of aged priests, some of whom had been staked down. Here is the German efficiency for you. Here is the diary on Aug. 22 of Private Max Thomas: 'Our soldiers are so excited we are like wild beasts. Destroyed eight houses, with their inmates. Bayonetted two men with their wives and a girl of 18. The little one almost unnerved me, so innocent was her expression.'"

Dr. Hillis read what had been copied from the diary of Eitel Anders, another German soldier. It read: "In Vendre all the inhabitants without exception were brought out and shot. This shooting was heartbreaking, as they all knelt down and prayed. It was real sport, yet it was terrible to watch. At Hecht I saw the dead body of a young girl nailed to the outside door of a cottage by her hands. She was about 14 or 16 years old." Dr. Hillis quoted from one of the affidavits, "Affidavit D-89." It read: "After passing Weerde we met a woman covered with blood, with her breasts cut off. She was delirious."

"Standing in the village of Herimenil," continued Dr. Hillis, "a boy of 16 and his mother showed me twelve bullet marks against the stone wall where a mother, aged 23, with a babe on her breast, with her young sister and sister-in-law of 16 and 17, were shot by twelve German soldiers. On a little board in one ruined village, I read these words: 'Marie. Aged 16. Dead Aug. 24, 1915. Vengeance is mine, I will repay, saith the Lord.' The hundreds of atrocities personally investigated only serve to interpret Ambassador Morgenthau's statement as to Armenia, that the Turkish soldiers and German officers massacred in Armenia a half million people, that they might move into their farm houses and little shops and stores."

Germany's philosophy, the pastor concluded, had dehumanized her officers and men. He said the Kaiser, and not the rest of the world, had coined the word "Hun," and had applied it to his own people.

Soldiers See City from Motor Buses.

The National Service Commission entertained 110 men from Camp Mills, Hempstead, L. I., in a sightseeing tour yesterday. The soldiers were from the 168th Infantry of Iowa, and machine gun battalions of the 149th Pennsylvania and Maryland. In six buses furnished by the Fifth Avenue Coach Company the soldiers, most of whom were seeing New York for the first time, were taken through Wall Street, Chinatown, Fifth Avenue, and Broadway to Dyckman Street. They returned on Riverside Drive to luncheon at the Y. W. C. A. Building, Lexington Avenue and Fifty-second Street. At the Institutional Synagogue, Fifth Avenue and 110th Street, 500 seats will be reserved for soldiers and sailors during the services there today. Addresses will be made by Rabbi Herbert S. Goldstein and Representative Murray Hulbert in reference to the Jewish holiday and the war.

CONGRESS SESSION LIKELY TO END OCT. 1

FIGHT ON INSURANCE BILL

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—With nearly all the important war legislation disposed of, Congress is manifesting impatience to rush through the remaining measures and adjourn about Oct. 1. The rapid progress made last week in both House and Senate encourages the leaders to believe that the session may be brought to an end by that time.

The chief obstacle in the way of adjournment is the Soldiers' and Sailors' Insurance bill, passed last week by the House and to be offered in the Senate this week. While the House passed the measure unanimously, there is sharp opposition to it in the Senate. The measure is in the hands of Senators Williams, Hoke Smith, and Smoot, as members of the Finance Committee, and they will report it without change from the form in which it went through the House.

Opponents of the measure in the Senate maintain that it does not give sufficient allowance to dependents of men serving with the colors. The allowance of $15 a month to a wife with no child, $25 to a wife with one child, and $32.50 to a wife with two children is regarded by opponents of the bill as entirely too low. They also incline toward the pension system rather than insurance, arguing that, no matter if the insurance scheme goes through, some time after the war there inevitably will be legislation for pensions. That, they, argue, will only mean doubling the expense to the Government and putting into force an insurance system that will not serve its intended purpose.

Insurance representatives, bitterly opposed to the measure, have been at work at the Capitol during the last week, and strong pressure has been brought to bear to arouse a powerful force against it. But this lobby, according to the opinion of Senate leaders, will not succeed in its attempt to kill the bill.

Senator Simmons, Chairman of the Finance Committee, said tonight that he had not the remotest doubt that the insurance bill would pass the Senate and without much delay. He expects it to be reported to the Senate early this week and passed after a week or so of debate.

President Wilson's letter to Senator Martin, Democratic floor leader, in support of the insurance measure, is expected to bring its advocacy enough Democratic Senators to put it through, combined with the support of those among the Republican minority who have stood back of the Administration in its war legislation. In other words, once more the bipartisan combination of Democrats and Republicans will be counted upon to force the insurance bill to passage.

Another war measure to come up in the Senate this week is the Webb Export bill, tightening the screws upon transatlantic commerce during the war. Under its provisions explicit regulations are laid down as to trading with the Allies and neutrals. This bill passed the House weeks ago. Although opposition probably will crop up, Senate leaders expect that it will be passed by the bipartisan majority.

Another measure of importance is the $2,406,670,000 War Revenue bill, now before a joint conference committee of the two Houses. Senator Simmons said tonight that the differences between House and Senate conferees over the measure would undoubtedly be smoothed out early this week. He thinks the measure will be reported back by Thursday, with whatever changes are decided upon, and that it will be approved at once, so that it will be in the hands of the President for signature by Saturday.

Senator Simmons believes the Senate will be able to clear up its schedule so as to adjourn within a few days after Oct. 1. The adjournment of Congress at that time would give almost a clear two months of rest before the December session.

In every community men are drilling for National Preparedness. For all these men the frequent use of ALLEN'S FOOT-EASE, the antiseptic powder, shaken into the Shoes and sprinkled in the Foot-bath, increases their efficiency and insures needed physical comfort. The British and French troops in Europe, and the American troops use Allen's Foot-Ease, because it takes the Friction from the Shoe and freshens the feet. The Plattsburg Camp Manual, chapter on General Advice, states: "Every morning shake a little talcum powder or Foot-Ease in each shoe." SECOND KING WILL CALLED A FORGERY

District Attorney Thinks He Has the Typewriter on Which the Document Was Written.

NEW INQUEST IS ORDERED

John T. Dooling, Assistant District Attorney, said yesterday, after receiving reports from experts on typewriting, that he had in his posession the typewriter on which the alleged second King will, now declared to be a forgery, was written. He said that the evidence that the will had been forged was now overwhelming.

Among the effects taken from the apartment of Gaston B. Means and Mrs. Maude A. King at 1,155 Park Avenue were found a sketch of the plans for filing this will and making a fight to have it declared valid, in which case Mrs. King would receive the millions remaining in the King estate and Gaston B. Means would receive $950,000. It was planned to file the will at Pasadena, Cal. James King had property worth about $1,000,000 in California. The will provided two bequests of $10,000 a piece for Pasadena charities.

Mrs. Maude A. King had a bungalow at Pasadena and was well known there. At the time the Department of Justice was asked to arrest a band of fortune-hunters from Monte Carlo on the ground that they had violated the Mann act in taking Mrs. King from this city to California, she was finally found with some of her companions at Pasadena. Another reason for filing the alleged will in California was a legal one. Among the Means papers were found the opinion of a Chicago lawyer, that the Illinois law would not admit to probate a second will eleven years after a settlement had been made on the basis of the first one.

Papers relating to the will showed that Means had attempted, through another lawyer, to interest Charles Evans Hughes in the case, but that he had refused to consider the matter until after personal interviews with all parties concerned and the closest personal investigation of the facts. It was found that only a short time before the death of Mrs. King, Means had received word indicating that there was little chance that Mr. Hughes would consider the matter favorably.

Nothing for Means to Lose.

"As far as the will was concerned," said Mr. Dooling, "Gaston B. Means had nothing to lose by the death of Mrs. King. If the will was good, his contract for $950,000 would still be good. The only difference would be that Mrs. King's sister, Mrs. Mazie Melvin, would inherit the bulk of the King property."

Copies of an interesting correspondence with lawyers was found relating to the estate of Byron L. Smith, President of the Northern Trust, a close friend of James C. King. Smith's signature was attached to the alleged second King will, which was discovered after Smith's death. Photographic copies of public documents with Smith's signature have been found in the possession of Means. The correspondence on this topic related to the question of a damage suit which was under consideration against the Smith estate. Means intimated that he had evidence that Mr. Smith had testified that the second will had been destroyed, and had thus injured Mrs. King, who received little under the first will and practically all of the King estate under the alleged second one. Means asked in these letters what chance there was of recovering from the King estate if it could be proved that Smith's acts had damaged Mrs. King.

Mr. Dooling said that he had information which indicated that, provided the second will could be probated, Means would be greatly interested in the inheritance, no matter what course the property afterward took. He said that if anything happened to Mrs. Melvin after she inherited the money, Means would not lose, and might be in a stronger position than ever.

A large correspondence was found belonging to W. R. Patterson, father-in-law of Means, who acted for Means in stock speculations, as shown by numerous large checks drawn by Means in favor of his father-in-law to cover stock deals. Some of the letters by Mr. Patterson, who is now at Concord, N. C., related to an investigation of the trust fund of $400,000, in which Mrs. King had a life interest. A number of letters from Means to officers of the trust company were found and memoranda showing that he had consulted lawyers regarding this fund. Mr. Dooling said:

"It is evident that efforts were made to annoy and anger the officials of this company by accusations and in other ways, so as to compel them to relinquish this trust. They refused, however, to relinquish it, and it appears to be the only fund in which Mrs. King was interested which remained intact at her death. The $400,000, however, now reverts, because of her death, to the James G. King Home for Old Men."

Means Annoyed.

A telegram was made public yesterday indicating that Means intended a week ago to make a trip to this city himself and take charge of his affairs. This was sent to his business agent, Henry Dietsch, on Sept. 9 from Concord, and is as follows:

Just returned to Concord from Chicago and Asheville yesterday with Mrs. Melvin, who is stopping at our house here. Newspapers, much to the annoyance of Mrs. Melvin and myself and the Robinson brothers, are giving sensational accounts of the deplorable, accidental death of Mrs. King, and immediately on my arrival here I asked for a reopening of the Coroner's inquest. Continue to hold mail until I advise you to forward it to me, or until my arrival in New York. Under no circumstances give any newspapers or any one else any interviews.

GASTON B. MEANS.

In a previous letter, written before the death of Mrs. King, Means had written to Dietsch to forward all letters to Mrs. King, Mrs. Melvin or Mrs. Robinson only to him.

Mr. Dooling found papers indicating that there was some connection between Gaston B. Means and William Lustgarten, real estate operator and politician, whose disappearance on Aug. 16 of this year led to the discovery that the affairs of the Tax Lien Company of New York, of which he was President, were in disorder. Mr. Dooling said he had learned also that Means had made frequent visits to the offices of Lustgarten. He said that he had no information regarding the interest the two men had in common.

Further discoveries of the connection of Means with the Government and German propagandists were made yesterday. One was an account showing that he had engaged a man to make a special investigation of the affairs of J. P. Morgan & Co. Other papers, Mr. Dooling said, indicated that Means had taken an interest in the troubles fomented by Germans, and that he was also in touch with the revolutionary movement in Cuba.

MEANS AND MRS. MELVIN SUMMONED TO INQUEST

Special to The New York Times.

CONCORD, N. C., Sept. 16.—Subpoenas have been issued for witnesses to appear on Sept. 24 and testify at a further inquest into the death of Mrs. Maude A. King. Gaston B. Means and Mrs. Mazie C. Melvin, sister of Mrs. King, are among those who have been summoned. Captain W. S. Bingham, who is still at Richfield; Afton Means, now in New York City, and Ernest Eury, the negro chauffeur, also will be summoned.

Mrs. J. B. Foraker, friend of Mrs. King, is still here, and this afternoon she spent several hours at the Means home and went automobiling with Gaston Means and other members of the family.

Miss Anna Dolan of New York City, who is said to be a nurse, has arrived and is staying at the Means house with Mrs. Melvin.

MRS. DURYEA TELLS OF WORK IN FRANCE

PLEA FOR GIFTS OF MONEY

Head of War Relief Organization That Bears Her Name Sends Letter to Miss Margaret French.

The character of work that is being done by the women of the Duryea War Relief in France is described in a letter received by Miss Margaret French from Mrs. Nina Larray Duryea, the head of this organization. More money is needed to carry on the relief activity of Mrs. Duryea and her associates.

Mrs. Duryea's letter to Miss French is as follows:

11, Rue Louis-le-Grand, Paris.
Aug. 15, 1917.

My Dear Miss French:

I cannot tell you how touched and happy I am at the news of your splendid work and that of those with you at Stockbridge. You are a wonder! • • •

I will tell you exactly where everything you send will go—straight. Two nights ago I got back from Roye (Somme), just back of the battle line, beyond Noyons. The Government has given us a whole canton to "do," and after shipping up there by sealed cars 60,000 pounds of garden and household utensils, food and clothing and a great Moline motor-tractor plow, we (four of us) went up and opened a depot at Roye in a vast mouldy hall, which had been headquarters of the German Staff. Rain drips through the bomb-shattered roof, and five German prisoners assist us in our exceedingly strenuous labors. Then the Commandant, after a vigorous search, gave us a wee house, which the German prisoners scraped free of German filth, disinfected and turned over to us. Then it was up to four American women to prove that miracles can be wrought. We painted it, all ourselves, from top to bottom, papered walls, got together bits of furniture from among the ruins, made tables out of cases, portières from sheets, and on the eighth evening invited the Commandant to dinner, with candles stuck in bottles and American baked beans for the "plat de resistance." We have a bomb-proof shelter beside the door and oiled cotton in place of bullet-broken windows, and the first night a bomb dropped in the Indian Camp near Roye and killed three men.

Voilà! for the gay side of the picture. There is tragedy back of it. Every able-bodied being was carried away by the Huns in carts, standing, like cattle, leaving only old age, childhood and illness behind. These were driven out into the fields while their homes were pillaged and burned and their wells poisoned. Then they were allowed to return to the still hot ashes and told to live. How? It is to such desolation that all your workers' things will go, for we never have enough. We go from one wrecked hamlet to another in our camion, and unearth these dazed, dumb creatures from their holes, carrying every comfort and moral support we can muster. Their trees were cut down as were their roses and berry bushes; their pretty gardens boast more of a crop of shells than anything else. The whole region is grotesque in its utter destruction. The Mayor of Roye, Monsieur Mandron, owned one of the show farms of France. He saw his wife carried off; his thirty-four horses taken, his splendid buildings burned, his crops destroyed or taken. German officers' wives come in person and steal his wife's clothing and silver. He now lives in a wooden shed in the court of his former home; sixty-eight years old, ruined! One of thousands.

We all send you our warmest thanks. Tell those kind workers for me to give and work and pity as never before; the coming Winter is going to be a tragedy, for the civilians especially. Don't please forget them for us, one moment. Try please, to get as much money as you can to buy supplies over here as the Red Cross, as things now are, say they cannot deliver to us any supplies for some time, as they haven't enough ships. That is a blow, and we can only count on the generosity of American hearts and pockets to help us through the Winter.

Sincerely and gratefully,
NINA LARREY DURYEA,
President of the Duryea War Relief,
Paris.

Checks may be made out to Margaret French, Treasurer, and sent to Miss French, Chesterwood, Glendale, Mass.

COMMITTEE TO AVERT PORT CONGESTION

Government Boards Unite in Step to Facilitate the Export Trade.

WASHINGTON, Sept 16.—To prevent congestion at seaports and minimize the danger of export traffic being piled up, a committee has just been formed to co-ordinate the activities of the railroads, the War Department, the Shipping Board, the Food Administration and the British and other foreign Government War Commissions that come here to purchase supplies for the Allies.

This committee, which will be known as "The Co-ordinating Committee on Exportation," has been created at the suggestion of the Railroads' War Board.

Bearing in mind the danger of congestion this Winter if an effort should be made to ship everything through the North Atlantic ports, the members of the War Board decided that immediate action should be taken for co-ordinating railroad with overseas transportation.

With the view of laying the foundation for this, representatives of the embarkation section of the Army General Staff, the Traffic Executive of the allied Governments, the United States Shipping Board, the United States Food Administration, the Red Cross War Council and the Commission on Car Service, met with the War Board and formed the "Co-ordinating Committee on Exportation."

Charles M. Sheaffer, Chairman of the Commission on Car Service, has been made chairman of the Co-ordinating Committee. The other members appointed to date include E. Level, Chairman, Traffic Executive of the allied Governments; J. G. Rogers, General Agent, American Railway Association, Military Headquarters; R. B. Stevens, Commissioner; D. L. Ewing, Director of Traffic, Shipping Board; Colonel Chauncey B. Baker, Embarkation Section, General Staff; C. B. Buxton, Food Administration and D. W. Cooke, Red Cross War Board.

HARVARD TO ADMIT WOMEN.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Sept. 16.—Harvard will open its doors to women students this year for the first time in the history of the university. "Duly qualified women who are registered at Radcliffe College will be admitted to Harvard Medical School when it opens for the Fall term next week," according to an announcement issued tonight.

The need of doctors caused by the war is the reason for letting down the bars. Because of war's heavy draft upon the medical profession, it is thought desirable to increase the opportunities and inducements for women to become physicians and surgeons.

Ten women applicants for admission to Harvard Medical School under the new arrangement have already appeared, according to Dr. E. H. Bradford, dean of the school. A few more are expected to register at Radcliffe and apply in the week remaining before the term opens.

"But we do not expect a very large class," said Dr. Bradford, "for the entrance requirements at Harvard Medical School are very high, and only a week remains before the school opens. Had the announcement been made earlier there might have been more applicants, but we expect to have as many women students as the other big colleges."

CHILE SPURNS GERMAN DEAL

False Report of Secret Treaty Traced to Propagandists.

The boomerang workings of the German propaganda in Latin America, as exposed by recent developments in Argentina and Mexico, receive further substantiation through the publication in London of a statement by the Chilean Minister there, Augustin Edwards, denying in emphatic terms the existence of a secret treaty between Germany and Chile, by which Germany would be given trade preference after the war. The statement was made following the publication in London of a report contained in the Revista, a newspaper of Buenos Aires, telling of the alleged treaty. The Chilean authorities repudiated the report in the strongest terms, and pointed out that no secret treaties can be made by Chile.

The statement of the Chilean Minister gains interest from the fact that a recent report made to the Foreign Office of one of the allied Governments on German propaganda in South America named the Revista del Pacificio of Buenos Aires as a German-controlled organ, owned and conducted by the "Deutsche Zeitung fur Chile."

A. H. Callao, publisher of La Prensa, a trade magazine for South American affairs, yesterday received a copy of the Chilean Minister's statement made in London. It was published in the Daily Mail, which had printed a summary of an article in the Revista on the alleged existence of a secret treaty between Chile and Germany. The statement by the Chilean Legation said:

"The statement published is not only devoid of foundation but is also perfectly ridiculous. In Chile there can be no secret treaties. Treaties are not valid unless they are approved by the National Congress. The policy of secret machinations is unknown in Chile and is foreign to the national character.

"The policy that Chile has invariably followed is one of peace in general and of American solidarity in particular. The President of Chile, in his message to Congress of June 1, 1915, referring to the course which Pan Americanism had taken, said that 'the policy of rapprochement so happily followed is a firm guarantee of peace for the American republics and of respect for their rights, of which the most vital is the integrity of the continent.'

"Chile's attitude since Germany announced the zone blockade is quite definite and in perfect accord with that of the other American countries. Chile declared that she would not submit to that blockade because she considers it illegal and contrary to the practices consecrated since ancient times for the benefit of nations taking no part in armed conflicts, and added that if hostile acts were committed against Chilean ships she would demand, with full liberty of action, respect for all her rights. That declaration Chile maintains in all its integrity and significance, and by it she will regulate her procedure.

"The attitude of Brazil has been analogous to that of the United States, and Bolivia's attitude is the outcome of occurrences which that country considered violations of her sovereignty. There is no difference whatever between Chile's view of the situation and the manner in which it has been regarded by the other American nations. On the contrary, Chile believes that the American nations are as one in their conception of the juridial aspect of the blockade, and their union in this respect is strengthened by the traditional ties of a political solidarity which constitutes the basis of Chile's international ambitions."

Exports Board Issues New List of Commodities That Cannot Be Sent Abroad.

NEUTRALS TO GET NO WHEAT

Export Board's Order May Lead to Unloading or Commandeering of Grain Ships.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—A conservation list which includes wheat, wheat flour, sugar, steel, iron, and many materials needed for the manufacture of explosives has been prepared by the Exports Administrative Board in connection with the policy of tightening up restrictions already made.

With the publication of this list today comes the announcement that the export of these commodities will be "practically prohibited" for the present. It is provided, however, that licenses may be issued when the cargoes for which applications are made are destined for actual war purposes, or where limited quantities may be spared without detriment to the United States.

Today's ruling was accepted generally as definite notice to most of the northern neutrals of Europe that for some time to come they would have to get along without American wheat, and that at no time during the war period would shipments be made to them except on the strictest rationing basis, and only after obtaining satisfactory guarantees.

This may lead to renewed negotiations for the unloading of the neutral ships tied up in Atlantic ports. Most of these ships are laden with wheat, corn and cattle fodder. Information here is to the effect that the wheat and corn cargoes on these ships are deteriorating even more rapidly than had been thought. The Shipping Board has been considering for some days exerting its full powers to commandeer the ships.

The new ruling evidently makes possible the shipment of some steel for ship construction if it is to be used for vessels which will be put into direct war trade, and might have the effect of lifting the complete embargo on ship steel which is now in force. Japan and any other country which might want steel for shipping not intended for transatlantic trade, however, apparently cannot hope to obtain it from the United States at this time.

Corn is not included on the "conservation list," and it is known that some food experts here have hoped for the adoption of a policy by which the Allies could co-operate in the conservation of the wheat supply here by using larger quantities of American corn instead of wheat. This policy might be adopted in connection with the movement of Canada's surplus wheat supply for use in Europe.

Today's ruling also is made effective in trade relations with Canada after Sept. 20. Up to this time many of the articles included in the "conservation list" were permitted to go to that country without individual licenses.

The statement says in part:

The Exports Administrative Board has announced a list of commodities whose conservation is necessary on account of the limited supply and the needs of the United States in its successful prosecution of the war. Accordingly the board has practically prohibited the export of these articles, the list of which follows:

Acetone,	Nitric acid,
Aluminium,	Phosphoric acid,
Ammonia salts,	Phosphorus,
Ammonia nitrate,	Pig iron,
Anbydrous ammonia,	Potash and chlorate of potash,
Arsenate of lead,	Potassium salts,
Arsenate of soda,	Saltpeter,
Boiler tubes, (iron and steel,)	Scrap iron,
Butter,	Scrap steel,
Carbolic acid (phenol,)	Searchlights and generators (suited for army or navy use,)
Castor oil and castor beans,	Sodium sulphite,
Chrome nickel steel,	Spiegeleisen,
Cotton linters,	Stearine and stearic acid,
Ferromanganese,	Steel blooms,
Ferrosilicon,	Steel ingots,
Ferrovanadium,	Steel sheet bars,
Flax,	Steel slabs,
Glycerine,	Sugar,
Iron and steel plates, including ship, boiler, tank and other iron and steel plates, ¼ inch thick and heavier and wider than 6 inches, whether plain or fabricated,	Sulphate of ammonia,
	Sulphur and sulphuric acid,
	Superphosphate,
	Tin plate,
	Toluol,
	Tungsten,
	Wireless apparatus,
	Wheat,
	Wheat flour,
Mercury salts,	Wool rags.
Nitrate of soda,

Export licenses may be granted, however, for the above articles when destined for actual war purposes, or when they will directly contribute thereto; and in certain unusual cases when such exports will contribute directly to the immediate production of important commodities required by the the United States; and also in certain other cases where the articles may be exported in limited quantities without detriment to this country. Further, licenses may also be granted for limited quantities of these conserved articles when required for purely medicinal or pharmaceutical purposes.

APPLICATION FORMS.

To procure export licenses for articles on the "conservation list" shippers must use Application Form A-3 for proposed shipments of pig iron, ferromanganese, ferrosilicon, Spiegeleisen, steel ingots billets, blooms, slabs and sheet bars, iron and steel plates, including ship, boiler, tank, (and all other iron and steel plates one-half of an inch thick and heavier, and wider than six inches, whether plain or fabricated,) scrap iron, and scrap steel, when destined to any country in the world.

For all other commodities controlled by the President's proclamation of Aug. 27, 1917, shippers must use Application Form A-1 for proposed shipments to the following countries, or their colonies, possessions or protectorates: Albania, Denmark, Kingdom of The Netherlands, (in Europe,) Norway, Spain, Sweden, and Switzerland.

Shippers must use Application Form A-2 for proposed shipments to the following countries, or their colonies, possessions or protectorates: Abyssinia, Afghanistan, Argentina, Belgium, (that portion not occupied by Germany or her allies,) Bolivia, Brazil, China, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, France, Greece, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Italy, Great Britain, Japan, Liberia, Mexico, Monaco, Montenegro, Morocco, Nepal, the colonies, possessions, and protectorates of The Netherlands; Nicaragua, Oman, Panama, Paraguay, Persia, Peru, Portugal, Rumania, Russia, Salvador, San Marino, Serbia, Siam, Uruguay, and Venezuela.

TO CONTROL POLAND WHILE WAR LASTS

OCCUPY SOIL FOR DEFENSE

And Will Allow Passage of No Legislation That Will Hinder War Operations.

BERLIN, Sept. 16, (via London.)—The Imperial German and Austro-Hungarian letters patent, decreeing a new Polish State, were communicated to the people of Poland by Governor General von Besseler in an audience at the royal palace at noon yesterday. The form of government contemplated for the new state is a constitutional monarchy based on universal direct suffrage.

While both powers of occupation reiterate a sincere desire to realize the spirit of the proclamation of Nov. 5, 1916, the provisions of which are amplified and defined in the present decree, it is, at the same time, understood that the transition of the present Poland to a state of complete independence and sovereignty can be achieved only by a safe and steady progression while the war is in progress. The Central Powers announce that they will be obliged to occupy Polish soil during that period for the purpose of defending their Eastern front.

Wartime expedients, it is explained, make necessary the control of legislation likely to interefere with military rule or operations. For the present a triumvirate of regents wil represent the Crown. It will appoint a Prime Minister, who is to summon a Cabinet. These agencies will select a temporary State Council which will be the forerunner of a Parliament to be elected after by popular vote.

This temporary body will enjoy the full prerogatives of a legislative organization. The Council which recently retired was permitted to act only in an advisory capacity. It was this limitation which occasioned recurring friction and brought about the resignation of the Council in a body. While the former Council contained only twenty-five members, it is planned to increase the new Legisature to three or four times that number.

The embryonic state will have no authority to make foreign treaties or enter into international contracts while it remains under the domination of the powers of occupation, but will have complete freedom to enact legislation intended to meet internal conditions. The educational and judicial systems already are under its unrestricted control. The Prime Minister will be a responsible factor in the proposed organization and will sign all decrees jointly with the three Regents.

The date for the first popular elections to Parliament will be determined by the temporary organization composed of the Regents, the Prime Minister, and the State Council. The Archbishop of Warsaw, Prince Lubomirsky, Mayor of Warsaw, and Count Ostowsky are mentioned as possible Regents. It is proposed to select only native Poles for the most important positions.

CHARGES A MONOPOLY IN TAXI CONTRACT

The inquiry by the Public Service Commission into charges that the Westcott Express Company had taken advantage of its exclusive privilege of having its taxicabs in the Pennsylvania Terminal in this city by charging excessive rates will be resumed this morning. Facts will be brought out in relation to statements made during the hearing on Friday that the Pennsylvania Railroad Company had rescinded an agreement made with the Black and White Taxicab Company for the terminal privilege because this concern would not consent to withdraw its service from Philadelphia, leaving the field in that city under the control of the Quaker City Cab Company practically free of opposition.

"The Pennsylvania Railroad Company, or some of its high officials, will have an opportunity tomorrow to explain several interesting matters which greatly affect the people of this city. It apears from documentary evidence, all attested, by the certificate of the recording officer of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, that a contract acceptable to the railroad company and to the Black and White Cab Company of New York has been authorized drawn and approved by the Board of Directors of the railroad company. This contract would have meant a payment of $12,000 a year by the Black and White Company to the railroad company as rental for the New York station privilege, and would have meant to the New York public improved service in and out of that station at the rates now charged by the Black and White Company. These rates are not only less than those charged by the Westcott Company, but are even less than this city, by ordinance, authorizes taxicabs to charge.

"After the railroad Directors had approved such an agreement greatly to the benefit of the railroad company and the New York public that action was without any explanation rescinded and a contract made with the Westcott Company instead. The Westcott Company charges a higher rate, and apparently pays nothing to the railroad company for its monopoly.

"Correspondence and oral testimony indicate that the refusal of the Pennsylvania Company to go ahead with the Black and White Company arrangement for lower rates in New York was the refusal of W. B. Cole, President of the Black and White Company, to bring about the withdrawal of his cabs from Philadelphia and leave a clear field there for a company charging higher rates and favored by Vice President Atterbury of the Pennsylvania Company.

"Just why a monopoly for a high-priced concern in Philadelphia should be the prerequisite of an arrangement for lower rates in New York does not appear, especially as the railroad company itself apparently loses $12,000 a year by letting the Westcott Company charge more than the legal rates in New York. At least the New York public will be interested to know how their rights and lower rates in New York are made to depend on depriving some one else of low rates in Philadelphia."

While the Public Service Commission has no jurisdiction over taxicabs, that matter being in the hands of the License Bureau, it has jurisdiction over railroads and can, if it pleases, refuse to recognize any contract made by a railroad company which appears to be against the public interest.

ARMED MEN GUARD HIGHWAY

Fearing that the Pennsylvania Railroad intended to extend a spur track over the Lincoln Highway near Kearny, N. J., in the night against the wishes of the authorities of Hudson and Essex Counties in New Jersey, officials of the two counties last night concentrated twenty-five armed men where it was expected the railroad gangs would begin work. Thomas Smith, a freeholder of Essex County, was in command of the armed detachment of special county police, and he asserted he had the authority of the officials of the two counties maintaining the highway to see that the railroad did not cross it.

It was said by leaders of the armed men that it was feared the railroad intended to extend its spur from Harrison, N. J., to the new shipbuilding plants in Kearny, on the other side of the highway. With the permission of the Town Council of Kearny the spur has been built along Passaic Avenue, but work was stopped when the roadbed was within fifty feet of the highway. It was said that the railroad had the right to build on the south side of the thoroughfare, and the only obstacle in the completion of the spur was the new highway. The spur would lead to the plants of the United States Steel Corporation, the Federal Shipbuilding Company, the Foundation Company, and the Ford Motor Company.

No workmen appeared to begin wrk on the extension of the spur, although the armed men remained on duty all night.

To All Americans In New York and All Who Wish To Aid Our Allies

Advance Announcement of "HERO LAND"

As the war progresses, it is inevitable that the magnitude and depth of the suffering and distress visited upon our soldiers and the soldiers of our Allies, upon the prisoners of war and upon the innocent non-combatants, should be greatly intensified. But one thing can help alleviate the terrible conditions. This is assistance from America in the form of money and supplies for relief of the wounded soldiers and the destitute women, children and aged who make up the civilian populations.

With the purpose, first, of bringing home to the United States a keener realization of the situation abroad, and, second, to raise through one concerted effort as large a sum as possible, more than seventy leading Allied War Relief Societies, together with representatives of the Red Cross, will conduct a great Bazaar for American and Allied War Relief, to be know as "HERO LAND," and which will open on November 24th at the Grand Central Palace, this city, and continue for nineteen days.

The American Red Cross is to conduct a tea garden with the Italian Red Cross in charge of the Italian Section and the British Red Cross and the British Recruiting Mission and Patriotic Fund also taking part.

The British, Belgian and Italian Governments are sending official war exhibits and the Allied Legations in Switzerland have combined to send an exhibit of articles made by the interned prisoners of the Allies in that country. Among the exhibits will be an Armored Tank, which has seen service on the West Front, with its entire gun crew, which is being sent by the British Government. It is thus confidently anticipated that "HERO LAND" will constitute the greatest of war exhibits, the most instructive entertainment and the largest Bazaar in all the history of New York.

The Committee wishes to take the public into its entire confidence as to the manner in which the Bazaar is to be conducted and as to the manner in which the proceeds are to be distributed.

EVERY CENT received at the booths, at the exhibits or in entrance fees, or from any other source, after payment of rent, advertising, clerical hire, decorations and necessary salaries, will go to War Relief for American or the Allied countries.

No commissions are to be paid to any one and the Management Committee will receive no profit, percentage, salary or remuneration, of any sort or kind, from the Bazaar.

The accounts of the Bazaar will be audited and made public by James Marwick, of Marwick, Mitchell, Peat & Company, 79 Wall Street, whose representatives will be in charge of all moneys of the Bazaar.

All funds and receipts will be deposited with the Metropolitan Bank, which will open a branch in the Grand Central Palace for the period of the Bazaar, and one of New York's most prominent bankers will be the Treasurer of the Bazaar.

The Committee wishes to advise the public of these facts in order that it may receive, and that the sufferers whom the Bazaar is designed to assist may receive, the co-operation of every man, woman and child in New York whose heart feels sympathy for the valiant and for the weak, who are the chief victims of this war to make the world secure for future generations.

The Management Committee wishes to impress upon the New York public that this Bazaar has no connection with any other unofficial or privately organized bazaar that may be held, and any and all donations of goods should be addressed to the Organizing Secretary, "Hero Land" Bazaar, 360 Madison Avenue, New York City.

MRS. GAVIN BEATS TRAVERS AT GOLF

PLAYS SECOND NINE IN 37

Golf as waged by feminine exponents is much nearer the par of that credited to the other sex than most golfers care to admit, or it would seem so after the eighteen-hole contest at the Englewood Golf Club yesterday in which Mrs. W. A. Gavin, the women's metropolitan champion, finished only 3 down to Jerome D. Travers, former national champion, in actual score and led the international amateur by 4 up after her handicap had been utilized. It was the first half of a thirty-six-hole exhibition arranged as a benefit for the Red Cross, the second part of which is to be played at Garden City next Sunday, and it found a gallery of several hundred enthusiasts marveling at the skillful short game of Mrs. Gavin.

For years Jerry Travers has been considered without a peer once off the tee, but yesterday he played against a fair performer who equaled his best efforts with mashie and niblick and distanced him thoroughly with putter. Mrs. Gavin's approach putts were marvels of accuracy and invariably left her ball close enough to the cup to be sunk without trouble.

Travers, of course, had the greater distance to his drives, and was expected to since Mrs. Gavin was allowed a stroke on each of the long nine holes. And only once did she fail to need the stroke. Most of the long holes were halved and it was at the short holes, or where the distance from tee to cup was not too long for Mrs. Gavin to reach the green in two shots, that Travers was beaten. Not long ago Travers made most of his headway on short holes, but yesterday he could not match the pitch shots and long putts of Mrs. Gavin.

Mrs. Gavin had an actual score of 83. She started poorly and had 46 for the outward round, but headed for home she never lost a stroke and playing from the far tees she made the journey in 37 strokes, a truly remarkable exhibition for any woman. She received a stroke at the third, fourth, sixth, eighth, ninth, eleventh, thirteenth, fourteenth and sixteenth greens.

Travers Praises Mrs. Gavin.

Travers made the outward trip in 40 and came back in 37, and at the finish remarked that it was impossible to beat the sort of game played by Mrs. Gavin under such a handicap.

Mrs. Gavin finished her second round exhibition with a birdie 2 at the well-guarded home hole, sinking a twenty-foot putt to accomplish this achievement, which gave her three holes in succession under par, one won by the aid of a stroke handicap and the last two wrested from the masculine golf leader through more perfect play. She finished the first nine holes 1 up, after losing two of the first three played.

It was the first time in this country that two players of opposite sex and of such international reputation have met in a match of such character. It was arranged primarily for Red Cross purposes, but the secondary motive was to determine, if possible, just how much better a good male golfer is than a female expert of the game. The handicap may have to be revised if Mrs. Gavin continues to out-Travers Travers in her short game at Garden City.

At the first hole Travers was in a bunker off the tee, and dubbed his second to allow Mrs. Gavin to win that hole, 5 to 6. At the second Mrs. Gavin was in the water off the tee, and lost the hole, 4 strokes to 6. Mrs. Gavin got her first handicap stroke at the 400-yard third, but it did not help her, as she was in the rough on her drive, in a sand pit on her second, and needed six strokes to get down, as compared to a par 4 for Travers.

Mrs. Gavin Plays Steady Game.

Mrs. Gavin began her steady playing at the fourth, and never lost her grip thereafter. She sank a twelve-foot putt at the fourth green for a par 4, and with her stroke handicap at this hole squared the match, as Travers missed a putt of similar length for a 3 and needed another putt to get down. Travers gained the lead again at the fifth with a par 5 to 6 for Mrs. Gavin. Travers was away off the course with a pulled drive at the sixth. Mrs. Gavin was on in 4 and down in 6 to halve the hole, aided by another stroke handicap.

Travers made a sorry mess of it trying to get out of a pit at the short seventh, while Mrs. Gavin played perfectly and won the hole 4 to 5. She had a five-foot putt to win the eighth, but missed and halved that hole, aided by her stroke handicap. At the ninth Mrs. Gavin overapproached, but sank her putt to win the hole in par 4, again aided by her handicap.

They halved the tenth in perfect par 4s. Mrs. Gavin sliced her drive at the eleventh and missed a six-foot putt for a win at that hole. Travers squared the match on the uphill twelfth when Mrs. Gavin was in the rough off the tee and dubbed her second shot. Each had long drives at the thirteenth, but Travers was short on his second. Mrs. Gavin was down 4 to win as she received a stroke here. Another handicap stroke at the fourteenth gave Mrs. Gavin a half as she was down in 5 to 4 for Travers. At the 132-yard fifteenth each had par 3s, after Mrs. Gavin rimmed the cup trying for a 2.

Travers lost his chance for the match at the sixteenth, the last hole at which Mrs. Gavin received a handicap. He sliced his drive into the rough and played short and into a sand pit on his second, needing 5 to get down. Mrs. Gavin made a marvelous approach putt here and also was down in 5.

Mrs. Gavin's second shot at the seventeenth landed ten feet from the cup and she got a 4, while Travers was in a trap on his second and took 5. At the home hole each drove the green and Mrs. Gavin sank a twenty-foot putt, while Travers missed one of equal length. Their cards were:

GUY RETURNS TO W. AND J.

WASHINGTON, Penn., Sept. 16.—A telegram received here today brought the information that C. H. (Boots) Guy of Schenectady, N. Y., centre on last year's Washington and Jefferson football team, had arrived in New York yesterday after six months with the American Field Ambulance Service in France and that he would report to Coach Sol Metzger at Washington and Jefferson tomorrow. Guy will remain in college until the holidays, and then re-enlist in the aviation service. He can be used either on the line or in the back field. His return is a boost to Washington and Jefferson's football prospects.

Yankees to Play at Plattsburg.

Aspiring workers at the officers' reserve training camp at Plattsburg, N. Y., are to see a big league baseball game next Sunday through the kindness of Colonel Jacob Ruppert, owner of the Yankees. Colonel Ruppert yesterday arranged to transport his entire baseball team to the up-State military camp next Saturday night. The regulars of the team, fitted with a recruit battery, will play the colts of the club, who will have a regular battery working for them.

BOY CHAMPION DEFEATED.

Foster Successfully Defends Tennis Laurels Against Richards.

Despite the desperate efforts of Vincent Richards, the national boys' champion, Herbert W. Foster retained the tennis championship of Yonkers at the Park Hill Country Club yesterday by defeating Richards in a four-set struggle at 3—6, 6—2, 9—7, 8—6. Although disposed of, the fourteen-year-old national titleholder played an exemplary game against a man six years older and of greater experience.

In the first set Foster seemed content to try out his strokes, and, in the main, hit too low. His own errors allowed Richards to run away with the opening set. Thereafter Foster always had the upper hand, notwithstanding every point was hard fought. Richards played severely until the finish, but never at any time could he get the edge, nor could he gain the advantage game in the deuce sets. Richards played a net game throughout, and volleyed well all the time, but Foster won many points with lobs and passing shots.

The doubles finals between Foster and Dr. Littell, and Richards and Allen Behr will be played Wednesday.

William Tilden, Jr., of Philadelphia reached the fourth round of the open tennis tournament of the Marine and Field Club, on the turf courts of that organization, at Bath Beach yesterday. He defeated R. J. Ranney at 6—1, 6—2, and Jack Allen at 6—3, 6—2, to advance that far. He was the only one to win two matches, although J. Howard Voshell, the national indoor champion, and Allen Behr gained third round brackets.

The summaries:

Second Round—J. Howard Voshell defeated H. R. Burroughs, 6—4, 6—2; William Tilden, Jr., defeated R. J. Ranney, 6—1, 6—2; Allen Behr defeated Mark E. Noble, 6—0, 6—3; Jack Allen defeated Fred Anderson, 6—4, 6—2.

For the second annual show of the Bronx County Kennel Club, an all-day affair to be held at the old Second Battery Armory on Friday, Oct. 12, about 600 special prizes are offered, most of them to be won outright, though many of them are for point competition lasting through the season or terminating with the show of the Westminster Kennel Club.

The show will be for the benefit of the Bronx Chapter of the Red Cross Society, and will be the first to be held in the metropolitan district under the new rules as to championship points recently adopted by the American Kennel Club, points to be based on the number of entries in each class, instead of the total for the show. It will be the first tryout for the rule, and for that reason the best of judges have been secured. Among these are Dr. J. E. De Mund, G. Muss-Arnolt, Theodore Offerman, J. N. Goodman, W. E. Baker, Jr., Mrs. Henry Hill, Mrs. C. M. Lunt, and others of as marked ability in their specialties.

Entries for the show, which promises to be one of the best to be held in the district in the early season, will close on Friday, Sept. 28, with Wilbur H. Purcell, who will be manager of the show, at 29 Broadway.

MAJOR TAYLOR RIDES AGAIN.

Veteran Cycling Champion Wins Old-timers' Race at Newark.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 16.—Major Taylor, the famous negro sprinter, who held the American cycling championship in 1900, won the one mile old-timers' race at the Velodrome here this afternoon. The famous colored sprinter got a big ovation from the crowd after beating Arthur Ross of Harrison, N. J., John M. Chapman, Atlanta, Ga., and Howard Freeman, Portland, Ore., who finished in the order named.

Frank Kramer outsprinted Bob Spears and Arthur Spencer in a three-cornered match race. Spears finished second both times. Alfred Goullet won the five-mile open and the half-mile handicap.

DE PALMA HAS FAST TRIAL.

Drives Packard 118 Miles an Hour in Workout on Speedway.

Ralph De Palma, who is the popular favorite in the Harkness Trophy race at the Sheepshead Bay Speedway next Saturday afternoon, worked out four miles, in his Packard, yesterday over the Bay course in 2:03 2-5. De Palma's average was better than 118 miles an hour.

Tommy Milton, who won the Providence 100-mile Derby last Saturday, wired his entry from the Rhode Island capital. He with twenty others entered in the race will arrive this morning.

Two Mercer cars, one to be driven by Otto Henning, and the other with Walter Haines at the wheel, will be seen in the big cup race. Their mounts bring the entries to thirty-two.

Paterson Eleven Victor.

PATERSON, Sept. 16.—The Paterson Football Club, a newcomer in soccer circles and a member of the National League, made its debut at Olympic Park today and defeated the crack West Hudsons of Newark by the score of 6 goals to 3. Garside, Hayes and Vandeweghe scored a goal apiece for Paterson and Gradwell tallied three times. Heminsley, Knowles and Brown were the goal-getters for the West Hudsons.

KATHRYN III. TAKES MOTOR BOAT RACE

S. W. Chapple's Craft Leads Fleet of Nineteen in Hudson River Contest.

Four handsome trophies offered by the flag officers of the Hudson River Yacht Club brought out twenty-four entries and nineteen starters in the annual regatta of the club, which was held yesterday on the Hudson River, opposite the clubhouse at the foot of Ninety-second Street. The fleet included about everything in the form of a motor boat of types which are not in use for coast patrol, from the little chug-chug runabout to the semi-speed fifty-footers.

There were several thousand persons on the grassy slopes of Riverside Park to watch the trips of the motor craft over the triangular course up the Hudson to a point opposite the Fort Lee ferry, down the river to a mark off the New Jersey shore, far to the westward of the warships riding at anchor off the clubhouse, and then back to the starting point, a trip which gave the crowds a good chance to see the boats operate. The race was run as one class on the handicap system based on the fastest lap made by each boat in the race, with a point credited for starting, for finishing and for each boat defeated in a lap after the corrected time had been figured. This made the decision of the race a matter of higher mathematics, with the result that while it took less than two hours to run the race it took twice that time to figure the handicap allowances. The crowd dispersed long before the results were announced, which was some time after colors had been sounded on the war vessels, and when riding lights had replaced flags and ensigns.

Nineteen boats got away to one of the prettiest starts seen on a Hudson River regatta, as none of them were more than 15 seconds behind the starting signal. The little Steelcrete and Heloise and the big Madeline III. led the fleet in that dash up the river, with the rest well bunched until the twelve-knot fellows crept away from the four and five-knotters, to which they were giving large chunks of time in their handicaps.

Five of the craft, Heloise, Albatross, Lauralice, Belle France, and Nymph, failed to show at the judges' boat on the first trip around, in which run Kathryn was the leader, with Madeline, Steelcrete, and Kodak close followers. The five first named developed engine troubles before the first leg was ended and had to retire from competition, but all the others came through to the finish.

Kathryn led the fleet in corrected as well as elapsed time over all the laps and the big Madeline was a close second, making the three laps so steadily that there was a difference of only 15 seconds in the time made in the three laps.

When the mathematicians had finished their figuring on sheets which then looked like leaves from a book of logarithms, they announced that Kathryn had won the huge loving cup presented by Commodore Nicholas Saner, Madeline had taken the beaker offered by Vice Commodore Grant Humphrey, Steelcrete had captured the silver goblet which was Rear Commodore Charles Everly's offering, and Kodak had at her trophy the dainty cup which was Fleet Captain H. C. Baum's contribution.

Points won by the different competitors—the Mary E. and Brownie being tied for tenth place, and the Retha R. and Wahabe for the booby prize—are as follows:

SALOMY, PEP. AND RANI WIN.

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., Sept. 16.—There being a spanking breeze on the Sound today the Indian Harbor one-design yachts were out this morning for their only race of the season. They sailed over the regular inside course off Captain's Island, Salomy defeating Wabisi by a minute and a half in a race which took less than an hour.

In the afternoon the Arrow class had a brush over the regular course, which Pep, owned by Commodore Childs, won by a tridle over two minutes from Vice Commodore Mallory's Rani. The defeated yacht owners had a little dispute over the respective qualities of their craft, which resulted in a brush over a two-mile course, in which Rani was victorious.

ALTAIR IS STAR CHAMPION.

PORT WASHINGTON, L. I., Sept. 16.—E. V. Willis with his yacht Altair of the Star Class today won the last of the series of interclub yacht races for the championship of the class in Manhasset Bay when he crossed the line in a finish that was so close that the result was not known until the official time was announced by the Regatta Committee. Only three seconds separated the first three yachts. The Altair led Charles F. Hyde's Hydra by two seconds, which in turn was only one second ahead of L. A. D. Percival's Mars.

By winning today Willis and the Altair clinched the championship. The Hydra finished second on the season, and Allan Walker third with his Little Bear. Hydra won the club championship.

The summary:

RANI IS CLUB CHAMPION.

Wins Indian Harbor Y. C. Competition by Eight Points.

GREENWICH, Conn., Sept. 16.—The races for the Arrow Class of the Indian Harbor Yacht Club sailed during the months of August and September for the club championship resulted in a victory for the Rani, owned and sailed by Vice Commodore Clifford D. Mallory, which has a record of twenty-four points for both series. Rear Commodore Dyer's Jack o' Lantern got second place, making most of her points in the second series, in which Rani, which had scored twenty-two in the first series, scored but two points. Hawk and Snapper tied for third place.

CLOVER PATCH IS HEADED.

Mittie Bedworth Outpaces Fast Sidewheeler on Speedway.

J. A. Murphy's brown mare, Clover Patch, which has held the pacing championship of the Harlem Speedway for the past three years, was yesterday forced to dip her colors to Mittie Bedworth, a chestnut mare, also owned by the veteran Murphy, in the championship class for pacers at the eighth midsummer matinee of the Road Drivers Association on the Harlem Speedway. The victory by the comparative newcomer came in straight heats, Jesse Smith driving Mittie Bedworth past the judges' stand in each brush a goodly margin ahead of Clover Patch, who was driven by the veteran Dave McClary.

In the trotting championship class Oakland Boy and Marion Toddington, both of the Murphy stable, were opposed to each other but after each horse had gained the honors of a heat the race was discontinued. Oakland Boy gained the first and Marion Toddington the second brush.

HOT FINISH BEATS GIANTS.

Special to The New York Times.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 16.—A sensational ninth inning rally gave the Buffalo International League club a victory over the Giants in an exhibition game here today, by a score of 5 to 4. The Giants apparently had the game won when the local club went to bat in the ninth, but Jeff Tesreau weakened. Carlstrom and Jackson doubled, and Steinfeldt lifted the ball over the right field fence, breaking up the game.

New York got away to a two-run lead in the first inning on a base on balls to Burns, Robertson's infield hit, Kauff's sacrifice and a double by Fletcher. Buffalo scored one also in the first inning, and tied the score in the third. The Giants forged ahead again in the sixth on singles by Holke and Gibson, Wilhoit's single and Murray's sacrifice fly.

About eight thousand fans turned out for the game. Nearly half of them were on the field and hits into the crowd were good for only two bases.

Miller Hurt While Team Defeats Youngstown, 8 to 4.

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, Sept. 16.—The Brooklyn Nationals easily defeated the Youngstown McElroys 8 to 4 in an exhibition game here today. In only one inning, the ninth, was the local team effective, when by a series of hits off Cadore, three runs were scored. Otto Miller, Brooklyn's catcher, was hit on the wrist by a wild pitch, and while no bones were broken he will be unable to play for several days.

PENNANT GOES TO TORONTO

International Race Ends with Lajoie's Team Ahead.

E. G. Barrow, President of the International League, yesterday made public the final official standings of the clubs in the league for the 1917 season, which ended yesterday. Toronto with Larry Lajoie as manager won the pennant, but the race was close to the end between that club and the Providence, Baltimore and Newark teams. Toronto clinched the premier honors by taking both games of a double-header from Rochester on Saturday. The final standing follows:

	Won.	Lost.	P.C.
Providence	90	61	.596
Baltimore	88	61	.591

NEW YORK WINS AT SOCCER.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Sept. 15.—Favored by genuine Fall weather, the soccer season of 1917-18 was opened here this afternoon by the team of the New York Football Club, which defeated the Bridgeport City eleven by 3 goals to 1.

Two minutes from the start Van den Eynden, New York's centre half, negotiated Bridgeport's net by taking quick advantage of a weak play by the home custodian, Adamson shot the second goal a minute la er, and the same player kicked the third while lying on the ground, twelve minutes from the start.

FRICK LEADS FIELD IN HALF-MILE RUN

Stokeley, White, Eller, and McDonald Also Score in Athletic Fund Games.

Eddie Frick, the veteran middle-distance runner of the New York Athletic Club, whose recent return to local A. A. U. track and field competition was signalized by his winning the senior metropolitan half-mile title, yesterday indicated clearly his ability to defend his laurels over this distance, when he won the half-mile run at the C. C. N. Y. Stadium in connection with the track and field sports of the Intersectional Athletic League in aid of The Evening World's Army Athletic Fund.

A field of twelve runners, all of whom have shown ability on local tracks during the past season, toed the starting mark against Frick in this race, but from the shot which sent the athletes away on their journey the superiority of the Winged Foot standard bearer was manifest. Frick's stride carried him to the van position before the first turn was rounded on the initial lap and thereafter he opened up an almost continually increasing gap on the rest of the field. At the finish he had an advantage of about 10 yards on Walter Powe, Alpha P. C. C., and his time was 2:02.

About 5,000 persons crowded into the spacious concrete grandstand and many hundreds who clustered about the fence inclosing the track on three sides, witnessed one of the best and most interesting of the Summer's athletic meets. During the games several women made a trip through the crowd with collection baskets and received quite a tidy sum for the athletic fund.

One of the best finishes of the day developed in the two-mile run, in which William Stokeley, of the St. Christopher Club, won an interesting duel in the last lap with James McNeil, Presentation Club. Peter White, the negro flyer of the Salem-Crescent A. C., holder of national sprinting honors, scored over Fred Teschner, Glencoe A. C., junior metropolitan champion, in the 100-yard dash, White winning from the Glencoe man by inches. George W. Dernell, senior metropolitan 220- and 440-yard champion, ran away from his field in the 300-yard run, and breasted the tape, easing his stride, two yards to the good.

In the one-milk walk Willie Plant, of the Long Island A. C., senior metropolitan champion, scored a convincing victory over Alexander Jessup, unattached, junior national three-mile titleholder, leading the latter, who was in third position, to the tape by about nine-quarters of a lap. Pilchta, Manhawk A. C., was second, about twenty yards back of Plant.

Jack Eller, senior hurdles champion, and Eugene B. Sanger, formerly of the New York A. C., but now attached to Company I, 165th Infantry, the old "Fighting Sixty-ninth," engaged in an exhibition hurdles race, which Eller won handily. Pat McDonald, local weight champion, captured the honors in the 12-pound shotput, and finished second to Matt McGrath, former national titleholder, in the 56-pound weight event.

METROPOLITAN GETS 7 AMERICAN ARTISTS

ONLY TWO STARS MISSING

"The Robin Woman," an American Work, to be Produced—Season Begins Nov. 12.

Six novelties, two of them by American composers, and several interesting revivals, in a year when European opera houses have offered little that is new, are promised for New York in the annual prospectus of the Metropolitan Opera Company issued today to the greatest subscription ever known in a theatre. New artists have been found without the usual search for ready-made stars abroad. Among these are seven young American singers, three Spanish, one Scandinavian, and one Dutch, while the working staff is increased by two Frenchmen, one Italian, and one Pole. Two of last year's leading singers are missing, but in their places are two added names not unknown on Broadway.

General Manager Giulio Gatti-Casazza discussed at length yesterday his program for the coming season, which will begin on Monday evening, Nov. 12. Mr. Gatti-Casazza in his formal statement took occasion to express his appreciation of the support given to the opera last season, which, he said, was the most generous accorded during his nine years' administration. Regarding the program for the 1917-1918 season, he believes he could say without presumption that "for breadth, novelty, and variety it is decidedly the best I have so far had the pleasure of presenting to the New York public."

To Produce "The Robin Woman."

First in importance, if not in time, among the novelties to be produced, will be "Shanewis," or "The Robin Woman," an opera in two scenes, with text in English by Nellie Richmond Eberhart, and music by Charles Wakefield Cadman, who was born at Johnstown, Penn., in 1881, and has lived in Pittsburgh and the West. An early production will be "The Dance of the Place Congo," a ballet-pantomime descriptive of life in old New Orleans, the theme taken from a story by George W. Cable, and the music by Henry F. Gilbert of Boston. Liszt's "St. Elizabeth," well known in its oratorio form, and embodying characters familiar in Wagner's "Tannhäuser" also will be done as an opera in five scenes, the text by Otto Roquette, in German.

Signor Carjso has sung in South America recently the tenor rôle in Mascagni's "Lodoletta," or "The Young Skylark," an opera in three acts, with libretto by C. Forzano from Ouida's romance of "Two Little Wooden Shoes." This work had its première in Rome last Spring, followed by productions at Naples and Milan, and is now to be shown at the Metropolitan. A new five-act French opera is "Maroul," also given lately in Argentina, the libretto by Lucien Nepoty after "The Arabian Nights," and the music by Henri Rabaud. Finally, "Le Coq d'Or" will be performed in French as an opera-pantomime in three acts, the words by V. Bilisky, after a poem of Pushkin, and music by Rimsky-Korsakoff, the Russian.

Revivals promised by Mr. Gatti-Casazza include in French, Gounod's "Faust" and Meyerbeer's "Le Prophete," and in Italian Montemezzi's "Amore dei Tre Re," Donizetti's "La Figlia del Reggimento," and Bellini's "I Puritani." All of last year's repertory is retained, with four exceptions—"Der Rosenkavalier," Haensel und Gretel," "Magic Flute," and "Iphigenia." Possible revivals in their stead are "Orfeo e Euridice," "Les Huguenots," "Un Ballo in Maschera," "Tannhäuser," "La Gioconda," "Manon," "Iris," and "Il Segreto di Suzanna."

Seven Americans Engaged.

As to the artists engaged, the retirement of Mme. Gadski was told by the singer herself last Spring. The name of Mr. Goritz is also absent from the new roster of the company, as is that of Conductor Polacco. Seven Americans now added include Florence Easton, formerly of the Chicago troupe, as well as Covent Garden, London, and the Royal Opera, Berlin; May Peterson, from the Opera Comique, Paris; Kanders, from Brussels and Strassburg; Marie Conde and Ruth Miller, all sopranos; Cecil Arden, mezzo-soprano, and Thomas Chalmers, baritone. Mr. Gatti-Casazza is "especially happy" to announce the re-engagement of Mme. Olive Fremstad and John McCormack.

There are also Julia Claussen, the Scandinavian mezzo-soprano, formerly of Covent Garden and the Chicago company; Hipolito Lazaro, the Spanish tenor, from La Scala in Milan, the Colon, Buenos Aires, and the Royal Opera, Madrid; Vincente Ballester, a Spanish baritone, who has sung in New York theatres; Josef Groenen, a Dutch baritone, from the Royal Opera of Amsterdam, and José Mardones, the Spanish bass-baritone, formerly of the Boston Opera Company. In other departments are Pierre Monteux and Roberto Moranzoni, conductors, and Richard Ordynski, stage director, all well known in New York; Armando Agnini, stage manager for the Italian repertory; Wilfred Pelletier, an assistant conductor, and Adolf Boim, who appeared with the Russian ballet.

Though the Metropolitan management has for some time owned the exclusive American rights for the production of "La Rondine," or "The Swallows," the new opera of Signor Puccini lately staged at Monte Carlo, it is doubtful if the work can be given this season in New York "owing to difficulties due to the present state of war." The European conflict has not affected the return of most of last season's artists, who, with few exceptions, spent the Summer in this country. It is noted in the list of all those named to reappear, that Mme. Farrar and Mr. Caruso are engaged "for the entire season."

The following is Mr. Gatti-Casazza's list, in alphabetical order, of all the "artists retained" for the season. Sopranos, Frances Alda, Maria Barrientos, Anna Case, Vera Curtis, Minnie Egener, Alice Eversman, Geraldine Farrar, Rita Fornia, Mabel Garrison, Frieda Hempel, Melanie Kurt, Edith Mason, Claudia Muzio, Marie Rappold, Lenora Sparkes, Marie Sundelius, Marie Tiffany; mezzo-sopranos and contraltos, Emma Borniggia, Sophie Braslau, Raymonde Delaunois, Kathleen Howard, Marie Mattfeld, Margaret Matzenauer, Florence Mulford, Margaret Ober, Flora Perini, Lila Robeson; tenors, Paul Althouse, Pietro Audisio, Angelo Bada, Jullius Bayer, Max Bloch, Luca Botta, Fernando Carpi, Enrico Caruso, Riccardo Martin, Giovanni Martinelli, Albert Reiss, Johannes Sembach, Jacques Urlus; baritones, Pasquale Amato, Giuseppe de Luca, Mario Laurenti, Robert Leonhardt, Vincenzo Reschiglian, Carl Schlegel, Antonio Scotti, Herman Weil, Clarence Whitehill; basses, Carl Braun, Adamo Didur, Pompilio Malatesta, Giulio Rossi, Leon Rothier, Basyl Ruysdael, Andres de Segurola, and Henri Scott.

SPALDING CANCELS TOUR.

Albert Spalding, who made his first appearance in khaki at the Hippodrome last night in a benefit concert for the Army Athletic Fund, announced that he has canceled his tour of the United States and Canada for the coming season and has joined the aviation branch of the Signal Corps as an interpreter. This patriotic move on his part will cost a sum that his manager has figured at $35,000 in contracts for the Winter, when Mr. Spalding was to have appeared as violin soloist with the leading symphony orchestras and musical societies throughout the country.

Spalding is an accomplished linguist, having lived much abroad, both during and after his student days in Florence, and since that time he has made extended professional tours of France, Germany, Austria, Italy, Russia, and the Scandinavian countries. He speaks five languages, and is hopeful that Uncle Sam may put his abilities in this line to good service when he sails soon for the other side to complete his military training in France.

The violinist was born in Chicago in 1888, studied in New York with Jean Buitrago, in Florence with Chiti, and later at Bologna, where he passed the examination for a professorship when 14 years old. He made his début in 1905 in Paris, and three years afterward in New York.

Julian Eltinge's talents as a female impersonator were exhibited for the first time on the screen at the Rialto Theatre yesterday in a picture entitled "Countess Charming." It is the work of Gelett Burgess and Carolyn Wells, and is necessarily somewhat akin to the long succession of Eltinge plays. It succeeds in being entertaining, however, and incidentally demonstrates that the star has a considerable aptitude for the screen.

The proper display of Mr. Eltinge's abilities requires that there shall be found some reason or pretext for his donning of female attire, and Mr. Eltinge's screen career is accordingly limited only by the invention of his authors. In "Countess Charming" the trick is turned somewhat arbitrarily, but its effectiveness is nevertheless not lost. The film, incidentally, is exceptionally well acted, Tully Marshall and Gustav von Seyffertitz being among those in the supporting company.

At the Strand Theatre Pauline Frederick was seen in "Double Crossed," and "The Man Without a Country" is continuing at the Broadway.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Joaquin Valverde, a well-known Spanish composer, has arrived in this country with an operetta entitled "The Land of Joy," which will be offered in New York in November. The piece will have its premiere at the National Theatre, Havana, Oct. 1.

Edward E. Rice, producer of "1492" and many other old-time comic operas, will be the recipient of a testimonial performance next month in honor of his fortieth year of theatrical activity. Raymond Hitchcock has charge of the preparations and the performance will take place at Hitchcock's Forty-fourth Street Theatre on the night of Sunday, Oct. 14.

Rehearsals of "Broken Threads," Ernest Wilkes's play, will begin today. In the company are Cyril Keighley, Francis Byrne, William Roselle, and Fred W. Peters.

The Broadhurst Theatre is now nearly completed, and it is expected that "Misalliance" will open in advance of Sept. 27, the date recently announced.

Grace George made her first appearance in "Eve's Daughter," a comedy by Alicia Ramsey, Saturday afternoon, at Long Branch. It will be one of the plays in her repertory at the Playhouse.

How To Test A Phonograph

THE Edison Shop makes this suggestion to those who wish to choose carefully: compare all instruments before you decide. Let us give you a list of artists who have made records, in some cases the same selections, for both The New Edison and the talking machines. Then, compare Mr. Edison's Re-Creations with the reproductions upon other instruments. Judge which is most true to life. We welcome this comparison.

The NEW EDISON

No Needles to Change
Can Be Made to Play All Makes of Records

Mr. Edison's new art needs no greater endorsement than the fact that 800,000 people who have heard his Re-Created music in a test of actual comparison with the living tone have been unable to detect the difference. Mr. Edison, alone, has dared this rigid test.

We Invite you to attend one of the daily concerts of Music's Re-Creation in our Recital Hall—11:30 a.m. to 5 p. m.

Only $10.00 brings the New Edison, Model C100, to your home at once. Balance in partial payments of only $8.00 a month. Other models on terms only slightly higher. Come in and ask us about our partial payment plan.

KERENSKY'S PROCLAMATION.

The arrest of General KORNILOFF did not end the Russian crisis, nor will it end until one of the two contending principles conquers the other. It is the present misfortune of KERENSKY that he seeks to occupy a middle ground. Where the life of Russia is concerned, no middle ground can be permanently held, and KERENSKY is entitled to admiration for having been able to hold his as long as he has. Every effort he makes at reconciliation and compromise merely reveals how deep is the gulf he seeks to bridge. Now he declares the Russian Republic, because, he says, of a memory that has come to him of how all parties were enthusiastically united on that one point when the two mutually incompatible principles met each other face to face at the Moscow Conference and assured themselves of the fact that they could not live together. This declaration, with its reason, sufficiently illustrates how KERENSKY, the middle-of the-road man, is catching at straws.

The two principles are disintegration and construction, chaos and society, anarchy and government, the nation and its destruction. KERENSKY has done wonders in carrying them both on his shoulders so long; and it was not until the ever-memorable Moscow Conference, when they confronted each other across his back, that they finally recognized each other's features and knew that they must get off and fight. After KERENSKY was saved by the secession of some of KORNILOFF'S soldiers to the Government side, he worked with might and main to patch up another compromise. He would have admitted the Constitutional Democrats into the Government; but the Socialists, too, had known ever since the Moscow Conference that compromises were no longer possible, and they refused to permit it. The extreme element among them had captured the Workmen's and Soldiers' Council, and he was powerless to set himself against them—unless, indeed, he was willing to fight them, in which case he would have been simply going over to KORNILOFF.

So he evaded the problem for the time being by appointing five men to run the Government until Sept. 25, when he will appoint a new Ministry. He would like to have it a coalition Ministry, but the Socialists are sternly resolved that there shall be no compromise, that they shall rule alone. Still, KERENSKY has gained a breathing spell of eleven days. Then, in a desperate effort to find a common meeting ground where every one else is resolved that there shall be none, he appeals to the one sentiment they all have in common by declaring the Republic—but at the same time postponing the elections until Nov. 12.

KERENSKY frankly declares that the confusion caused by KORNILOFF'S revolt is great, and the Fatherland in danger. One can gain an idea of what he means by the answer he has received from the Don Cossacks to his request that they arrest General KALEDINES. They reply that it is impossible to obey the order "because "he has to attend the military con- "ference of the Cossacks in his offi- "cial capacity as Hetman." They declare their loyalty to the Government; but, then, KALEDINES and KORNILOFF themselves are ready to do that, and sincerely. What those Generals have demanded is more strength in the Government, not less, and still less have they favored a reaction. The surrender of KORNILOFF is but the beginning; and at that military conference on the Don the men who returned that answer will gravely consider, under the guidance of their Hetman, whether it is possible for them to live in the same house with the men who are driving Russia to her destruction.

Russia must be saved, and she will not be saved by compromise. She might be, if the forces of disintegration would be satisfied with anything short of complete mastery of the situation. But, despite the wonderful things KERENSKY did in the way of bringing about an appearance of co-operation between the two forces, the anarchic side never had any intention of such a thing, from the first. It has been the other side that has exerted all the forbearance. Their forbearance ceased only when it became too plain for doubt that further forbearance meant the dissolution of Russia into half a score of republics under the dominance of Germany, and the disappearance of them all from the map within easily measurable years.

THE POSTAGE TAX.

The Senate very sensibly and wisely dropped from the Revenue bill the House provision for an increase in second-class postage, affecting newspapers and periodicals. In the House bill a system of zones was established, and the second-class rate rose sharply from a moderate increase for the first zone to absolutely prohibitive charges for parts of the country remote from the place of publication. The Senate in its consideration of the bill was convinced of the impolicy of forbidding by tax the interchange of information and opinion between the States of the Union, but there are reports in Washington that an attempt will be made in conference to restore this.

No member of the conference committee or of either house can consistently favor an increase of the second-class postal charge unless he is really desirous of erecting barriers which will make East and West, North and South, strangers to each other in so far as that evil purpose can be accomplished by limiting the circulations of newspapers to territory within 200 miles of their offices. The House fixed rates which would forbid the people of the Mountain States and the Pacific Slope to subscribe to a newspaper published in the East. Even newspaper exchanges between distant points would be excluded from the mails by the outrageous rates, and the North and the East would be able to learn only by telegraph or by private communications what the South and West were thinking about.

This is a first-rate way to do the country a dangerous social and political injury. A republic, if it be of large territorial extent, must for its own safety bind its people together by supplying or permitting the use of every means of easy and frequent communication of ideas. This postal tax would establish the contrary policy. We are a migratory people, we wander far, but a charge of 8 or 9 cents postage on each copy of a daily newspaper would deprive newmade citizens of Oregon or of Texas of the privilege of getting the news of their old homes in Vermont or New York.

Such a provision of the Tax bill, like a prohibitory duty on imports, would produce little revenue, but it would yield a large fruitage of vexation and public harm.

PATRIOTS AND TRAITORS.

Mr. ROOT'S speech at the "war mass meeting" in Chicago was a notice and a warning to those persons, still too numerous in the United States, who have forgotten their duty to it. We have lived in peace so long, the Spanish war was so slight a thing, that many citizens do not yet understand the irresistible force of the national will in a great national peril. Old men among us remember the implacable resolution of the North in 1861, the force, tumultuary or legal, that was brought to bear upon the malcontents, the arguers and resistants, the men who forgot that the majority governs and that, when a nation is fighting for its life and giving its sons to fight, the opponents of the national policy must cultivate silence or invite punishment.

The crowds that marched about New York in 1861 and made newspapers friendly to the South put out the American flag; the crowds that in small towns and great showed their hostility to advocates or apologists of the South, were just as much in love with free speech, and the right of assemblage, and every guarantee of the Bill of Rights as was the minority against whom their demonstrations were made. But there is a time when free speech and free action must take heed lest they abuse their privilege. There is a time when, sending its sons to battle, a nation, fighting for paramount rights the vindication of which transcends immeasurably the free play of individual opinion, must be intolerant of opinions that are dangerous. The United States gathers all its forces for its preservation. Its mind, deliberately made up and constitutionally declared, must prevail. Those who, from honest difference of opinion, do not share in that national resolution will yield to it if they are wise. Those who, from whatever cause, take, in effect, the enemy side and strive to thwart the purpose of their country have no more rights here, and are entitled to no more sympathy, than if they were active alien enemies.

France is a land of Frenchmen. In the United States there has been carried too far a tolerance and a cosmopolitan spirit natural enough in a people of many origins. It has allowed itself to shelter racial friendships and resentments that must disappear when the United States has need to be united against the common enemy of democracy.

The curious, in one respect the admirable, in another the pernicious, patience which has harbored, and harbors under whatever multiplicity of names disguised, a constant anti-American and pro-German campaign while we are at war with Germany, is stretched to its limits. Already we have "seen our dead." The beginning is hardly come. We are dedicating our youth to the defense of democracy. We are making or are about to make enormous efforts and sacrifices. We are offering money and life. We are fighting Germany and all its sinister plottings and secret auxiliaries. It will be salubrious for the partisans of Germany in the United States to cease to invite the danger which their long impunity has made them careless of. It will be salubrious for the pacifists to shut up, whether they breathe Utopian air or seek, by a hundred indirections and combinations, to bring on a peace, triumphant for Germany and fatal to the free world.

The United States is bent on one great purpose. To that it will give all. It will not spare much longer its secret or open enemies at home. "The "men who are speaking and writing "and printing arguments against the "war now," said Mr. ROOT at Chicago, "and against everything that is being "done to carry on the war, are ren- "dering more effective service to Ger- "many than they could render in the "field. The purpose and effect of "what they are doing are so plain "that it is impossible to resist the "conclusion that the greater part of "them are at heart traitors to the "United States and willfully seeking "to bring about the triumph of Ger- "many and the humiliation and de- "feat of their own country." So with most of the pacifists and the opponents of conscription. These people have got to stop. The United States is defending itself abroad. It is enlisting all its energies to defend itself and its liberty abroad. It knows how to defend itself at home against disloyalists and traitors. Their occupation will be a good deal more difficult and hazardous in 1918 than it has been in 1917.

SEDITIOUS PUBLICATIONS.

Senator KING'S amendment to the Trading with the Enemy bill excludes from the mails all publications in the German language containing "comments respecting the Govern- "ment of the United States, or of any "nation with which Germany is at "war, its policies, international rela- "tions, the state or conduct of the "war, or any matter relating there- "to," unless a "true and complete "translation of the same" in English is printed in a parallel column. The arrant, steady sedition, disloyalty, anti-Americanism of a very great part of the German-language press, its opposition to the United States, are notorious. They have gone on much too long. They should be stopped short. There was no law to deal with these vendors of something very like treason. There will be such a law if Senator KING'S amendment is approved in conference of the two houses.

The obvious criticism of the King amendment is that it isn't inclusive enough. German has no solitary shame as a vehicle of disloyalty. Newspapers and periodicals in other languages, worst of all in English, fire constantly and furiously or "snipe" on the sly at the United States. The King amendment should be sufficient notice to these seditionaries to mend their ways. They can be reached and they will be reached by the law if they don't.

GOLD, SILVER, AND PAPER.

In an article in THE TIMES Sunday Magazine yesterday may be found sixteen reasons why silver is worth a dollar an ounce. They are good reasons, appealing particularly to practical men. The occurrence itself is so rare that it is necessary to go back to 1884 to duplicate it. That was the year of the Grant & Ward failure and panic. This is the year of the largest figures of prosperity this country has ever known. Also it is the year of the greatest abundance of money the world has ever known. Between 1900 and 1913 the currencies of forty nations increased by a quarter to nearly fourteen billions, or twice as fast as the increase of population. Since 1913 the increase in currencies has been 80 per cent., to nearly twenty-five billions, while the death rate has overtaken the birth rate. And yet there is such an insufficiency of currency throughout the world that the demand for the secondary money metal has raised the price to such an extent that it is the phenomenon of a generation. What is the clue to the mystery? When money is so plenty why should it be worth a scarcity price? Why should all the security markets be readjusting themselves to new investment yields at a time when trade is so prosperous that profits are penalized by laws directed against them?

The question answers itself. Capital is cheap only when times are settled and conditions are permanent. That can be only in peace, and not always in peace, as numerous panics attest. Wars and panics are temporary conditions marked by financial conditions peculiar to them. The leading characteristic of both of them is lack of confidence. The statement that silver is wanted for currency in various countries is true, but does not tell the whole truth. Silver currency is wanted not alone for use but also for hoarding, and is wanted most where there is most currency already. In Germany, for example, the uncovered currency in 1913 was $262,000,000, and this year is $1,613,000,000. This month Germany has issued more currency and has lost gold. The more gold Germany loses the more currency it must issue, and the less the mark will be worth. The currency which Germany issues is the currency which Germans among themselves will use both by necessity and choice. The people will hoard the silver as closely as the Government hoards the gold. They distrust intuitively the currency which is losing value outside Germany, and want something of intrinsic worth. Silver disappears in India for reasons substantially similar. The currency of India is stabilized upon scientific principles, but the people of India are more accustomed to reverses of values than to permanence. They know that silver has its ups and downs, for reasons which they do not understand, but they know also that it never becomes worthless and usually recovers from depressions.

But silver is not wanted in the United States either for currency or for hoarding. The volume of our currency has increased less than that of any other country, and yet is more than sufficient for all purposes of trade, with almost impregnable credit resources in reserve. That is because the confidence in our currency is complete. Never was any currency so buttressed by gold, which is so ample in supply that we are using half of it for pocket money rather than for banking purposes. In addition, there is a half billion of silver dollars, accumulated long ago in our effort to "do something for silver." Only the survival of the remnant of that heresy prevents the retirement of silver as legal tender, and fiat notes also. There are eight sorts of Government money, and two sorts of bank notes. That is far too many. The ideal would be one sort of "hard" money, gold, and one sort of bank notes, those issued by the Federal Reserve. Silver is necessary only for fractional currency, and it is doubtful if there ever will be a better opportunity to dispose of the half billion our Treasury holds.

But if our currency is both less inflated than other currencies and more ample for the needs of trade, that only increases the mystery of the scarcity of capital at the height of a trade boom. The reason is the same as the single one to which the sixteen reasons for the rise in silver are reducible. Capital is not sure of its profits because of legislation directed specifically against it. In the war to establish the Union we made the error of enacting that a dollar was a piece of paper bearing a promise to pay a dollar. It was even proposed to return that sort of dollar to those who had paid real dollars into the Treasury. The consequence was that people paid their debts with the fiat dollars, and hoarded the real dollars, just as silver is now wanted to hide. The shifts in the security markets are due now partly to legislation against profits, and partly to overbidding by borrowers who pay with tax money, and, therefore, are not limited by economic considerations. When investors remark that they are being deprived of the benefit of their foresight, they cast about for safer places in which to put their capital, lest they should lose more than their interest. They remark that Governments which have not failed to repay capital intrusted to them are promising interest rivaling the profits lawmakers are disposed to allow to commercial ventures with greater risks. Investors hoard their capital only as a last recourse. Their first move to escape the lawmakers' attack on profit is to take interest instead of profits, that is to withdraw their resources from the investments discriminated against. That is why the Government is now asked to finance the railways, since they cannot finance themselves. Prosperity such as we had not expected is being forced upon us, but we are in some danger of not hearing opportunity's knock on our door.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

His Advice Belated, but Good.

It is not in the columns of the Staats-Zeitung that one would look first—or many even last—for proclamation to the effect that the right and best thing for German-Americans to do is to exert all their powers of persuasion in an effort to enlighten the Germans in Germany as to the purposes and policies of the American Government, and to convince them that peace cannot come until the German Government has been turned into a real democracy. Yet that is the substance of a long letter printed by the Staats-Zeitung, with an editorial guarantee that the writer of it, J. MATTERN, Librarian of Johns Hopkins University, "speaks with the voice of experience and responsibility."

Accepting that assurance, it is pleasing to learn from Mr. MATTERN that "the President's demand for a German Government responsible to the people coincides with the long-nourished wishes of the overwhelming number of the German masses." And Mr. MATTERN, evidently anticipating inquiries as to why we have not heard much from these eager thousands since the war began, says that they have no tendency toward revolution and prefer to move slowly toward the democratic goal. As yet, therefore, they have only asked through their legislative representatives for certain electoral reforms, and, not getting more than vague promises to attend to that matter later, they are content to wait, though keeping up, meanwhile, the quiet pressure of their demands for reform.

Mr. MATTERN writes not very enthusiastically about the proposal of another Staats-Zeitung correspondent to hold in some neutral city a conference between progressive Germans and German-Americans competent to advise them wisely, but he omits to say that this might be viewed as that "treating with the enemy" by private persons which American laws, like those of most other countries, so severely condemn. He expresses more confidence in the effects to be produced if German-Americans, in writing to relatives and friends in the homeland, would correctly inform them concerning the things of which they are now so lamentably ignorant.

In short, Mr. MATTERN, with the Staats-Zeitung's approval, is advising that paper's readers to do just about what THE TIMES and many other really American papers, ever since the beginning of the war, have besought the German-Americans to do!

Reasons for Saving Our Coal.

There is, perhaps, in the way Commissioner GARFIELD presents to American householders his plea for coal-saving this Winter, a hint that he fears their patriotic desire to help their Government and its allies will not be quite enough to make them change their long established habits a little and patiently to endure an indoor temperature considered by most of them a little lower than comfort demands. If this were not so, it would not have been necessary for him to add to a statement of the need to save coal in the general interest the more personal argument that our wont has been to overheat our houses and that we would be healthier, and in the end happier, if we kept the mercury in our thermometers standing nearer 60 than 70 degrees.

That statement has often been made in the past by not a few doctors, and it has been preached by innumerable visitors from countries where the majority of the inhabitants like, or pretend to like, chilly rooms and an occasional small grate fire and shawls therewith better than a good husky furnace working day and night in the cellar and no procession of shivers running down anybody's back. Americans have been accustomed to admit, for publication, the justice of these scoldings, but deep in their hearts they have always believed that health and discomfort are incompatibles, and that the real reason why so many of our British and other foreign cousins let their houses remain next to unheated in Winter is because they don't want to spend for fuel enough money to keep them warm.

With milder climates than ours, the Europeans never do freeze quite to death, as we very well might if our heating apparatus were as primitive as theirs, but the redness of their noses and the prevalence among them of assorted coryzas tell the story almost as plainly as does the obvious, though never confessed, contentment with which they warm up, now and then, in a house heated to suit the extravagant and reprehended American taste.

There are many and excellent reasons why we should all make earnest efforts to save coal as much as we can this Winter. Most of us will do it, too, but there isn't a bit of need for us to view it otherwise than as a war measure, or to admit that our "folkway" as to heating our houses is not a legitimate product of our climate, our prosperity, and our national disinclination to pinch pennies as hard as some other people do.

Of Us as Well as Among Us.

It is a notable fact and one significant of much, as the saying is, that the Swedes resident in New York and many other American towns, as well as those in Argentina, waited only long enough to find out what certain representatives of the Swedish Government had done for the furthering of plots by German diplomats, and then promptly and vigorously put themselves on public record as denouncing both the German plotters and their Swedish tools. These Swedes, in other words, have taken care to make evident and indubitable that when they swore allegiance to a Government other than the one under whose flag they were born they meant what they said to the full significance of the words used, and that their Americanism, though new, is real, unqualified, and capable of standing the test of disagreement with official action in the old home.

In seeking an explanation why our citizens of Swedish birth or descent have not hesitated to condemn their former Government, while so many of German origin were long in seeing that things done by Germans in the old home were not necessarily right and might be utterly wrong and base, the first that comes to mind, and the one that seems adequate, is that the majority of our Swedes, if they had remained in Sweden, would now be of the anti-German party, not of the pro-German group, into which divisions their former countrymen have been divided ever since the war began—and long before it, for that matter.

No such division has ever existed in Germany and the German-Americans could hardly be expected to show the effects of a non-existent cause. Whether or not this theory be true, the resolutions adopted by the New York Swedes were good reading here, however they may have sounded in Stockholm's official circles and in those of Berlin.

French and German for Soldiers.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The article in your paper and in other publications of yesterday that the Hoboken schools had dropped the instruction of the German language impressed the writer forcibly and reminded him of a statement made by one who had lived through the Franco-Prussian war of 1870. This was that the Germans were very materially helped in their campaign by the fact that every officer without exception was thoroughly acquainted with the French language and knew more of the French geography than the French did themselves.

The writer has subscribed liberally to the Young Men's Christian Association fund for the decent entertainment of our soldiers while in camp. We should think that, instead of giving them only such entertainments as moving pictures, &c., some of this fund should be used for instruction in both French and German, as possibly circumstances might arise where the German language would be more beneficial to some of the men than French. For instance, should they be taken prisoner by the Germans, or in gathering information from German prisoners.

It is a great mistake that patriotism on one side and hatred of the enemy on the other should lead our citizens to become short-sighted. AN AMERICAN.

New York, Sept. 8, 1917.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

My object in writing to you is to inform you of the awful waste among the farmers up the State. Why, there are at the present time thousands of barrels of apples, pears, peaches, grapes, &c., rotting in the orchards and on the roads all through Dutchess and Sullivan Counties. You ask the farmer why, and he tells you the middlemen in the big cities refuse to pay the price. The farmers can get only about $1.50 for a barrel of good apples, and we all know that in New York City they bring from $6 to $10 a barrel. It is the same with all other fruits and vegetables.

EVERETT B. JENKINS,

FROM BELGIAN TRENCHES.

A Soldier Who Wants to Fight for His Adopted Country.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Some kind-hearted soul, whose name I have never known, has had the good idea of having THE NEW YORK TIMES sent out to me in the trenches.

Before I continue, may I tell you who I am? A Belgian by birth, but an American citizen, first of all, by law and by heart. So is my father and my whole family, which still resides in Chicago. Convinced that Germany had terribly maltreated Belgium and that German soldiers had committed barbarous cruelties, I felt that one life in our family would not be risking too much in the fight for civilization, humanity, and democracy. At the same time, I would help defend the little property which my father still owns in Belgium. So, in December, 1914, I left my family and signed up as a volunteer in the Belgian Army. I have since then been serving in the infantry here on the Yser before Dixmude and Nieuport. It is thirty-two months that I am here, and I know what it is to hug the parapet. I have seen all sorts of fighting in that time, but more than ever do I want to stick to it until the Germans are beaten.

Will you allow me to tell you that I am surprised when I read in your paper how few men volunteer in the United States Army and how many claim exemption from the draft law? Then these aggressive youths I have known in my adopted country are afraid of war!

I repeat that I have never regretted having taken up service against Germany, although it seems an awfully long time since I saw my folks and dear old Windy Chi.

But once I have wished I wasn't a soldier here, and that was when Uncle Sam declared war on Germany. I would like to have been home then to be able to wear the United States uniform. There isn't a thing that I have cherished and cared for so much as my certificate of naturalization in the United States, and I must say that I have done all in my power to be transferred to the American Army. I went to Captain Boyd, the Military Attaché of the embassy at Paris. He could not do anything for me. In the Belgian Army I have made several efforts. First of all, I have refused a commission in the Belgian Army because this would force me to swear allegiance and obedience to the same King whom I renounced when I became an American citizen. I then made an official request to get my resignation in the Belgian Army in order to answer to the United States draft law in Chicago. This has had no results.

Now I don't know if I dare hope any more. I would gladly give up my rank and do all I can to join the United States forces, and would be proud to be with the first contingent that takes over a real sector at the front.

You do not know how much satisfaction I get out of this newspaper. One of the things we need the most to keep our minds at rest is reading matter: it is our only way of keeping in touch with the civilized world, and the person who paid for the subscription has found a good way of doing a favor to a soldier. As I do not know this lady or gentleman, I cannot personally express my thanks to him or her. Could you not do it for me?

Roy Norton, the Author, Not in America.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Behind the recent report of the death of Roy Norton, (which you were good enough to deny,) there has come to light a story which, if not discredited, is likely to considerably affect the reputation of Mr. Norton.

An American magazine recently forwarded to Mr. Norton in England a letter addressed in their care. This letter proved to be from an official in El Paso, Texas, who was entirely unknown to Mr. Norton, and of whom he had never heard. The letter clearly showed, however, that some person was not only impersonating Roy Norton in this country, and professing to be the author of Norton's books and stories, but he was also obtaining money by means of this impersonation. The official in El Paso was clearly one of his victims. Whether this impersonator was the person recently killed in Los Angeles or not it is impossible to say, but he seems to have covered the country from El Paso to Los Angeles. Should the impersonator still be alive, this letter may serve to warn various people who have been imposed upon that any one in this country passing under the name of Roy Norton, the author, ought to be given into the hands of the authorities.

Roy Norton himself has not visited America for four years. A. W. BARMBY,

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In Thursday's TIMES some one took exception to the name King of Prussia for a United States Post Office. Why not make a wholesale change? In Pennsylvania, for example, we find German Hill, Kaiserville, Germany, Germania, Germansville, Berlin, Berlinsville, and Bismarck.

There are twenty-nine American States with villages, cities, and towns called Berlin. "On to Berlin" might mean on to Otoe County, Nebraska. We want only one Berlin, and in the course of time we might unanimously agree to change its name.

BOYS.

You see them, hear them, feel them everywhere,
On streets and trains, along the avenues,
Dining alone—that dreamy blonde lad there!—

They look so strong, so confident, so gay,
Unconscious still of all Life's bitter-sweet:
Yet sometimes they seem grave, at dance or play,
As though they also heard those stealing feet—
The feet of Death, untiring, ghostly, grim—
That follow after those who challenge him!

The World's need calls! They answer, hosts of boys,
Brave-lipped, high-hearted, yet within their eyes
You see their secret love of Life, its joys,
Compelling, tempting, curiously sweet
To them seems even grief or grim defeat!

Yet those who die while beauty burns and glows,
Dear God! There is a dazzling radiance
About these boys who soon may die—in France!

GOVERNMENT BY MENDACITY

To the Editor of The New York Times:

An editorial in today's TIMES, while instructively annotating the latest fiction of the present German Chancellor, does somewhat less than justice to his predecessor's exercises in the same art. The statements of "the gentleman Bethmann Hollweg," it is intimated, could—unlike those of Dr. Michaelis—be taken at their face value, without the invariable addition of the proviso, "assuming that the Imperial Chancellor was not lying." Unhappily, the records hardly bear out this estimate of the comparative credibility of the two statesmen. Dr. Michaelis is not "a new kind of Chancellor," but merely a somewhat inferior specimen of the old kind. And the fact is worth insisting upon for two reasons—first, because it reminds us that, though personalities may change, the methods of Prussian statecraft remain the same; second, because it should never be forgotten that the German people was led into war in July, 1914, by mendacity of the most copious and elaborate sort—just as it was led into war in 1870, by a greater Chancellor, by means of a forgery.

In the thoroughness of its preparation for war the Berlin Government, as every schoolboy knows, far surpasses all other Governments, and it most surpasses them in its attention to the psychological factor. It sees to it that the public is made to believe what it is expedient, from the governmental point of view, that it should believe. Thus—this is not rhetoric, but a measured statement of easily verified historical fact—the first duty and the most urgent concern of an Imperial Chancellor, especially in time of war, is to tell suitable lies to the German public, sometimes in his own person, but chiefly through the Government-controlled press. This duty has never been more assiduously, and has seldom been more unskillfully, performed than by Herr von Bethmann Hollweg at the outbreak of the present war.

The thing of which it was most needful to persuade the mass of the German people was that the war was "defensive," that, in the words of the Emperor's proclamation to his subjects, it "was forced upon" Germany "by a wholly unjustified attack." Unless this belief were firmly implanted in the public mind, the desired unanimity and ardor in support of the war program could not safely be reckoned upon. Accordingly, we see the then Chancellor busily at work establishing the legend which his successor is still painfully struggling to maintain in currency. On Aug. 4, 1914, the Chancellor put before the Reichstag and the German people the official version of the antecedents and grounds of the war, in two forms—his own speech and the White Book, prepared on Aug. 2. These both, while marked by a tone of seeming candor and openness, suppressed the two facts which reduce to absurdity the pretense of a defensive war; and they both, but especially the Chancellor's speech, contained specific statements on the main matters concerned which were circumstantially false.

The suppressed facts were these: (a) the Czar's offer to submit the outstanding points of the Austro-Serbian controversy to The Hague Tribunal, and (b) Russia's consent, at Germany's demand, to arrest her mobilization upon the sole conditions that the Austrian forces march no further into Serbia, and that meanwhile the powers be permitted to examine how Serbia could "fully satisfy" Austria without injury to the smaller State's independence and sovereignty. This Russian proposal of the 31st of July took the wind out of the sails of the German casus belli; for, since Russia had agreed to demobilize if only these reasonable and amazingly conciliatory conditions were granted, it became clear that the cause of war was not the "menace to Germany's security" inherent in the Russian mobilization, but simply Germany's refusal to accede to these conditions—or even to give Austria time to accede to them. In concealing these facts from the German public the Chancellor was falsifying the very essence of the situation.

His more positive flights of mendacity related chiefly to the "acts of hostility" against Germany alleged to have been committed by French military forces on Aug. 1 and 2. These fictions, presented unequivocally, but a little sketchily, in the Chancellor's speech, were duly embroidered in the dispatches of the Wolff Agency, which, it was announced on Aug. 2, had full official sanction. The märchen-loving German public was regaled for some days with stories of French aviators dropping bombs in the vicinity of Nürnberg, Karlsruhe, and Coblenz; the caravan of "80 French officers, wearing Prussian uniforms, in twelve automobiles," who, after dashing across the breadth of Belgium and Holland, attempted unsuccessfully—awed, apparently, by a Prussian customs official—to pass the Dutch-German frontier; the hundred millions of French gold carried across Germany in automobiles toward Russia on Aug. 2, and all the other delectable inventions upon which the pretense of a "defensive war" against France was based. Those who wish to see the evidence, complete and convincing, of the falsity of these clumsy fabrications must read it in the recent French semi-official publication, "Le Mensonge du 3 Aout" (Paris, Payot, 1917,) which it is to be hoped will speedily be translated into English—and, above all, German!

Under the Prussian régime the German people, especially at the great crises of their national destiny, are subject to a highly organized system of Government by mendacity. If they ever discover the fact, there may be some hope, at last, of a German revolution.

"Lithuanian Poles."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your issue of Sept. 12 there appeared a short notice from Amsterdam to the effect that certain "Lithuanian Poles," by their memorandum to the Polish Club at Cracow, have presented their demands for "the independence of Lithuania and its union with Poland." This notice, though very short, one cannot let pass.

Every even elementary student of history knows very well that in the partition of Poland in 1795 Lithuania proper was excluded from Poland and given to Russia as an integral part of Russian conquests, under the name of Duchy of Lithuania, in which position and under separate laws it existed up to the last decade. So there is no place for any dreams of any "Lithuanian Poles" to revive old legends about any kind of union of Lithuania with Poland.

There is no such thing as the "Lithuanian Poles." The few Polish magnates who have appropriated land in Lithuania, by means which I don't care to discuss in my letter, cannot be held as citizens of Lithuania. Besides, there has been a very good understanding between Poles and Lithuanians for many years on that point. Both those unfortunate people have been working together for many years to emancipate themselves from Russian and Teutonic despotism and for the establishment of Lithuanian and Polish republics, each one separate and with good-will toward each other.

WARTIME ACTIVITY RULES AT COLUMBIA

250 TEACHERS ENLISTED

In Addition University Will Continue Its Special Courses for Training of Naval Reserve Officers

Columbia University will devote a considerable portion of its energies during the coming academic year to the preparation of students for national service. This will be in addition to the established courses in military and naval instruction. In the department of chemistry and physics much attention will be given to the analysis of explosives, gases and deadly chemicals, with a view to finding some means of counteracting their effect. In the department of medicine the students will be given extensive instruction in the treatment of wounds and trench diseases. Engineering students will be encouraged to give much study to the construction of trenches, bridges, and roads for military purposes.

The University, with the opening of the academic year on Sept. 26, will conduct courses in military and naval instruction based as far as possible on the Plattsburg system. Lectures and drills will be supplemented with a certain amount of field practice.

According to Secretary of the University Fackenthal, the freshmen class this year promises to be about normal, the men of this group being almost entirely below the draft age. A considerable number of men, who have enlisted in various branches of the naval reserve, such as the mosquito fleet and coast defense, will be allowed to return to college to finish up their academic work. Inasmuch as the Government has no immediate need of their services. They will return, however, subject to immediate call. In the graduate departments the depletion of the student body through enlistments has been most extensive in the law and medical schools. The formation of a complete ambulance section and a war hospital by Columbia men has drawn many students and instructors of the medical school into service. The war hospital has already been taken over by the United States Army. Columbia has also placed at the disposal of the Government a motor transport service, an Ordnance and Quartermaster Corps of sixty students and an Interpreters' Corps. There were about forty students in this course when it started several months ago, and all, with the exception of two or three, have since received commissions. The course will be repeated this Fall.

It is estimated that 250 members of the teaching and professorial staff of the university are enlisted in some branch of national service. The dean, F. B. Keppie, has received a year's leave of absence to take a position with Secretary of War Baker. Professor A. L. Walker has become the consulting metallurgist at large for the Ordnance Department. Professor H. W. Webb of the department of physics has received a commission of Captain in the Signal Corps, and Professor C. E. Lucke of the department of mechanical engineering is doing defense work as an engineering instructor. Professor H. E. Crampton of zoology is Secretary of the Committee of Educational Engineering of the Committee of National Defense, and Professor F. D. Jackson of the department of chemistry is conducting extensive investigations for the Government into problems bearing upon sanitation in concentration camps. Dr. E. S. Whiting and Dr. Joseph Sears are also active in the organization of concentration and detention camps. Dr. Hans Zinsser of the department of bacteriology has been commissioned Major in the Reserve Corps and is now attached to the Surgeon General's office in Washington. Dr. W. T. Longcope, now a Major in the Medical Reserve Corps, is also attached to the Surgeon General's office. Professor W. M. Campbell is performing services as a Government consultant in the Brooklyn Navy Yard. Professor L. D. G. Moss of the department of mechanical engineering is teaching in the Naval Reserve.

Several professors are carrying on investigations abroad. Professor E. T. Devine is in France assisting in the work of rehabilitation and re-education in the devastated provinces. Professor H. C. Sherman is in Russia studying food conditions. George L. Meylan, director of the Columbia gymnasium, is going abroad shortly to organize the recreational and athletic welfare work for the army in France. Two trustees of the university, William Barclay Parsons and Arthur S. Dwight, are now in France.

Other members of the teaching staff engaged in national service are Professor James T. Shotwell of the department of history, now Chairman of the National Board for Historical Service; Professor David Snedden of Teachers College, who is working on the adaptation of industrial schools for war training, and Professors E. L. Thorndike and R. S. Woodworth of the department of psychology, who are standardizing tests for determining the fitness of soldiers for the more special and exactive branches of service, and Professor W. A. Boring of the School of Architecture, who was influential in bringing to the attention of the Government the necessity of systematic study in the use of camouflage. The women members of the staff are also doing their "bit" in the present crisis. Prominent among them is Professor Mary Nutting, now Chairman of the Nursing Committee of the General National Medical Board of the Council for National Defense.

A noticeable effect of the war upon the faculty was the tendency of teachers to abandon temporarily their own fields of instruction for work in departments where they could be of more service to the cause of national defense. Thus Dr. Victor Freeling, instructor in English, is now teaching navigation to the naval reserve. Similar work is being done by Dr. R. E. Rockwood, who formerly was an instructor in Romance languages. During the coming year Columbia will continue to conduct special courses of instruction for the training of naval reserve officers. More than 200 of these officers are now receiving instruction in engineering, navigation and signal work. The School of Pharmacy, with its entire teaching staff, has practically been turned over to the training of men for work in the naval hospitals.

JEWISH NEW YEAR WIDELY CELEBRATED

RABBIS TALK ON LOYALTY

Dr. Stephen S. Wise and Dr. Maurice H. Harris Talk on the War and Hope for Lasting Peace.

The beginning of the year 5678 in the Hebrew calendar was marked by services yesterday evening in temples and synogogues all over New York, Young Men's and Young Women's Hebrew Association auditoriums, and in all the army camps and cantonments and naval stations in the neighborhood of the city. The first day of the month Tishri, beginning at sunset yesterday, is celebrated by all Jews, both orthodox and reformed. The orthodox branch also extends the celebration of the New Year, Rosh ha-Shanah, into the second day, and holds as a period of unusually solemn devotion the ten Days of Repentance intervening between the New Year's festival and Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement, the most solemn festival of the Jewish year, which begins at sunset on Sept. 25.

There will be services this morning in addition to those last night. Dr. Joseph Silverman, at Temple Emanu-El, and Dr. Samuel Schulman, at Temple Beth-El, will preach today on religious topics and problems of the war.

At Carnegie Hall the Rev. Dr. Stephen S. Wise of the Free Synagogue preached last night on "Making a Fresh Start," and will preach this morning on "The Eternal Warfare." In yesterday evening's sermon he said:

"As a people we of the house of Israel have made a fresh start outward as well as inward. Inwardly we have decreed that we are to be more than ever the makers of our own future. A fresh start for multitudes in Israel long wronged and oppressed has come about through the liberation of the Russian people. The self-emancipation of Russia's millions spells the end of a long-suffered bondage. The nations understand that no world reorganization can fail to take account of the necessity of ending every injustice and discrimination and prescription against Israel, and of making the ancient home of the Jewish people the seat of a self-renewed, self-determining Jewish life.

"As Americans we have made a fresh start, for America has suffered a new birth in these wondrous days. Along the unwelcome, in truth abhorred, pathway of war we are marching, bent on the destruction of an order that has ruthlessly sought to destroy the bases of life and faith among the nations.

"Not to have taken our place as Americans by the side of England, France, Italy, Russia, Belgium, and Serbia, battling for the liberty of the world against a power bereft for a time of reasonableness and humanity, would have meant the choice of the baser, ignobler part, would have left us so rich that all the world would have become our debtor, so poor that no people would have been mean enough not to hold us in contempt.

"In making a fresh start for the world America has chosen to have a part, a part that is great today, by reason of the nobly wise leadership of the President and his commitment of the nation with our unequivocal approval to the position that we have entered into the war to secure nothing for ourselves and the all of liberty for men and peoples, even to the least.

"Happily, I need not plead with my fellow-Jews to give their whole-hearted loyalty to the cause in the defense of which we as a nation are engaged. The great mass of American Jews are deeply, even passionately, loyal to America and to the American ideal. The handful of Jews who, like some other scattered elements of the American population, have been so misled that they do not seem to understand that we are warring not for the sake of war, but to end the reign of ruthless might and needless strife among men—these have ceased to be worthy of the name of Jew and American.

"We of the house of Israel are understandingly loyal because we are Jews, because Jews always and above all when supreme moral interests are at stake, and this is a war of the moralities. The moral and spiritual pioneers of history, we should be unworthy of the honor of our racial heritage as Jews and unworthy to be sharers in the privilege and the dignity of American citizenship if we were not, as in truth we are, as one in pledging our lives and our possessions for the redemption of the world from that Prussian theory of life and Government that is morally false and therefore eternally condemned.

"The American arms in this war can make deeper appeal to no people than to the Jewish people, the highest ideals of whose history the world, under the leadership of America, has set forth to realize.

The Rev. Dr. Maurice H. Harris, at Temple Israel, 120th Street and Lenox Avenue, spoke from the text: "While the earth remaineth, seedtime and harvest, and cold and heat, and Summer and Winter, and day and night shall not cease." Taking up this distinctive character of the years, which gives each an individuality of its own, he declared that the outstanding fact of the past year was the war.

"We are not concerned," he said, "with any change in the map of the Old World, with possible changes in the character of its peoples. Our interest is not in the geographical but in the biological.

"Our most fervent prayer is for peace; not a mere patched-up truce to end the conflict for the time being, but a lasting peace born of truer and fairer relations between nations and between peoples, a peace built on the principle of live and let live, with a final realization of fuller freedom to all, with a deepening sense of our human responsibility and a fuller fraternity uniting all nationalities, all races, and all men. We voice a prayer that peace shall not dawn in some distant year, but that its consummation may be reached in the year opening tonight.

"This house is the sanctuary, but we should abuse its purpose if we think that within its sacred walls we could shut our eyes to the suffering beyond or enjoy a selfish security.

"'The old cry, 'To thy tents, O Israel,' the summons to war, has been sounded throughout America. We are American Jews and the old Talmudic principles still apply. 'The law of the land is our law.' Loyalty to country is a principle of our religion; the better the Jew the better the American. We are in this struggle, equally sharing its burdens and equally convinced of the righteousness of its cause and the worthiness of its ultimate aim.

"In reading the daily record of carnage some have sunk into a condition of despair. We cannot judge it truly; we do not see it in the perspective of time. But let us remember that in so many of the tragedies that have darkened the human record in years gone by man has been saved from himself. Nineteen hundred years ago our own people lost their nation and were dispersed throughout the world, yet they survived that. Since that time the history of the Jew has been one of tyranous legislation, spoliation and expulsion; yet he survived that and lives as a power for possible good in the world today.

"Spain survived the Inquisition, France the Reign of Terror, Italy its dismemberment, and Europe and Asia the devastating plague of the fourteenth century that claimed far more victims than the present war. Man is endowed with powers of endless recuperation. Very dark is the present moment, but do not forget the darkest hour precedes the dawn."

The Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society has made arrangements for the observance of the Jewish New Year by the Hebrew immigrants on Ellis Island. Services will be held there today and tomorrow. Similar services will be held at the home of the society, 229-231 East Broadway.

AUTOISTS VISIT GOLF CLUBS.

BRETTON WOODS, N. H., Sept. 16.—Many who motored to Bretton Woods to spend the week-end will remain over Monday to play golf here. Several parties of New York men are motoring through New England and playing matches over the various golf courses. Thus far no one has equalled James Mackrell's record of one stroke for the Presidential hole.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Thorn Kissel of New York are at the Mount Washington Hotel for the late season where T. C. Hollander expects to come from his estate at Wenham to pass several weeks.

David J. Lewis and party of Boston have arrived at the Mount Washington for their customary visit. Also there are Mr. and Mrs. William Dana Orcutt, who came from the Mount Pleasant to end the season here.

J. Hendon Smith and party of St. Louis are among late arrivals at the Mount Washington Hotel.

Mrs. B. Sterling Bottome of New York are at the ladies' putting and approaching contest and the driving contest was won by Roland Van Ingen Catham of New York.

Miss Elise Rice has come from Southampton, where she has been with her mother, Mrs. William Lowe Rice, to join Miss Mildred Rice at the Balsams. Mrs. Robert Newberry of Chicago is chaperoning them.

Ask Mrs. Humiston to Find Girls.

The police yesterday increased their efforts to find three schools girls who disappeared from their home at 232 West 122d Street on Friday, and the parents of the children sent for Mrs. Grace Humiston to aid them in the search. After Mrs. Humiston had spent several hours interviewing the parents she sent two of her representatives to work on the case. Elizabeth Sempsey, 15 years old, and her sister Elleen, aged 10, went home for luncheon from Public School 157 at 125th Street and St. Nicholas Avenue on Friday, and when they left for school they took with them Helen Kessler, 11 years old, who lived in the same house. The parents of the children did not see them after that, and it was reported by the school teachers that the children did not return for the afternoon session.

Memorial to Amos J. Cummings.

A memorial tablet to Congressman Amos J. Cummings, placed by Newark Branch 38, National Association of Letter Carriers, will be dedicated at 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon at the Cemetery in Irvington, N. J. Congressman Cummings died in 1902 but in all these years the carriers have not forgotten that his work got them the eight-hour day and other benefits. Eugene C. Van Ness of South Norwalk will accept the tablet for the family and Willis Holly, Secretary of the Sun Alumni and lifelong friend, will speak on the career of Mr. Cummings.

Ocean Travelers.

Russell Armstrong, Mrs. H. D. Andrews, W. H. Amanda, Dr. and Mrs. G. Alcorn, Mrs. Isabel Anderson, Sidney B. Ashmore, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Bluemantle, Miss C. Barthe, Mrs. E. Brown, Miss Evelyn Brown, Miss C. Biddle, W. R. Bostwick, Alexander T. Burr, Joseph B. Bangs, Dr. and Mrs. Bingham, Mrs. J. Cook, Mrs. A. M. Crombie, Miss Dorothy H. Cox, Walter B. Pond, W. D. Platt, G. L. Perkins, Baron Michel Peter, F. A. Rugg, W. S. Slack, Miss B. Scott, E. Starr, and Miss Dorothy Turnbull.

Among the passengers who arrived recently from a port in England were:

W. R. O. Belt, John H. Duval, N. B. Dalal, Lieutenant Colonel C. Docter, U. S. A.; Dr. and Mrs. Sherwood Eddy, M. Ellinger, Captain George W. Larsky, Mrs. Prescott Morris, Miss H. H. Morris, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph C. Norton, Captain C. R. Davis, C. J. Sabiston, Samuel Shoemaker, K. H. Yail, Kirby Page, Mrs. E. E. Wandle, and Leonard L. Wandle.

JAPANESE VISIT TOMB OF PERRY

VISIT NEWPORT CEMETERY

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 16.—The Japanese mission to the United States came here today to do homage at the grave of Commodore Matthew Galbraith Perry, who opened the door of the Island Empire to the influences of Western civilization sixty years ago.

The mission, headed by Viscount Ishii, entered the cemetery through a lane of apprentice seamen and Naval Reserves standing at present arms, while a band from the training station played the Japanese national hymn. A great crowd of soldiers, sailors, and civilians bared their heads in silence as Viscount Ishii stepped forward and placed on the tomb of the Commodore a large wreath made up in the colors of Japan, with white lilies and red gladiola.

Retiring a few paces, the Viscount bowed profoundly before the tomb and resumed his place in the semicircle formed by other members of the mission and naval officers. One by one each member of the mission stepped forward silently and bowed low before the grave. As the last one paid his tribute, Bishop James De Wolf Perry of the Episcopal Diocese of Rhode Island offered a brief prayer. Then the entire assembly stood at attention while the band once more played the Japanese national hymn and "The Star-Spangled Banner."

The ceremony was simple and impressive. The only address was by Bishop Perry. It was given when the mission had filed into Perry Circle, where the Commodore lies buried.

"We have cherished, among other things," he said, "the close ties that have held us together, bonds of friendship that have often been put to the test, but which are stronger now because they have been put to the test. You have confirmed in the hearts of every true American the belief that the principles which you and America hold in common will result in an alliance that will last for years to come. In the alliance against the common foe there will be a stronger bond, and it gives promise of a lasting and glorious peace."

The bishop closed with a tribute to the Japanese Emperor and to the traditional hospitality and courtesy of the Japanese nation. As he finished, Viscount Ishii stepped forward and shook his hand warmly, with a few words of appreciation.

The mission arrived from Philadelphia this morning and was welcomed to the State by J. Henry Reuter, Executive Secretary to Governor R. Livingston Beeckman; by Mayor Clark Burdick, in behalf of the city, and by the Commandant of the Second Naval District, Captain S. F. Bryan, and by various other naval and military commanders.

During their stay here the party will be the guests of members of the Summer colony, including Captain Perry Belmont, a descendant of Commodore Perry. Their only formal reception today was at the rooms of the Newport Historical Society, which they visited to view the Sword of Commodore Perry. There they had an opportunity to meet many army and navy officers, city officials and others. On their way to the rooms of the Historical Society they visited Touro Synagogue, the oldest place of Jewish worship in this country.

Engagements.

The engagement is announced of Miss Beatrice Crowell, daughter of Mrs. L. Howes Crowell of Bloomfield, N. J., to Howard Myers Wells, a son of Dr. Franklin Wells and Mrs. Wells, also of Bloomfield. Mr. Wells was graduated from Princeton and later from the Union Theological Seminary and will be ordained this evening in the First Presbyterian Church of Bloomfield, after which he is to prepare to go to Russia to engage there in Y. M. C. A. activities in the war camps.

Mayor Henry S. Babbage and Mrs. Babbage of Glen Ridge, N. J., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Dorothy Babbage, to Robert P. Swan of Pittsburgh, Penn. Mr. Swan was graduated from the University of Pennsylvania and is a member of the United States Naval Reserve stationed at Cape May.

Mr. and Mrs. John Guyton Boston of South Orange, N. J., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Barbara Alida Boston, to Leroy Maxwell Dyckman, son of Mrs. Frank H. Dyckman. Mr. Dyckman was graduated from Princeton in the Class of 1912 and has enlisted in the New York Naval Reserve.

Mr. and Mrs. William S. Van Clief of Manor Road, Staten Island, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Claire Van Clief, to Captain Theodore Walser Janeway, U. S. R.

Mr. and Mrs. James O'Connell of 217 Berkeley Place, Brooklyn, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mae O'Connell, to Richard Davis Scanlan of the Naval Reserve.

Mr. and Mrs. F. N. Nauman of 920 Hancock Street, Brooklyn, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Margaret Louise Deltch, to Otto M. Heinzman, Vice President of the Mansfield Piano Company of this city.

The Rev. Dr. G. H. Ferris.

The Rev. Dr. George Hooper Ferris, formerly pastor of the First Baptist Church at Tarrytown, N. Y., where John D. Rockefeller was a worshipper, and recently pastor of the First Baptist Church of Philadelphia, died yesterday at a sanitarium near Milwaukee, Wis., in fifty-first year. Dr. Ferris was a native of Lamartine, Wis. He was the author of several religious works, notably "The Fountain of the New Testament," "The Elements of Spirituality," and "The Permanent Value of the Bible."

ROYAL C. PEABODY DIES.

LAKE GEORGE, N. Y., Sept. 16.—Royal Canfield Peabody of Brooklyn, N. Y., President of the Combustion Engineering Company, died of angina pectoris at his Summer home on Lake George on Saturday evening. He was born in Columbus, Ga., in 1854, a son of the late George H. and Elvira Canfield Peabody, and brother of George Foster Peabody and Charles Jones Peabody. He leaves a daughter, Georgia Sniffen, and a son, Charles Samuel Peabody. Funeral services will take place at his home on Lake George on Tuesday at 2 o'clock, and at the Greenwood Cemetery Chapel on Wednesday at 10 o'clock.

Mr. Peabody went to Brooklyn in 1865 with his parents and brother. He began a business life when only 13 years of age, and, excepting for a period of three years in the United States Navy, kept up his activities on large and varied lines until his death. He was the organizer and first Secretary of the Brooklyn Illuminating Company, and Vice President at the time of its absorption by the Kings County Electric Lighting Company.

He had both enthusiasm and pertinacity, growing to a strong optimism. His broad public spirit led him into many social relations of service, and he was known in his club life as ever responding to the call to better the community. This was notably so at Lake George, where he was one of the most progressive and popular of the men living here. He was foremost in every local enterprise, and responded generously to every call for assistance in local affairs.

William F. Stone.

BALTIMORE, Md., Sept. 16.—William F. Stone, Sergeant at Arms of the Republican National Committee and for many years a leader of his party in Maryland, died today following a surgical operation. He was in his sixty-second year and is survived by his wife, one son, William F. Stone, Jr., and two daughters, Mrs. Philip W. Trueheart and Miss Ruth Stone. President McKinley appointed Mr. Stone Collector of the Port in 1898, and he held that place for nearly seventeen years. He was Vice President of the Western National Bank.

Calhoun Perry.

Mr. and Mrs. Orrin Francis Perry of 96 Riverside Drive announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Gladys Perry, to Howell Vincent Calhoun of this city on Saturday afternoon last at their home. The Rev. Father O'Connor of Holy Trinity Church performed the ceremony in the presence of relatives and a few friends. This is the fourth wedding in the family, one sister of the bride having been married nine weeks ago and two of her sisters and one brother within nine days, and all of the weddings save the last were war weddings. Mr. Calhoun, who is connected with the Bankers' Trust Company, and his bride are spending their honeymoon in the Adirondacks.

Charles Carty Salmon.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—The death of the Hon. Charles Carty Salmon, Speaker of the Australian House of Representatives in 1900-10, is announced in a Reuter dispatch from Melbourne.

Obituary Notes.

EDWIN M. HINCHMAN, 48 years old, employed by the Dyer Stationery Company of Manhattan, and for many years connected with several church societies in the uplift of wayward boys, died on Friday at his home, 1,103 Park Place, Brooklyn.

J. N. McLEOD, a retired business man and formerly a resident of Brooklyn, died on Friday at Lake Grove. He was born in Rochester, N. Y., on Sept. 8, 1854.

CHARLES WINKLER died on Friday at his home, 3 McKinley Avenue, Glendale, L. I., in his fifty-seventh year. He was employed for many years by the Palmer & Embrey Company of Brooklyn.

Miss ELIZA J. HODGSON, for more than thirty years employed by R. H. Macy & Co., died on Saturday at her home, 345 Pacific Street, Brooklyn.

Dr. JAMES C. BYRNES, a retired surgeon of the United States Navy, died on Saturday at the home of his brother-in-law, Dr. R. B. Magruder, 914 Nineteenth Street, Flatbush, aged 66 years. In 1907 he was appointed fleet surgeon of the Pacific Fleet, and served in that capacity until 1908, when he was appointed commander of the Naval Hospital at Cavite, P. I. He was medical director of the Naval Hospital in Brooklyn, and served there until he retired in 1913. He leaves a widow, two daughters, and a son, Lieutenant C. Byrnes, U. S. N.

Mrs. MARY BAIRD WILSON, widow of William T. Wilson, a merchant of New Brunswick, N. J., died there yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. R. M. Vandervort. She was 69 years old.

Mrs. LOUISA SUYDAM, wife of Lawrence J. Suydam, a lawyer of Pleasant Plains, N. J., died there yesterday after a long illness.

LAMBERTSON SHERWOOD, 68 years old, recently connected with the Paterson Press Company, died yesterday at his home in Bloomfield, N. J.

HENRY BAKER BROWN, President and founder of Valparaiso (Ind.) University, died there last night, aged 69. He was born in Knox County, Ohio. In 1873 he founded the Northern Indiana Normal School, which became the Valparaiso College, and later Valparaiso University.

LUCIEN DUTHIEL CABANNE, a St. Louis amateur athlete, died yesterday at his home there. His death was caused by "excessive athleticism." Cabanne was a member of one of the oldest families of St. Louis, and was 47 years old. Cabanne distinguished himself as a swimmer, cycle rider, polo player, and all-around athlete. With two other athletes in September, 1912, he whipped a band of musicians on board the liner Olympic, when they refused to turn over a charity fund they had collected.

Mrs. HENRIETTA DOREMUS, 66 years old, of 47 High Street, Passaic, N. J., died suddenly last night after she became ill in a Fourth Avenue surface car. A heart attack was the cause of her death.

D. C. RICE, a leading interior decorator, among whose achievements was the interior work in the Brooklyn Hall of Records, died yesterday at Los Angeles, Cal., where he had lived since 1911. He was 61 years old.

I. W. W. HECKLES PREACHER.

Dr. Day's Criticism of Order Brings Charges of Falsehood.

Cries of "It is a lie!" and "You can't prove it!" greeted Dr. Jonathan C. Day, pastor of the Presbyterian Labor Temple, at Second Avenue and Fourteenth Street, during his sermon last night on "The I. W. W. and the War." The pastor had just remarked that one of the very few men who helped lynch Little, the I. W. W. leader, in Butte, Mont., was a man who was one of his comrades of the night before. Dr. Day smiled at his hecklers and continued his sermon. He declared that as long as the I. W. W. or any other organization "sanely" sought to better their condition by working in an orderly way he was with them heart and hand, but as soon as they resorted to methods such as "might makes right" he parted company with them.

Dr. Day related his experiences with the I. W. W.'s in the States of Kansas, California, Oregon, and Colorado. He declared that one I. W. W. member insisted that no employer was honest and that all employes were honest. The speaker said that in San Jose, Cal., the I. W. W. caused the Italian canners of perishable fruit to strike by telling them that the fruit they were canning was for the use of the enemies of Italy in the war.

"The United States can no more be patient with the I. W. W. during this war than she can with Germany, or any other enemy," Dr. Day said, and added that if the I. W. W. or any other organization sought to interfere with the work of the Government in its war preparations they should be "corralled" until after the war. He would "smite them lovingly," he said. He declared that his own brothers had joined the colors and that they would not have Day blood in them were they not loyal to the core.

The pastor was frequently applauded, but there were many interruptions and protests to his criticism of the I. W. W.

The pastor declared that organized labor had a right at any time in peace or in war "orderly" to seek to better their conditions, wages or hours, but never when it blocked the wheels of the Government in its war for humanity.

SELWYN & CO. TO BUILD.

Plans for Three Theatres in 42d St. Near Times Square.

The plans of Selwyn & Co. for the current theatrical season, made public yesterday, include the construction of a trio of theatres in the Times Square section and the production of about a dozen plays, among which will be two musical comedies.

The new theatre sites, which are already being cleared, are at 215 to 223 and 229 to 231 West Forty-second Street. As already announced, a theatre to be called the Selwyn will be erected on the latter site, and the two houses to be built on the other property will be called the Margaret Illington and the Margaret Mayo. These are being built for the Selwyns by Sol Bloom.

All three of these theatres will run through to Forty-third Street. The largest will be the Selwyn, in which will be the executive offices of Selwyn & Co. The Margaret Illington Theatre will seat about 1,100 persons, and the Margaret Mayo a little over 800. These houses, with the Harris, will give the Selwyns four theatres in Forty-second Street.

Pending the completion of their new houses they will produce a number of plays in other theatres. Among these will be "The Pipes of Pan," a comedy by Edward Childs Carpenter, in which Norman Trevor and Janet Beecher will be seen, and Jesse Lynch Williams's comedy, "Why Marry?" which will have Arnold Daly, Nat Goodwin, and Edmund Breese in the cast.

The musical productions will be "My Baby," by Margaret Mayo and Jerome Kern, and "All Night Long," by Avery Hopwood and Irving Berlin. Mr. Hopwood will be represented later by two other plays—"Double Exposure," a farce, and "Don't Be Afraid," described as a "mystery miracle play."

"Madame Cecile," a comedy by Louis K. Anspacher, will go into rehearsal next week. Other prospective productions are "Too Much Efficiency," by Cyril Harcourt and E. J. Rath; "Tea for Three," a comedy by Roi Cooper Megrue; "Losing Eloise," a farce by Fred Jackson; "The Mighty Hunter," a farce by Owen Davis, and a comedy by Jane Cowl and Jane Murfin in which Miss Cowl will be seen.

Greetings.

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION IN AMERICA AND EUROPE

Despite some sharp rallies and declines there was not much life in last week's stock market. Trading continues to be governed by mixed motives. On the one hand there is the professional element, which tries to judge the immediate effect of current news developments on security values, and, on the other, the investor who buys because many issues seem to him to be selling below their value, or sells because he must realize cash, even at these depressed quotations. Of trading enthusiasm such as is wont to appear in a period of constructive development there has been very little. Even on the days when rallies were in progress the prevailing sentiment was a feeling of diffidence. The market would have been called stale had it not been enlivened by forced liquidation on the part of holders of stocks who are preparing for the heavy demands soon to be made upon them for financing the war. The country is at the moment less hopeful of an early termination of the great struggle which is impoverishing the world. The British and French are slowly blasting their way back over ground so easily captured by the Germans in the first rush of the Kaiser's trained millions; the Italians are gaining spectacular successes in the face of almost insuperable obstacles; but the moral effect of this progress has almost been offset by the outbreak of mutiny in Russia. Every day brings new warnings of the tremendous sacrifices which people of the United States must make before the war is over. It is becoming recognized that the stock market is not to enjoy, in the new stage of the war, a repetition of its exuberant rise which was witnessed when the influence of the purchases by the Allies first began to make themselves felt.

Stocks were irregular last week, but most of them lost still further ground, until many of the highest class—stocks which used to be referred to as safe investment issues—are selling as low or lower than they did in the panic of 1907, nor is the depression confined to shares which are essentially speculative in character. Standard railroad and other corporation bonds have declined relatively as far as stocks. In the week before last 73 new low records were made in the prices of bonds; last week 86 made new low records. A number of the higher-priced issues were picked out last week for selling on the theory that no issue is entitled to command much of a premium in the face of the Government's plan for scaling down final profits. People have lost confidence, especially in railroad securities, which they will be slow to regain. It is probably true that the market has gone too far in discounting the injurious effects of the new taxes, but it will wait to learn the actual bearing upon business of the new measures for producing revenue before a recovery can make much progress. Even with excess profits taxes running as high as 60 per cent. on profits 300 per cent. above the earnings on invested capital for the pre-war period, it is by no means certain that many well-managed companies will have to forego dividends when the payments are made, but the whole tax discussion has been so poorly directed that the real meaning of the new burdens has been lost sight of long since.

The Government is pouring money into the war at a rate no one could have foreseen just a few months ago. All experience, even that of Great Britain in the first year of the war, fell short of indicating what the United States must do to meet its own needs and a substantial part of the needs of its allies in the first year of this nation's participation. Figures as to the probable cost which were ridiculed as wildly extravagant just a few weeks ago are accepted in carefully prepared estimates today. Mr. Fitzgerald, in wisely recalling to the attention of Congress the need for closer scrutiny to lessen unnecessary extravagances, asserts that expenditures already contemplated for this year will run to eighteen and a quarter billion dollars without allowing for any unexpected needs. The total receipts from ordinary sources are but $1,333,000,000. The total money in sight through the issuance of all the new bonds for which authorization has been asked, and through the collection of new taxes, is $2,600,000,000 less than it is proposed to spend. It is no wonder that the financial district has been struck by the new conception of governmental costs given official sanction by the Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations. It is evident that banks must put aside all other undertakings to insure the success of the war loan. It is expected that Secretary McAdoo will shortly announce an offering of $3,000,000,000 of 4 per cent. bonds. These bonds must be taken at a time when the small investor is seriously troubled to know how he is to meet his actual living costs, while the wealthy class faces what amounts to conscription of a very large percentage of their income. With such a problem on their hands, the banks are not likely to encourage speculation. Of course the bond sale will resolve itself largely into an exchange of credit, in the last analysis the net result being the payment for services and materials with evidences of debt. With the co-operation of the Federal Reserve system and the prompt redepositing of funds in the banks from which they are drawn out to pay for bonds, the dislocation of the money market should be temporary, but it is obvious that there cannot be diverted any considerable amount of money for the purpose of encouraging an active stock market.

The wisdom of making the new income and so-called war profits taxes bear as lightly as is consistent with the need for raising additional revenue is manifest. Capital is easily frightened, and it is highly desirable that it should be encouraged to go into productive pursuits in order that the country may provide all of the foodstuffs, clothing, transportation, and munitions that are demanded for the successful prosecution of the war. The measure that came to the House carried taxes which many well-informed students of finance consider unfairly oppressive. The war profits tax is made a tax on ordinary profits in instances where invested capital on which the pre-war exemption is based does not measure up to the value of the assets, including good-will among the latter. It would seem a fairer method to first establish actual pre-war earnings as a basis for exemption, and then to lay a very heavy tax upon current profits in excess of those of the pre-war period. Some of the inequalities in the bill will undoubtedly be ironed out before it is accepted, but the new realization of the extent to which money must be provided this year does away with the hope that reductions in the total amount to be provided through new taxes can be brought about.

RUSSIAN BONDS RISE.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—Stocks are dominated by the Russian situation, its dramatic developments keeping the markets expectant and sensitive. The Swedish disclosures also have made their influence felt. Depression ruled in the early days of the week, but prices rallied in the final session, when it became evident that civil war had been averted by the Russian Government. Russian bonds exhibited wide fluctuations, closing at the highest level, the 5 per cent. issues touching 65 and 70 at the top. Mining and oil shares followed a similar course. Rubles varied sensationally, business being reported in which 440 were sold for £10 Wednesday and no more than 265 yesterday, which was the lowest level of the week. Swedish Government loans rallied after preliminary weakness. Chinese bonds were favored, owing to China's participation in the war and to the rise of silver, which reached 51 under the influence of the continued famine in supplies.

British Government securities were stationary, and railway markets were mostly reactionary, especially Argentine rails, which were affected by the reported refusal of the Government to allow increased rates asked by the companies, as well as poor traffic and labor troubles. Speculative activities were chiefly concentrated on Java rubber shares, which were strongly favored all week, finishing near the top. Oil shares were popular, with Rumanian Consolidated better.

Discount business was small, with further placing of Russian and Italian credit bills the chief incident. No new long-dated war loan is expected in the near future, but some modification of exchequer bond terms may be made shortly. Demand for the existing 5 per cent. issue continues very moderate, and the floating debt from Treasury bills is mounting rapidly. The total last Saturday was £870,749,000. The weekly treasury returns showed £16,894,120 provided to date by the Government for market support of the war loan, which, in terms of the prospectus, is equal to approximately the full amount of one-eighth of one per cent. per month on the total issue. The ninepenny fourpound loaf subsidized by the Government will be put on sale Monday.

ACTIVE TRADING IN PARIS.

Russian Shares Improve — Copper Groups Also Stronger.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 16.—Prices on the Bourse were irregular during the week, certain groups of stocks maintaining firmness while others were weak in sympathy with the further fall of Russian securities, coupled with internal political difficulties in the new republic. The markets of Thursday and Friday were more animated than on preceding days after the formation of the new Cabinet was completed and some improvement occurred in Russian bank and industrial shares. Quotations, in the main, closed steady. The war loan was quoted at 88.10 and rentes at 62.30.

The real features of trading were supplied by the copper stocks, De Beers, the shipping group, Egyptian sugar issues and rubber issues, and more particularly by Transatlantique and Messageries Maritimes, which displayed considerable strength. Nitrate shares improved on reports of greater production and increased shipments from the Chilean mines to the United States.

The Bank of France's gold holdings at the end of the week amounted to 3,278,606,651 francs; the bank's war advances increased 40,000,000 francs. The sterling rate was 27.55 and dollars were quoted at 5.78, with an easing tendency in evidence as the week closed.

OPEN LOAN CAMPAIGN AMONG FOREIGN BORN

225 SOCIETIES TO AID HERE

Co-operation of 85,000 Organizations and Clubs Will Be Sought Throughout the Nation.

Eighty-five thousand organizations, societies, and clubs in the United States whose members were born in foreign countries or are of foreign extraction are to be requested to join in a campaign in behalf of the second Liberty Loan, started in this city yesterday by Benjamin Strong, Jr., Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank for the New York district and representatives of the Liberty Loan Committee.

The campaign was launched at the Broadway Central Hotel, the headquarters of many of the organizations and labor unions which will be asked to cooperate. It was attended by more than fifty delegates of some of these organizations, who were told by Mr. Strong that $3,000,000,000 probably would be required for the next loan. The delegates formed the Division of Foreign Language Organizations of the Liberty Loan Committee for the Second Federal Reserve District, with Joseph Hartigan, ex-Commissioner of Weights and Measures, as Chairman, and headquarters were established at 120 Broadway.

Hans Rieg, Chief of the Foreign Language Division of the Bureau of Publicity of the Liberty Loan Committee, returned to Washington after addressing the meeting, and after conferring with Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo will start at once on a tour of all the large cities in the United States, where divisions similar to that in New York will be formed.

Invitations to yesterday's meeting had been sent to every foreign language organization in the city, and Mr. Hartigan, in announcing the responses, asserted that 225 had promised to cooperate. Of these, he said, twenty were German organizations, three Austrian, and one Turkish. Eighty organizations made up of Germans or persons of German birth had been asked to join the campaign, but Mr. Hartigan explained the failure of some of these to reply by stating that they had been dissolved following the entrance of the United States into the war.

Mr. Hartigan was authorized to appoint committees for an immediate introduction of the campaign in the Second Federal Reserve District, which, in addition to New York, includes part of Connecticut and all of New Jersey. Resolutions outlining the nature of the organization were adopted.

Governor Strong expressed confidence in his address to the representatives that the foreign-born citizens of the nation would be loyal to the country of their adoption, asserting that in a conversation recently with the Captain of one of the companies of Yaphanks made up almost entirely of men drafted from the east side he had been told that these men were displaying a splendid spirit of loyalty.

"Our Government proposed to ask the people of the country to lend it thousands of millions of dollars, and it will get it," he said. "By subscribing to the loan the citizens of foreign birth will be brought into immediate contact with the representatives of the Government and will learn to trust the Government. In their home countries these people have been used to dealing with such representatives, but this has not been the case in the United States in the past, because here we have no such Government-controlled banking institutions as in France."

Mr. Rieg, who is of German birth, told the representatives at the meeting that they must not sacrifice the sacred heritage of freedom conferred upon them by the pioneers of the nation.

"We were forced into the war, not merely to help the Allies, by the insults, the indignities, the injuries which a war crazed military autocracy had most persistently heaped upon us," he said. "We were forced into it because citizens of our country, peaceable women and innocent children, were ruthlessly murdered and recklessly sent to the bottom of the high seas. We were forced into it because through spies and criminal intrigues within our own lands and neighbor States, the very foundations of our great commonwealth were so threatened as to endanger our national unity, our peace within and without, our industries and our commerce.

"This is my war, your war, the war of everybody within the land who looks with pride upon its history, written by heroic citizens, who accents with gratitude the inheritance which they have bequeathed to us, who is resolved to preserve this inheritance unimpaired and to pass it on to his descendants, enlarged and enriched."

Mr. Rieg outlined what was to be done to carry on the campaign among the organizations of foreign-born citizens. He said it only could be a success by being nationally organized by each of the associations. To this end he advised that meetings of each of these organizations, or their executives, be called at once to form Liberty Loan committees.

Among the other nationalities represented at the meeting were Italians, Bohemians, Swiss, French, Scotch, and Jews.

Mr. Hartigan announced that the next meeting of the Division of Foreign Language Organizations probably would be held at 120 Broadway on next Thursday or Friday. By that time, he said, many of the local organizations would have held their meetings and have selected the committees to prosecute the campaign.

FOR NATIONAL MONEY BOARD

C. H. Sabin Urges One to Pass on Needs of Government.

As there is a Priority Board to pass on the filling of Government, semi-public and private commercial needs from the industrial resources of the country, Charles H. Sabin, President of the Guaranty Trust Company, believes that there should be established a Financial Priority Board to pass on the filling of money needs of the Government in relation to individuals, corporations, States and municipalities.

In a statement he issued yesterday Mr. Sabin suggested the formation of such a board in time to handle the situation when subscriptions shall be asked by the Government for the second Liberty Loan. Many of the financial offerings of corporations and municipal government may pay 5 and 6 per cent., whereas the first Liberty Loan paid 3½ per cent. and the second will probably pay not more than 4 per cent. Mr. Sabin believes that nothing should stand in the way of the Government's getting what money it needs, and getting it first. He would not leave even the temptation to financiers and investors to make an extra profit by placing their available funds somewhere else. At the same time, he pointed out, there are certain industrial needs that must be taken care of if the Government is to play the most efficient rôle in the war. He thought a central board to pass on financial offerings was the solution of the problem.

"There is one phase of Government financing to meet the needs of the war which must not be ignored if it is to be attended with the largest possible measure of success," he said, "and that is the desirable elimination of competition. To meet the pressing needs of the war the Government should have right of way in its demands for labor, capital, and materials; and everything possible which means competition with these demands should be eliminated, or at least postponed.

"The country's business is war, and every proposition should be measured by the standard of war's necessities. Only as its successful prosecution is furthered can any venture be justified. It may even be necessary to suggest the formation of a Government board to pass on the priority of public financial offerings, as is now being done in the field of transportation and production. In order to perform our successful part in the war there must be continuous new financing in transportation and industrial fields to enable these important military aids to render the service demanded of them. The investment market should be kept open to their requirements as far as possible."

Mr. Sabin added a plea for increased saving and consequent increased ability of the people for investment in Government war bonds.

MARKHAM OPPOSES STATE-OWNED ROADS

SAYS WAR UPHOLDS VIEWS

Charles H. Markham, President of the Illinois Central Railroad, does not agree with President E. P. Ripley of the Santa Fé that Government ownership of the railroads is fast approaching in the United States. Mr. Markham believes that the work of the Railroads' War Board in operating the carriers of the country as a unit in the war shows that it is not necessary to have Government operation to secure a maximum of efficiency in time of need. He further argues that the war will place such financial burdens upon the Government that it cannot afford the cost of buying the roads.

In a letter to The Railway Age Gazette Mr. Markham says:

"I have read recently a newspaper interview given by President E. P. Ripley of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé, in which he expresses the opinion that Government ownership of railways in the United States is not only a possibility, but a high probability. He has expressed his opinion before.

"Mr. Ripley occupies deservedly a very prominent place among the railway executives of this country. Therefore, if his utterances on this subject are allowed to pass without challenge from railway sources, they may be accepted by the public as expressing the views of railway executives. I do not think most railway executives agree with him on this matter. Certainly I do not. On the contrary, I think we are moving away from Government ownership, and that recent developments, especially since the United States entered the war, have made its adoption less probable. Among my reasons for thinking this are the following:

"First, it has been contended by advocates of Government ownership that the Government could raise enough capital to acquire the railways at 3 per cent., or even less, and that, therefore, a large saving could be made by substituting the credit of the Government, as the owner of the railways, for that of the various companies. Experience during the present war has answered this argument. Our Government is paying 3½ per cent. on the Liberty Loan bonds, which are tax free, and yet they are selling at slightly below par. It is understood that it will pay 4 per cent. on the next large issue of bonds. The leading Governments of Europe are paying 6 per cent. and even more. Experience indicates that, conditions as to taxation and other matters being the same, the difference in the rate of interest on capital which a strong Government and a strong railroad have to pay is not more than one-half of 1 per cent.

"Second, it has been argued that the consolidation of the railways under Government ownership would make it possible to effect large economies. One reason why our railways have not in the past effected all the economies possible has been that the Government, through the Sherman Anti-Trust law and the anti-pooling section of the Act to Regulate Commerce, has prohibited them from curtailing wasteful competition. When we entered the war the prohibition against concerted action and unified operation ceased to be enforced and with the helpful co-operation of shippers the managements of the railways have since then made increases in efficiency that are remarkable. In 1916 they handled much more freight with each mile of line, each car and each locomotive than ever before; but they are at present far exceeding the record made in 1916.

"Third, it was formerly argued that the railways ought to be acquired by the Government so that in case of war they could be used with the greatest effectiveness for national defense. The course followed by the railway managements, since the United States entered the present war, has resulted in our railways being made a more potent instrumentality of national defense than they probably would be if owned by the Government.

"Fourth, when we entered the war the national debt was only about one billion dollars. It will soon be many billions. The railways represent an investment of approximately twenty billion dollars. The proposition that the Government should acquire the railways when its debt was so small was very different from the proposition that it should add an indebtedness representing the cost of acquiring the railways to the huge debt that will result from the war.

"Recognition of the fact, that from the standpoint of the public, Government ownership is undesirable will tend to cause the public to make regulation more reasonable and fair, and therefore to make Government ownership more and more improbable."

Must Fight One's Own Battles.

In the last analysis every individual must fight his own moral battles and when a conscientious man fights against fearful odds to cut down on his smoking and begins to leave little wads of used but still serviceable chewing gum around on newel-post, davenport and porch swing he receives little encouragement in his struggle to lead a better life from the partner of his joys, if any, and sorrows.—Ohio State Journal.

Revised Health Hint.

"Take a walk every morning after breakfast. It is better for you than any medicine a chemist can compound. Take your health walk and you live in a new world." So says an enthusiastic editor. To which may be added: "Take your breakfast so early that your walk won't catch you in the sunshine that wilts your collar and reduces your underwear to pulp."—Ohio State Journal.

BRICK HELD UP BY WAGE PARLEY.

USING WINTER STOCK NOW

Attempt to Unionize Boatmen Under Present Conditions May Stir Builders to Act.

Pending the outcome of a wage parley that threatens to assume the proportions of a lockout between the Hudson River brick manufacturers and the Captains of the brick barges supplying this market with common building brick, dealers in this city and vicinity have been forced within the last few days to draw heavily upon reserve stocks set aside for Winter requirements, says The Dow Service Daily Building Reports today.

This latest turn in Eastern building material events accentuates the need for the conference scheduled for 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon in the office of Borough President Marcus M. Marks in the Municipal Building when the problems arising from the war will be freely and constructively discussed by financiers led by J. E. R. Carpenter, President of the Investing Builders' Association, building supply men, and building material manufacturers. The meeting has been arranged purposely so that just such conditions as these can have concerted attention.

When conditions hampering supply and delaying assemblage in war munitions occur, the powers of the Government are set at work to find a solution which is immediately forthcoming. Utilizing materials not being war munitions in a direct sense, it has become necessary to find means of combating the factors seeking to make building construction even higher than now.

It is necessary to hark back to the early nineties to recall the seriousness of a lockout in the brick manufacturing industry. Every building operation in the whole city came to a standstill because brick was unprocurable. Today such a condition confronts the distributer.

The price of Hudson common brick, wholesale, in New York today is $8.25, with poor grades going out below $8. This means that the manufacturers, according to brick authorities, sell their product at a loss. In the belief that wholesale prices would go higher, many dealers have been stacking this commodity in their yards.

A few days ago an unsigned circular was sent to brick manufacturers stating that a wage scale considerably higher than that now ruling and terms of labor conditions said to be wholly impracticable was sent out from a meeting of brick barge Captains in this city. It was said that if the terms of wages and conditions were accepted the wholesale price of common brick in this market, with the proposed new towage rates, would make the net price of this basic building commodity in the New York wholesale market about $8.75. If the manufacturers' profit, cartage, haulage and the usual percentage allowed to distributers were to be added to this, the cost of laying a thousand Hudson River common brick in an ordinary wall would be nearer $28 than $20, as at present.

This condition goes to prove the rule that the cost of building materials under war conditions is toward ascending levels unless construction can be given greater freedom before Winter sets in. Any curtailment of brick supplies will cause a decided swing toward Portland cement, the latter selling in 4,000-barrel lots alongside of dock, New York, to dealers today at $2.12 is on the verge of another advance due to recent advances in the price of cotton bags to $200 a thousand from $172.

This industry shows a production for August in the Eastern mills of 100,000 barrels over the production in the same mills August a year ago, and shipments from the same section in the first eight months of this year are 1,000,000 barrels in excess of that for the same period last year. Shipments from the mills of the entire country total 2,500,000 over the first eight months for 1916.

This industry is shown to stand at the top for loading cars to 110 per cent. of marked capacity, indicating that this commodity is going out in abnormal volume for the total amount of construction current, the only explanation for this condition being heavy loading by dealers in anticipation of heavy building orders later.

Building material distributers, while conceding that the top level of building material prices has been reached for commodities based upon laws of demand and supply, recognize that economic laws are beginning to enter into the material market, that their only corrective in actual and immediate requisition. Winter carrying charges will soon be applied to such items as common brick, Portland cement, calcined goods. In current commodities like sand, gravel crushed stone, glass, and similar products, the cost of fuel either for manufacture, mining, or transportation will be figured into market lists. In lumber, the scarcity of cars and ships is going to be increasingly apparent.

If an inquiry can be developed between now and the middle of December to permit some of these added costs to be distributed over many orders instead of a few, the cost to individual consumers will be bearable because dealers can better gauge the Winter and early Spring requirements.

Current quotations show little or no change. There is a freer buying movement for lumber which, however, cannot be met on account of slow deliveries from mill base to dealers. Dealers, as a rule, are well supplied, but on a cramped basis. Speculative buying is discouraged because most mills will sell to customers only on normal requirements. The fuel problem promises to be the cause of a further advance in the price of window plate glass unless a change in the building situation takes place. Structural steel is still in an unsettled state, with some independent buying.

LITTLETON SEES BIG REVOLT ON MURPHY

AIMS TO END BOSS RULE

Asserts That Greatest Fight Organization Ever Faced Will Develop In Few Weeks.

The City Democracy, the organization of independent Democrats which plans to oust Charles F. Murphy as leader of Tammany Hall, and of which Martin W. Littleton is chairman, intends to start a vigorous campaign after the primaries on Wednesday to bring about more revolts within the Tammany organization, it was announced yesterday at the organization's headquarters, 30 East Forty-second Street. Mr. Littleton prophesied that the desertions from Tammany within the next few weeks will astonish the city. The biggest revolt that Tammany has ever faced is under way, he said, and will continue even beyond the election in November. "A gigantic revolt unlike anything yet seen in the political history of New York is at hand," said Mr. Littleton. "The die has been cast. The end of the Tammany slate-makers is at hand. In July we said: 'We never realized how eager the young Democrats of New York City are to join in an earnest Democratic movement which aims to give good government to the city and to make the actions and the aspirations of the Democratic Party in New York City ring true with the Democratic Party in the nation. For plainly obvious reasons, as everybody knows, it is not wise to give Tammany the details of its losses to date. We are saying little but we are sawing wood, and being woodsmen, we are doing a good job.

"During the last week you have seen the index of the times, the people liberating themselves. Every day brought a fresh revolt. Right in the heart of the Murphy strongholds on the east side the blow for representative party government has been strongest. These Democrats, leading the way from dark chamber boss rule, are old Tammany Senators, Assemblymen, leaders, captains, workers—men who have stood behind Tammany's guns all their lives. From the citadel of the Sullivans to the ballwick of Hayes, the Fourth, the Sixth, the Eighth, the Tenth, Murphy's own Twefth, and the Eighteenth—all have broken, almost within a week, and joined hands with the City Democracy in its fight for decency in political party life. This will be continued on the other side of the city. It has started in the Twenty-third at the top of Manhattan Island, and it will work down to the Battery.

"But the fight has just begun. In the nation and in our State Democrats are watching with delight and long-cherished hopes this revolution against the clenched fist and the iron heel of personal rule. They long for the end of one-man domination of the Democratic Party in the world's leading city. They know that the good Democrats of New York, in patience and in grief, have borne the humiliations and disappointments of private 'control' until forbearance has long ceased to be a virtue.

"Make no mistake; this revolt is city-wide. What you have witnessed will be demonstrated from the furthermost limits of Kings County to the top of the Bronx. In every Assembly District in the greater city the City Democracy, waging an honest fight in the open, has organizations in the making of practical and representative Democrats who have pledged themselves to at last turn out Murphy and his coterie by re-electing the ticket headed by Mayor Mitchel. This City Democracy is a new party. It has started right. It is building from the bottom up. It means a new deal to every Democrat in New York. It means a fair chance for every young Democrat in New York. It means the restoration of the Democracy of New York City to its proper place in the councils of the Democrats of the State and of the nation—a place of importance and of respect, which it is justly entitled to hold and which it never has had under Murphy's rule.

"The City Democracy is here to stay. It believes precisely what Democrats all over the United States have often said, that there are tens of thousands of able, practical, well trained men in Tammany Hall who still welcome an opportunity to have some place to go in politics. These men have remained, dissatisfied and unhappy, in Tammany Hall because there was no place to turn but to the Republican Party. These Democrats are coming into our organization in great numbers every day. They are rolling up a great army to win a triumph this Fall and will emphasize the Old World's struggle to establish representative government by all the people and for all the people, from whom it springs."

The Washington Heights Democratic Club broke away from the Tammany organization yesterday and went over to the City Democracy. The organization is in the Twenty-third Assembly District, and the members are led by Bernard Keleher, a retired Police Captain, who started a fight in the primaries to take the leadership from John Mara, the present Tammany leader. Keleher's petition was thrown out by the courts, and yesterday he decided to come out for Mayor Mitchel and the Fusion ticket.

Dr. S. Edward Young, in the Bedford Presbyterian Church, Nostrand Avenue and Dean Street, Brooklyn, made an attack yesterday upon Tammany Hall.

"Under cover of the war," said Dr. Young, "Tammany plans to slip back into power in New York City and will succeed if those who oppose it do not immediately sense the peril and contend against it to the uttermost until election day. Of course, the present inter-partisan administration has not satisfied everybody in its handling of every local problem. It has, however, been absolutely honest and eminently courageous."

SAYS GARY PLAN WILL AID US

H. E. Miles of National Defense Council Praises Board of Education.

H. E. Miles of Racine, Wis., Chairman of the Section on Industrial Training for the War Emergency of the Advisory Commission of the Council of National Defense, issued a statement yesterday, through the Public Welfare Committee, favoring the vocational training system in the public schools, as carried out in the Gary plan. In introducing the system here, Mr. Miles said the city had taken a step in the right direction.

"When former President Churchill of the Board of Education led in this idea he performed a great service," Mr. Miles said, "and when President Willcox carried the work on he did also. They will smart and suffer under criticism, but the history of the world shows that progress is measured by the mistakes of martyrs.

"I am not surprised to learn that there has been criticism of the vocational and so-called Gary plan in New York. On the contrary, I would be surprised if there was none. It will take New York ten years to perfect and get results from the plan as far as it is in operation now, and then it will not be perfect as New York at that time will demand it shall be.

"The idea of vocational training in the schools is merely the working of a social and economic development and is not a matter for the credit of any individual group. It will establish a national efficiency on broader lines than have ever been dreamed of by having the growing generation trained to the mastery of successive tasks, through competent training in some one, and in that way the individual will lift himself to a better place, and provide a larger and finer national life.

"No one with the least intelligence will conceive that training in the humbler occupations shall have any tendency to keep a person in those occupations, but to make a boy or girl master of some one thing gives him or her a distinct advantage in the battle of life."

Mr. Miles is a former President of the Wisconsin State Board of Industrial Education, a former Chairman of the Committee on Vocational Education of the Chamber of Commerce, U. S. A., and is Chairman of the Committee on Industrial Education of the National Association of Manufacturers.

PUBLISHERS OPPOSE ADDED POSTAL RATES

FIND BURDENS TOO HEAVY

Fear That Many Newspapers Will Be Forced Out of Business by Proposed Increase.

Herbert L. Bridgman, Chairman of the Publishing Association of New York City, composed of the daily newspapers of New York, Brooklyn, and Jersey City, and ex-President of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, said yesterday: "In view of the reported effort to restore in the pending Revenue bill a provision for increased taxation on the transportation of daily newspapers through the mails, it is proper to say that our association as well as the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, are on record as opposed to any additional tax.

"Our association, in a series of resolutions, protested against increase in taxation on the ground that the great increase in the cost of all materials which enter into the manufacture of newspapers has seriously affected the taxpaying ability of the newspaper industry; that the newspaper press is one of the most important and powerful weapons of the Government in the present war, and its strength should not be reduced and its influence weakened by oppressive and discriminatory taxes. As for the postal rates, they have been based, for generations, upon the public policy that the diffusion of knowledge and information in newspapers and periodicals was necessary to the unity and welfare of the nation, and our resolutions stated that they should therefore be encouraged by moderate postage rates.

"It has never been the policy of the Government to derive revenue from the Postal Service. It was never even attempted during the civil war. It has been found by experience that a decrease of postal rates increase the revenue of the Post Office Department and general business throughout the country.

"The adoption of the zone system would operate as a stimulant in the promotion of sectionalism. The effect would be the creation of artificial areas outside which publications would have little circulation. A few Southern newspapers may advocate the zone system because they are not affected by its provisions. Their circulation does not extend beyond the 300-mile limit. Many New York publications circulate widely in the West, and the interchange of ideas has a broadening effect upon the people of both sections. The zone system would restrict and largely cut off outlying subscribers through the increase in the subscription rates which would be made upon publications to meet the additional cost of postage.

"The overwhelming opinion of newspapers throughout the country is opposed to the imposition of this additional postage. It would be an unjust burden which the majority of them would find it impossible to bear.

"The additional tax proposed, while particularly hard on big newspapers, cuts at the very vitals of the thousands of small newspapers published throughout the country. If you double the postage of the small country weeklies and dailies you will drive them out of existence. The proposed rate is confiscatory, destructive, unfair, and un-American."

RUSH ASKS FOR SUPPORT.

Thomas E. Rush, Surveyor of the Port, who is making a contest in the Democratic primaries for the nomination for Supreme Court Justice against John V. McAvoy, the Tammany candidate, sent out yesterday a personal appeal for support to thousands of enrolled Democrats all over the city. After reciting his services as a leader of the regular Democratic organization of the Twenty-ninth Assembly District and a member of the Executive Committee of Tammany Hall, Mr. Rush said:

"In 1914 the Legislature of this State, then in Democratic control, enacted, in what must be assumed to have been good faith, the direct primary law. But the present leadership of Tammany Hall has been able to make a mockery of and defeat every purpose of the statute because great numbers of Democrats either stay away wholly from the primaries or fail to exercise any discretion in selecting candidates. I can be beaten for the nomination of Supreme Court Justice in the Democratic primaries on Wednesday only in the event, I am convinced, that the Democratic voters are either satisfied with the present undemocratic leadership of the party in this city or are so indifferent to the whole subject as to amount to the same thing."

CONNOLLY FORCES HOPEFUL

Say Borough President's Nomination Is Assured.

Although the opposition to Maurice E. Connolly for the Democratic nomination for Borough President in Queens will not result in the overthrowing of the organization headed by Arthur E. Keating, there will be lively times in some of the election districts, especially the Ridgewood one, where Mr. Martin Mager, who is striving to wrest the nomination from Borough President Connolly, lives.

The Mager faction is placing considerable reliance on the fact that for the first time in a national election in many years Queens was placed in the Republican column for President last November. The Mager adherents point to this as an indication of the strong German-American vote in the county and declare that it will again be manifested this year in the contest between Connolly and Mager.

Mager's friends have apparently been unsuccessful in cementing the German-American vote against Mr. Connolly. At a meeting in College Point, one of the German-American strongholds in the Borough, the Borough President had an enthusiastic greeting and his friends predicted that he will carry that district by a large majority.

URGE BIG FUSION VOTE.

Thousands of circular letters written by Charles E. Hughes, Governor Whitman, and Senator Calder in support of Mayor Mitchel and other Fusion candidates will be mailed to voters today, urging them to vote in the primaries on Wednesday. One letter is signed by the five Republican County Chairmen, by Elihu Root, Mr. Hughes, Governor Whitman, Frederick C. Tanner, Eugene M. Travis, George W. Wickersham, Senator Calder, and about fifty other Republican leaders. It is asserted that "Republicans can serve their party and the city in no more effective way than by giving at the primaries as large a vote as possible for Mitchel and his associates, be they Republican, Democrat, or independent."

In a separate letter Mr. Hughes says: "The entire strength of the Republican Party should be cast in favor of Fusion and of the Fusion ticket. The Republican Party has greatly gained in deserved confidence and esteem by the support which it has given to Fusion in the past and by the character of City Government which past Fusion has already accomplished. The welfare of the party as well as the welfare of the city is directly involved in the support of the Fusion ticket this Fall."

"The question now is whether the present City Government shall be continued in offfce or the City Hall shall be taken over by Tammany Hall," wrote Governor Whitman. "The interests of Greater New York as well as the interests of the Republican Party demand that Tammany be defeated."

"Mayor Mitchel * * * and the other Fusion candidates * * * have demonstrated their ability to administer the affairs of the city in such a way as to elicit the unqualified enthusiasm of business men and to attract national attention to the character of their work," wrote Senator Calder. "New York City to-day the best governed large city in the United States."

WARNS OF BALLOT FRAUDS.

Honest Ballot Association Promises to Prosecute All Offenders.

Reports of expected fraud in Wednesday's primaries stirred up the Honest Ballot Association yesterday, and its Secretary, George W. Kessler, issued a warning to election officers and political workers to be on the watch.

"We have heard from reliable sources that there is a bipartisan plan afoot to perpetrate primary frauds in certain districts of the city where anti-organization candidates are running for office," said Mr. Kessler. "I desire to remind election officers that when similar bipartisan election crimes were perpetrated at the special election which decided in favor of holding a constitutional convention, the Honest Ballot Association detected these crimes, and obtained the prompt conviction of twenty-two election officers. I warn election officers and others that if primary frauds come to the attention of the Honest Ballot Association, prompt and vigorous measures will be taken to send the guilty persons to the penitentiary."

Your Railroad Stands Back of Your Bank-book and Insurance Policy

Four Billion Dollars ($4,000,000,000) of the public's money is invested by banks, trust companies and insurance companies in railroad securities.

The interest you get on your savings and the security of your insurance and trust funds are dependent, in good part, on the stability and prosperity of the railroads.

The New York Central Lines

in common with other railroads must meet constantly increasing wages, taxes and cost of equipment and supplies.

Hundreds of millions of dollars must be spent by the New York Central Lines in the next few years for improvements, extensions and equipment to keep pace with the growing demands for service and to maintain their earning power.

The public, from whose capital savings the funds must come, should see to it that rates and governmental regulation are such as to assure a reasonable return on their investment and also enable the railroads to provide efficient service for the growing industries of the nation.
